NEBRASKA CORN IN SPLENDID CONDITION

An excellent condition of corn, fair to poor condition of small grain crops and potatoes, particularly in the southern half of the state, a light second crop of alfalfa and more than usual damage from hail are the leading features of the semi-monthly report of the Nebraska department of agriculture and bureau of agricultural economics (formerly bureau of markets and crop estimates.)

The condition of corn is generally good throughout the state. The fields are free from weeds and in a good state of cultivation. The preliminary estimate of average will be made in the regular July report.

Considerable of the winter wheat in the southeastern quarter of the state will make good yields in spite of the early and rapid ripening of the grain. Counties bordering the Missouri river and the Platte river west to Platt and Park counties have the best yields. South and west of these counties the percentage of shrunken grain is greater. Hail damage was greater than usual this year, some of the seasons being very extensive.

The percentage of shrunken grain is greater in western, south central and southwestern Nebraska. While some of the counties within this area have fairly good wheat crops, others suffered severe damage from the premature ripening of the grain.

The damage to barley, spring wheat and oats, particularly early oats, in the southern half of the state, is very severe. The northern half of the state fared better, altho some injury is evident. South central Nebraska replaced considerable of the abandoned winter wheat with barley, oats and some spring wheat, all of which suffered severe damage.

The earliest potatoes in the southern half of the state are badly damaged as the drouth and high temperatures came at the critical time. The later plantings and the crop in fairly good condition at present. The early commercial potato crop in the Kearney district is better than expected and may exceed last year's shipments by 50 per cent.

The second crop of alfalfa is very short in most of the counties. The raspberry crop was reduced considerably by the drouth. Apples continue promising. The cherry crop was heavy throughout the state.

The general crop summary for the district comprising the states of Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Iowa is as follows: Crop growth was seriously damaged by lack of moisture and high temperatures which caused premature ripening of wheat, and injury to alfalfa and potatoes.

Corn made rapid progress, but more moisture needed in places. Stands are generally good, but there is considerable variation in size, particularly in Kansas and Missouri, where the crop is two weeks late. Chinch bugs are numerous in localities.

Winter wheat ripened prematurely in Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska and resulted in shrunken grain. Threshing has begun in southern Kansas and Missouri. Harvest is nearing completion in Nebraska and Iowa.

Spring wheat was severely damaged in Nebraska and is heading short in Iowa. Oats are poor in Missouri, eastern Kansas, southern Nebraska and very poor in parts of Iowa. Considerable of the crop will be cut for hay. Part of the barley crop was severely damaged in these states also.

Potatoes were seriously damaged and the farm crop will be light. The commercial potato crop of the Kaw valley in Kansas and also the Missouri valley were injured but some improvement expected since the recent rains. The potato crop of the Kearney district in Nebraska is promising.

Clover and timothy were harvested under ideal conditions. The second crop of alfalfa is short in Nebraska and Missouri. Apples are in the best condition in recent years and summer varieties are being harvested in southern Missouri.—State Journal.
