Farm Bureau Notes

Can you understand the advertising posted up promiscuously around every barnyard and every front yard you pass by? I do not mean printed posters or sign boards. I refer to the signs scattered all around which indicate a great many things about the owner or occupant of the farm.

Advertising, as we all know, is a rather broad term and refers to most any method of giving out information about men and products. Some men are much better self-advertisers than others. Self-advertising is not altogether a habit to be condemned, but we all admire silent self-advertising more than the nwe admire verbal self-advertising.

The barnyard is a pretty good advertisement of the efficiency, managing, ability and prosperity of the man who is responsible for it. It is often more eloquent than words. A barnyard full of weeds, with neglected fences, sagging gates and machinery scattered around in disorder, is an advertisement to everyone who passes by.

A barnyard well arranged for convenience with fences and gates in good order, with buildings protected by paint, with weeds kept mowed and with no neglected machinery standing around, nor junk piles of machinery scraps is a very eloquent advertisement to everyone who passes by.

The same thing is true of a front yard. A front dooryard full of holes scratched by the chickens or dug by the dogs, either without shrubbery or with ragged shrubs, neglected porches, unkept fences, means one thing in regard to the owner or occupant. A neat dooryard with fences and gates in good order and protected by paint, with house and porches and foundations presenting a neat and well preserved appearance and with a reasonable supply of attractive shrubbery located around the outer borders, mean an entirely different thing to every passer by.

These conditions are all advertisements with work 365 days a year. They have a financial influence. If

COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES

(By County Superintendent)
The Nebraska Farmer is planning to put on a campaign to vitalize the work in the elementary school. The work will be along the line of geography, hygiene, domestic science and nature study. It will be furnished in a form that will be practical and useful in rural communities. The questions and outlines will correlate with the course of study given to the teachers to follow. This should be a great help to the teachers.

The Junior Red Cross News is fifty cents a year. It should give ideas of foreign countries. It is not very expensive. They will send you sample copies if you ask them. Address Naide L. Curtis 308 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. Any one wishing to do Red Cross work can get in touch with the society by letting me know.

The Nebraska Teachers Association is asking me to enroll teachers. The enrollment fee is $2.00. Any one wishing to join may send the money to me or to H. O. Sutton of Kearney Nebraska.

Mr. P. H. Boren will take hold of the attendance proposition from this date on.

A New Baptist Pastor

The Baptist people desire to introduce to the good people of Red Cloud their new pastor, Rev. Fred J. Newland, who comes to the church from Grapeland, Texas. His home however being Houston, Texas.

Rev. Newland is a graduate of Columbia College New York City and of the Southwestern Theological Seminary at Fort Worth, Texas, in which state he spent the last six years. Born at Roanoke, Virginia Rev. Newland is really a southern man with about ten years northern experience.

The Seminary he attended requires each Theological student to hold at least two evangelistic meetings a year so Bro. Newland has had considerable evangelistic experience. He has travelled extensively, spending some time in Europe in 1912 with his father who was in his lifetime a practicing physician. The boys in school have already a line on Bro. Newland as an athlete and predict a very interesting time with him on the field. Altogether the church hopes that their Pastor will be a very helpful addition to the city, and he will take his place here with other good pastors and work with excellent success.

Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Webster County branch of the Farmers' Union will be held in Red Cloud, Tuesday, October 10th. J. M. Ryan, Secretary.

Mr. Farmer Do You Realize?

That the only protection you have against the greedy, avaricious trusts and big monopolies of this country, which feed on the efforts of the producer, is by standing firmly together in self defense.

The big corporations all co-operate in price manipulation, securing your produce for just as little money as possible, and charging you the maximum for goods you are required to purchase.

The Farmers Union is the Remedy

And there is nothing quite so obnoxious in the eyes of the monopoly as a body of FARMERS FIRMLY CO-OPERATING in the interest of LEGITIMATE PRICES.

All Sorts Of Unscrupulous Tactics Are Resorted To in order to discourage such organizations. They will pay big prices for one kind of produce for a short time, in order to "freeze out" their competitors in certain localities—and to evade laws which have been enacted to protect you from such methods THEY HAVE MEN BUY FOR THEM who term themselves "Independent Dealers."

Stand By Your Union

Where you know you are working for your own interests and not feeding up the trust so it can take hold on you in a new place.
