BACCALAUREATE SERMON

The class of 1921 began their series of programs for commencement week with the preaching of the Baccalaureate sermon at the M. E. church Sunday evening, by Rev. I. W. Edson. This honor was given him as he has a son, Lorimer Edson, in this year's class.

It was rather a solemn occasion, as this large class of thirty four filed in to the church to the strains of music furnished by Mrs. N. B. Bush at the piano. They occupied nearly the whole center section and appeared splendid in their black caps and gowns. Their motto: "With the rope of the past, we'll ring the bells of the future," was featured in their class colors, blue and gold, across the front of the pulpit.

After the song by the chorus led by N. B. Bush, Rev. Haddock of the Baptist church, offered the invocation; Mrs. B. N. Eshelman sang a beautiful solo and Rev. Bruch Eshelman read the scripture lesson.

Rev. Edson delivered a powerful sermon and its fine points were quickly discerned by all present. His text was taken from part of the 13th verse of the third chapter of Philippians: "Reaching Forth Unto Those Things Which Are Before." Urging them to aspire to reach the distant goal and "press onward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

He defined life as a prolonged competitive course, and with a high school education, they were just at the beginning. "He profits most who serves best." America today is great because of the service she rendered the world, and all this achievement can be traced back to one source—education.

"Of all the men we meet with, nine parts of ten are what they are, good or evil, useful or not, by their education. 'Tis that which makes the great difference in mankind."

"There are two phases of our education; that part of which we learn from others; and the part which we give out to others. 'Every day ahead of you is precious; the days back of you have no existence at all.'"

Young Americans have gone out where the foot of man never treads, made roads and mines and homes and school-houses. It was rough and crude, at times, lawless, but back of it was the motive of carrying on, of going farther, of progressing. They were not looking for soft snags, for they demoralize, sap ingenuity, intuition, the will to work and grease the ways to failure and misery later in life. Any one can devise the simple formula as: hard work plus politeness plus interest in and careful study of your job, equals success.

"A man's true wealth is the good he does in this world. When he dies, mortals will ask what property he left behind him, but the angels will ask, 'What good deeds hast thou sent before thee?' The one master motive in every life should be—religion.

The audience stood while the class marched out, feeling that they would not soon forget such a splendid, instructive and inspiring talk as this one.

FRONTIER DAYS AT NORTON, KANSAS

The Tri-State Frontier Roundup and Pre-Harvest Festival to be produced here on June 21-22-23 promises to be the big noise for the next few weeks, in fact, until after this spectacular athletic meet for cowboys and cowgirls is over, little else will be heard on the streets and in the business houses. The entries for broncho riding, bull dogging, roping and other events are arriving daily and it is expected by those in close touch with American Sport pages that nearly as many western ranches will be represented here as are usually represented at Pendleton or Cheyenne. This gigantic Frontier Celebration, involving the expenditure of thousands of dollars for prizes, wild horses and long horned steers, is widely advertised in sixty-five newspapers in as many counties in three states.

Jud Tunkins. Jud Tunkins says many a man would lose his standing as a good loser if there were any mind readers present.
