If it's worth printing at all-- it's worth printing well!

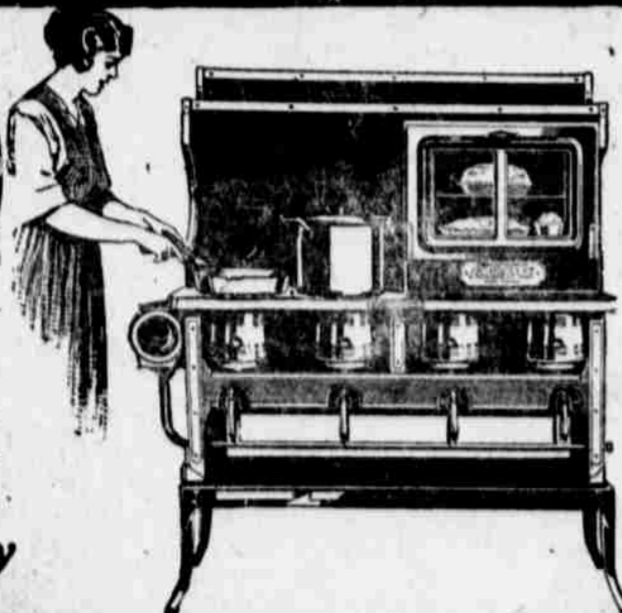

Nothing gives a business concern a "Cheap John" appearance as quickly as the use of poorly done printing. A concern is judged by the appearance of their place of business and by the class of correspondence and the kind of advertising matter used. Since the success of any business institution depends upon the impression made upon the public the necessity of using only the very best printing is obvious.

It costs as much to do a job poorly as to do it right

We are prepared to handle high grade commercial printing of all kinds and enjoy doing work for those who are particular about their printing and want it right.

GOVERNMENT MEN HERE

Two representatives of the Department of Agriculture have been in Webster county since July 1, making a farm-to-farm survey for the common barberry. The common barberry is the alternate host of the black stem rust of cereals. The rust overwinters on grasses, stubble, and in straw piles. In the spring time of the year, the black rust spores (seeds) germinate and are carried by the wind for great distances. The spores falling on the barberry leaves, germinate and produce an infection. About two weeks after the spores (seeds) fall on the barberry leaf, an infection is observed on the barberries. This rust from the barberries is carried then by the wind to grain fields. The rust on the grain is the red spore stage of the rust. When conditions become unfavorable for the growth of this red rust, it is changed into the black rust. The black rust spores (seeds) have thick walls and are capable of withstanding the winter weather conditions.

In Adams Hall and northern Cass counties, rust has spread from a single barberry bush in each case about 350 feet on grasses and cereals. By eradicating the barberries, one source of rust infection will be eliminated.

Any information in regard to the location of barberries will be greatly appreciated if the same is communicated to A. F. Thiel, plant Pathology, College of Agriculture, Lincoln, Nebraska.

GATHER EGGS OF SEA FOWL

Indians on the West Coast of Washington Take Desperate Risks Robbing Murres' Nests.

The sea fowl known as the murre arrives off the west coast of Washington early in the spring, finds a slit in the rockcliffs or a convenient ledge where, with no nesting material, the eggs are laid. Egg gatherers, mostly Indians, climb the cliffs daily, taking out one fresh egg from each nest. The climbers maintain their positions on the almost perpendicular rocks by chipping out hand and foot holds from the cliffs. These are used year after year. A bag hung from the neck and extending down the back contains the egg harvest.

The egg of this sea fowl, the Detroit News states, has excellent nourishing qualities for invalids, and contains an abnormal amount of white albumen. Though the murre subsists on fish, the flavor of the egg is not dissimilar to that of the domestic hen. A curious feature in cooking is that the albumen does not become solidified and of an opaque whiteness, as does that of the chicken egg, but retains its jellylike character and is light blue in color. In size the eggs are approximately that of the goose.

CRIMINALS OF PLANT WORLD

What Are Known as Creepers Have the Faculty of Strangling Life Out of Trees.

The common ivy is a real criminal of the plant world. When it has no wall to climb, it will live on other plants, sapping their vitality as it creeps higher and higher, until its victims are suffocated.

A similar fate overtakes trees in Central American forests which receive the attention of a creeper called the matapolo, or tree-killer. The latter grows very quickly, the tendrils overhanging the tree's branches and reaching down to the ground, where they take fresh root. Soon the victim is surrounded by a regular thicket of creepers, which deprive it of both air and light.

A variety of wild fig is just as cruel. A bird, perhaps, drops a seed in the fork of a tree. The seed soon germinates, and its roots cling to the trunk of the tree as they make their way to the ground. Once the ground is reached, the strangling process begins, for the fig grows rapidly, crushing out its victim's life so completely that it disappears entirely.

Good Word for Hobbies.

One strike made by the modern maid, both in philosophy and ethics, is that of doing justice to the hobby. Hobbies not infrequently assume a scientific or at least a quasi-scientific form. Happy is the man who is an amateur botanist, and amateur zoologist, an amateur anything, which brings him into kindly contact with nature. Take it by and large, the world is much better off for hobbies than it would be without them. Even in the tolerant and half-pitying smile bestowed on the hobby there is recognition that his hobby is harmless, but in 999 cases out of 1,000 the hobby is a positive benefit. Almost always it is a health preserver, and more times than it gets credit for it has proven a life-saver.

Surgeon to Birds.

Miss Virginia Pope, a surgeon to birds, intended to be an artist when she started out in life. She became interested in birds while selling prepared bird food in order to maintain herself while Art was still a beckoning Muse, with nothing substantial, from a financial standpoint, in her luring palm. The birds were so fascinating that Miss Pope decided to devote herself to feathered friends and let Art drift over the mountains.—Exchange.

Don't Let The Senate Boost Your Clothing Bill

Within a few days the Senate will have taken action upon the Tariff Bill which has already passed the House. It provides a tariff of 33c per pound on the scoured content of wool.

To Every Man it Means an Increase of at Least $4.00 on Every Suit of Clothes or overcoat he buys hereafter. And every woman who buys a wool suit or coat will have to pay a proportionate increase. Every boy's suit will cost more.

Write or Wire Your Senator at Once and tell him to insist on revising the wool tariff in line with public interest.

We want low clothing prices. So do you. We're doing our best to keep prices down. Help us by writing to your Senator to slice the duty on wool.

Democratic Candidate for State Representative - 71ST District.

I am for: Economy in State and Local Government. To this end I should be glad to vote to - Repeal the Code Law; Eliminate useless and unnecessary State Boards and cut down expenses of those retained; Restrict junketing of State Officers and Legislative Members to point of efficiency; Make economical and efficient service the rule everywhere.

If you believe in my platform, I will appreciate your support at the Primary.
