

An Important Letter

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for one year. Before I started to take it every month I was in bed three to four days under a doctor's care. I was only 27 years old but the doctors said I would have to have an operation before I could be well. I was so tired all the time and my nerves seemed to be all gone. I could not sleep at night and had headache all the time. I quit the doctors and started to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I took it four times a day, and in three months I did not have to go to bed, did not need a doctor. I gained so much in the three months that my husband said 'You take that medicine for a year,' and I did so. Now I do all my housework and have never had a headache since. I sleep good, eat good, and feel good, my nerves are fine. It has been twenty-one months since I have taken the 'Prescription' and I have not had any return of the trouble so far. I recommend the 'Favorite Prescription' to every suffering sister."—MRS. NOBLE LOCKHART, 1111 I Ave. East.

CHINA TAKES UP WALNUT GROWING

Its Cultivation and Sale the Main Support of Hundreds of Villages.

$1,887,491 WORTH SENT HERE

George E. Young of Shanghai Says the Chinese Will Soon Be Competitors in Textiles—Take Interest in Their Lands.

New York.—Following the importation of walnuts to China by the early missionaries the Chinese developed this industry so carefully that it has now reached tremendous proportions, according to George E. Young of Shanghai, China, who has been in the Orient ten years. Mr. Young said that the Chinese are growing more and more interested in their lands and considerable development will be seen during the next few years.

"The cultivation and sale of the walnut, which was first brought to China by the American missionaries, now supports hundreds of Chinese villages," said Mr. Young. "The methods of preparing the nuts for market are most primitive, but as labor is cheap they are able to send them to this country and compete favorably with the domestic market. For the American market they use only the highest grade nuts. They select the bright colored and shiny nuts and they are bleached, sorted and packed according to grade. Those of specked and inferior shells are cracked and the meat is packed for confectionery purposes. This cracking is now done by hand because the only walnut cracking machine is owned and operated with greatest secrecy by walnut growers in this country.

Chinese Waste Nothing.
"The economical bent of the Chinese is given full play in the walnut growing industry. They utilize every particle of the product. When the crop is gathered the husks are beaten off the nuts and are buried in wet earth to rot for fertilizer. The nuts are delivered to the ports through various agencies, the original grower getting an insignificant part of the price realized for them.

"The Manchurian walnut has a harder shell than the product of this country. The shells of the inferior appearing walnuts, which are cracked before shipment, are used for fuel, and on account of the large proportion of oil they contain they make an excellent fuel. The Manchurian walnut commands a special advantage in the confectionery making trade because of superior flavor and texture of the meat.

"This spring the price quoted to American importers for delivery at San Francisco was as high as 20 to 32 cents, including cost, insurance and freight, with the transpacific shipping rate at $17.50 per ton. The quotations are now around 25 cents. The whole nuts are shipped in 100-pound bags of hurlap which are made in India. The walnut meat is very carefully wrapped in paper and packed in wooden boxes to keep out moisture, which is likely to produce mold. In the United States the walnuts are placed in cold storage, which preserves their freshness, preventing drying, and the crop which we ship the last of June does not get on the market here until some months later."

Handicapped by Superstition.

Mr. Young pointed out that according to the last issued bulletin of the Department of Commerce for May, 1920, 10,121,881 pounds of walnuts came to the United States from China in the 11 months ended with May, and their value was $1,887,491. He says that the Chinese are still greatly handicapped by their old superstitions. After the age-old practice of having all streets and passages irregular so that the evil spirits cannot find their way, they are laying out their farms in patchwork order, making the roads rather difficult for anyone not familiar with the locality.

"There is a large and growing market in China for every kind of machinery," said Mr. Young. "This is particularly true of machinery used in the textile industry. The Chinese are going to be competitors of the whole world in textiles. When a Chinaman figures out anything and decides to adopt it in his business he is not content to stop there. He is buying machinery now for every process in which he has learned its advantages.

"The Chinese have no feeling against the Americans, but, of course, their hatred for the Japanese grows worse. Americans in business in China are disappointed with the class of men from this country who have rushed into the oriental field in the belief that great post-war profits lie there. They are the cheapest sort of traders and they are not even intelligent in business."

