A FAREWELL

A large gathering of church people and friends gathered Tuesday evening at the Christian church to bid farewell to their present minister, Rev. Beche, who goes into other work in different parts of the state. This work is a series of lectures on modern reforms, under a state organization.

There was no set program for the evening but refreshments, visiting, music and speeches entertained the guests until 11 o'clock.

Everyone present hated for the time to come when they would have to say good-bye to their great benefactor and friend.

They had begun to realize what a valuable character they were losing out of their own and church life—A wise counselor, a great confidant, a comforter in time of trouble, a burden lifter, sympathetic friend and a fit example of honest living, set before them daily.

A man of keen intellect and much ability along many lines other than preaching. It is inconceivable that anyone should consider it superfluous and even slightly comic, for a minister to know a great deal; to know the best in every line, to know in fact, as much as possible. He is of the strong heroic type of genius that turns its dreams into facts, its shots into deeds.

He makes light of favors while he does them, and seems to be receiving when he is conferring. He never speaks of himself except when compelled, never defends himself by a mere retort. He is never mean or little in his disputes, never takes unfair advantage. He has too much good sense to be affronted at insults and is too well employed to remember injuries. He may be right or wrong in his opinions, but he is too clear headed to be unjust; he is as simple as he is forcible, and as brief as he is decisive.

Nowhere shall we find greater candor, consideration, indulgence; he throws himself into the minds of his opponents; he accounts for their mistakes. He knows the weakness of human reason as well as its strength and its limits.

From a long-sighted prudence he observes the maxim of the ancient sage, that we should ever conduct our selves toward our enemy as if he were one day to be our friend.

We shall all miss this man from our midst.

BASE BALL

A double header ball game at Red Cloud, Sunday afternoon, drew a large crowd from Lebanon. The first game between Red Cloud and Inavale, went to Red Cloud by the one sided score of 12 to 3. But it was different when the team from Cora, Kansas, appeared on the diamond, opposing the Red Cloud boys, as they were no time in reach of winning the game. The Cora lads made three runs of Red Cloud's supposed league pitcher, Martin, which was more runs than Red Cloud got off of Clare Sraider's offering in nine innings, the final score being 8 to 2 in favor of Cora. Red Cloud might come over into Kansas and get a few more ball players to strengthen their team considerably, with the three Lebanon men that are now in their regular lineup.—Lebanon Times.

We have added another feature to this paper consisting of two columns of American Legion news which will appear each week. The first installment of the latest creations in furniture.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Douglas, until recently employed as night clerks at the Hatfield restaurant, resigned their position and left the first of the week for Forest City, Missouri, at which place they expect to make their home.

A. H. Carpenter went to Selden, Kas., this morning where he will look after the harvesting of his beautiful small grain crop. He has purchased a late model threshing machine which cuts and threshes the grain as it moves and he is anxious to see it work.

That constant effort and strict attention to one's duties or studies pays one hundred percent dividends has been demonstrated throughout the world for ages. This fact was again brought to our mind, one day this week, when we overheard a portion of a conversation between two of our citizens. We verified these remarks by interviewing one who was in a position to know the facts in the matter. The party in question, Miss Verna Trinc, recently placed our school in the high honor ranks when she captured a prize for the school in the county essay contest. She now claims the honor of holding the highest number of credits in our high school—the number being fifty-four.

Every Man Will Have One!

Sedentary workers—those who sit at their work—especially might note that if they have the habit of crossing their legs, then can't break themselves of it, they should have a clean duster, or a remnant of soft cloth, and lay it on the under leg. That at once stops the shine and wear that follows "crossing." And, as a duster is not always at hand, and "crossing" is always a temptation, best to cut the crossing habit clean out. A real and most saving economy.—London Answers.

Gold Didn't Materialize.

A Chicago inventor named Brice, in 1897, was seeking a patent on a process for making gold from a mixture of antimony, iron and sulphur. The patent office would not grant it without proof that the idea had merit, and the then secretary of the treasury was persuaded to direct the mint bureau to try the thing out. There must have been something wrong about the methods of the treasury laboratory, for not a particle of gold or silver was obtained.

How to Preserve Blooms.

It is said that a bloom may be preserved in its natural color by burying it in a box of clean, dry sand, where it must be left for ten days. After this treatment the flower is a thing of permanence.

BIG XYLOPHONE BUILT FOR LITTLE COMPANY

When a small company like the Lyceum Arts Trio has a great big xylophone built especially for them it generally is a sign that there is something more than talk behind that company. That is what happened in the case of the Lyceum Arts Trio, which is to be one of the attractions on our Chautauqua this summer.

Mary Madge Vest, the costume impersonator of the trio, is sometimes called the Elsie Janis of the Chautauqua on account of her wonderful characterizations. She is also an accomplished musician.

 Miss Beverly Buck, violinist, xylophonist, pianist and mezzo soprano, adds just that touch of instrumental variety needed in such a company.
 The lyric soprano of the trio is considered a "find" by the one who put her in the company. Her voice is high, clear, broadly sympathetic and appealing. In addition she is an accomplished pianist and accompanist.
