About sixty guests enjoyed the reception tendered Mr. and Mrs. Carl Romjue on Thursday evening at the W. A. Romjue home south of town. The house was beautifully decorated in pink and white, as it was the color scheme for the whole affair. The guests amused themselves in various ways, but music was the predominating feature of the evening's entertainment. About 10:30 a bounteous supper was served by six young lady friends of the bride.

One of the prettiest stage stories that has ever been written. One of the most interesting features of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" is the quaint fashion in which the love story between Chad and Millissy starts and the way in which it developed up to its happy conclusion. The play starts at the point where Chad escaping from a man to whom he had been "bound over" is taken by Millissy's father, big Joel Turner. It faithfully follows the book and ends at the point where Chad has escaped from Dillon and, the war over, returns to fortune and the girl whom he loves, the girl who has been faithful to him through all of his trials and tribulations. See this great play presented by the Lewis Stock Company during the week of September 5th.