MILLION ALIENS COMING IN 1921

Federal Officials Base Their Estimates on Figures for Fiscal Year Ended Last June.

INFLUX GREATLY INCREASING

Statistics Disclose a Notable Shifting of the Sources Whence Come the New Arrivals—Mexico and Canada Furnish Labor.

Washington.—An immigration of 1,000,000 or more in 1921 is the estimate of federal officials, based on figures for the fiscal year ended June 30 last, which have just been issued. Although three months behind the tide of aliens, which has been mounting at a prodigious rate since late in the spring, the statistics disclose many significant tendencies. There has been a notable shifting of the sources whence come the new arrivals.

So far as net increase in population and the replenishment of the labor market are concerned, the year ending in June witnessed a greater movement from America to Europe than from Europe to America, just as careful observers had estimated. The total immigration from all foreign lands was 430,001, and the emigration was 288,315. The bulk of this increase in population, however, came from Mexico and Canada, labor which crossed the border.

America Lost 10,000.
Aliens coming from Europe numbered 246,295; those going back to Europe 256,433, or a loss of 10,000. Before the war about 85 per cent of our immigration came from Europe, but in 1920 it was only 57 per cent. Since June, however, the rush had carried it back, and officials estimate it is again now riding at the 85 per cent mark.

At present the Mediterranean zone is sending perhaps 75 to 80 per cent of the arrivals at Ellis Island—Italy alone sending about one-half of all newcomers. Russia and the old Austria-Hungary, which before the war were sending annually more than a quarter of a million immigrants each, are isolated from the migratory movement and the sources have swung back where they were years ago.

In 1920 Italy, including Sicily and Sardinia, sent over 95,145, the largest contributor—89,000 went back. England comes next, sending 27,871, or about 50 per cent of its prewar average.

Record British Arrivals.

One table by races places the English immigration in 1920 at 58,398, which is the largest recorded in the last 22 years, or since figures for races were kept, but of this 30,000 came from Canada.

Another surprising feature is that Spain ranked third, sending 18,821, which was three times as many as it was sending before the war. Portugal came next with 15,472, which was more than it sent in 1913 and 50 per cent more than in 1912. France in 1920, too, sent 8,945, which was about equal to prewar days, for in 1913 it sent 9,675.

FLEA EMBALMED IN HONEY ALL THE TIME HE WANTED

Little Insect Pest Found Which Met Its Fate in Egypt Many Thousands of Years Ago.

Excellent Reason Why Traveler Need Not Worry Over Possibility of Missing His Train.

It is believed that the earliest food store laid aside for his wants by man, and which is still in existence, is a jar of honey found in an Egyptian tomb, and probably placed there for the sustenance of the dead during the journey across the Stygian river, says the American Forestry Magazine. When found, the honey had changed into a very dry candy and it had lost its sweetness, though it could still be identified as honey.

In the bottom of the jar, well covered with honey, was a dead flea of precisely the same sort as those which plague Egypt to this day. Apparently, the insect had hopped into the jar while the last rites over the dead were being observed, and when the jar was corked, the little fellow was shut up within, and, like the true patriot, he probably would have declared that death was sweet. Anyway, he sank to the bottom while the honey was still soft, and there the archeologists found him after a good many thousands of years.

Man's devotion to woman frequently arouses her feelings—of the tired kind.

It requires a good sized closet for some family skeletons.

A Cleveland man with business interests in Illinois tells of an incident at a railway junction in that state. He was hungry and it was only two minutes before the departure of his train. He rushed up to the counterman and exclaimed: "Give me a sandwich and a cup of coffee, quick! Haven't time for anything else."

"My friend," said the man behind the counter, "take all the time you want. Just cast your eye over this menu and I'll telephone the superintendent to hold the train a while."

"Do you mean to say that he will actually hold the train while I eat?"

"Sure, friend. This is a branch road, and there's no other train coming or going over it this morning. The superintendent will want you to have a good meal—he owns this lunch-room."

Avoiding Magnificence. "A man's house is his castle," remarked the ready-made philosopher.

"Don't say that," protested the tenant. "The landlord is liable to think it over and make extra charges for a castle."

If Adam had been wide awake he wouldn't have lost that rib.
