"OPTIMISM"

As we look back upon the changing fortunes that have attended our industry the past few years and consider the changing moods in which we have met those different periods of fortune or misfortune, we find that many of our actions have been controlled by impulse without the guiding influence of the element of reason. There is not one of us, but remembers the childish glee that we enjoyed over trifling achievements in our childhood or on the other hand what woeful disappointments and momentary despair attend the failure to secure our desires. Those same sentiments it seems to us are apparent in the actions of many of us today. One or two years ago we were enthusiastic and excited over the bright prospects before us and today we are doing our best to keep ahead of the sheriff, wondering if we will manage it and at the same time saying that we believe our industry is going to be ruined. Many of us seem to have lost our confidence in the future. But our industry will not be ruined. Its ultimate success is certain, although it may pass through periods of changing fortune. We are but passing through one of the periodical depressions that have attended all industrial and agriculture development in every age since the early Egyptians. In the hour of his greatest success man is very prone to forget the fundamental principles underlying our industrial and agricultural security. The violation of those principles has worked disaster in the past and will continue to work disaster in the future. Misfortune or reverse always clears the vision and directs the efforts of mankind to the essential principles of human existence. The ultimate success of the live stock industry was never more certain than it is this moment.

Work is the cure-all for industrial disease. Not that the farmer or live stock man needs to be exhorted to greater physical effort, but rather that all of us in all industry and all agricultural work must realize that honest patient, daily toil is the only cure for a sick world. We must do away with subsidies for this and that, with doles and artificial support to industry and allow each and everyone of our industries to stand on its own feet with the only support that will effectively maintain it throughout the years to come—the success of its own efforts. There are ways and means of improving many things that stand in the way of the natural development of agriculture and industry and it is to those things that we must direct our attention, in order that our efforts will not be neutralized by interference with the natural channels of development in agriculture and animal industry.

HENRY R. FAUSCH
County Agricultural Agent.

Burlington Buys 59 Miles of Freight Cars

In order to be thoroughly prepared for the great volume of business which is destined to move with the coming revival of business, the Board of Directors of the Burlington Railroad has authorized the purchase of 7,300 freight equipment units.

Included in the purchase, are:
500 stock cars
1,300 refrigerator cars
2,500 box cars
3,000 composite coal cars.

The primary requisite of these cars is that they shall "stand up" and "deliver", and to that end, the best material that money can buy and all approved improvements will be incorporated in their construction. Placed end to end these 7,300 cars would make a single train 59 miles long.

STATE FARM BUREAU NOTES

The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, according to its secretary, H. D. Lute intends to make a thorough investigation into the petitions in circulation in several counties seeking the abolishment of the county farm bureau and extension agent. In some counties the petitions have been directed against some other county officials when circulated to give it the appearance of a general reform movement, and one of retrenchment of expenditures, but as soon as the petitions are signed they are changed to apply only to the extension agent. That these petitions are not being circulated by persons interested in the farmers' welfare is pretty well established, and from what can be learned, Mr. Lute says, it seems to be a drive against the Farm Bureau, particularly since its activities in aiding the farmers' national grain and livestock marketing plans.

That any tax on gasoline to be enacted by the special session of the legislature to be called by Governor McKelvie, the primary purpose of which is to raise funds for road building purposes instead of using funds raised by direct taxation, should exempt gasoline used by farm tractors and other farm machinery used in lines of production, is asked by the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation. H. D. Lute, secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation called upon the governor and finds the chief executive generally favorable to making such an exemption. The governor told Mr. Lute that the Colorado gasoline tax law has such an exemption and that it has been found to comprise only about one percent of the total sales. With this exemption, Mr. Lute is of the opinion that farmers generally will be favorable to the gasoline tax. The feature which, he says, will appeal to the farmer most is the fact that the gasoline tax is about the only way in which the tourists can be compelled to partially pay for the state roads which he is helping to wear out. In fact the amount of money which the tourists will annually contribute towards state roads by a tax on the gasoline they purchase while passing through the state will not by any means be a small item.

For some time the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation has investigated the matter of a state farmers' finance corporation. It has been found that the present laws in this state must be amended before such a corporation, along the lines of the Iowa corporation, can be successfully organized. Secretary Lute of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation took this matter up with Governor McKelvie in connection with the special session of the legislature which the governor will call soon. Mr. Lute, however, advised the governor that due to the fact that war finance funds are now available and also that the farmers at the present time are in a depressed financial condition, there is not such an emergency existing that it is necessary that the special session take up this subject. Another regular session of the legislature will be held before farmers generally will be ready to organize such a corporation, and Governor McKelvie advised Secretary Lute that recommendations looking towards amending the present laws making such an institution possible will probably be made in his final message to the next regular session.

A meagre report has reached the office of the Nebraska Farm Bureau that in some counties of the state organizers are working among the farmers collecting a $2.00 membership fee from farmers on the strength of being able to build up an association to force the price of corn up to, it is reported, 65 cents to 75 cents per bushel. "I don't know what this alleged organization is," Mr. Lute of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation says, "but if the claims are true that it is an organization intended to attempt to set a selling price for corn, then I can say that we are against it, as well as against the theory it is alleged to advance for these things can't be done artificially."

U. S. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, one of the stars of national capital legislative affairs will be the principal speaker at the Jefferson Day democratic feed to be held in Omaha Saturday evening January 14th.

Senator Hitchcock of this state will speak also, and so will ex congressman Dan Stephens of Fremont. Both the Nebraskans and the visiting lawns are familiar with the conduct of affairs at Washington and will give the crowd interesting history of what has happened under G. O. P. control of government. (Some of us here on the ground know what's happened, too. And Mr. Hitchcock and others of the speakers will tell why it has happened and why it might be have happened.) The doors to the affair are wide open. Every man, woman and child reduced car come and get the strong and warm ride, and the ship extended to the edge of the state committee makes the trip. The feed will be on the table for the afternoon.

A Letter To Make Good

Must impress the person who receives it with its importance, whether the correspondence be of a business or personal nature. The mails are flooded with cheap circular letters and the average busy man-of-to-day gives his mail the "once over" and passes most of it to the waste basket. A letter to demand attention in these busy times must be distinctive.
