

Straits Must Remain Open, Says Great Britain

Great Britain, supported by her allies, is determined that the straits between Europe and Asia shall be internationalized, and until the League of Nations is given "teeth" with which to keep them open, Britain will keep control in her own hands. The illustration shows Tenedos Island, dominating the entrance to the Dardanelles; British troops guarding one of the roads into Constantinople; at the left, Gen. Sir Charles Harington, commanding the land forces in that region; at the right, Vice Admiral Sir Osmond Brock, commanding the British Mediterranean fleet.

Horthy Rules With Royal Pomp

Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, rules with all the pomp of a monarch. Appointing officers for the army becomes a regal ceremony with all the trappings of the days gone by. Here the admiral is appointing an officer by tapping him lightly on the shoulder with the flat of his sword.

Denby Helps Lay a Corner Stone

The cornerstone of the largest masonic temple in the world was laid by master masons of Michigan the other day at Temple and Cass avenues, Detroit. Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby, personal representative of President Harding, assisted Grand Master McKenzie in the ancient ceremony, which is one of the few rites of operative masonry still practiced by the world's largest secret order.

Girls Wade in Boston's Frog Pond

Can you imagine girls going wading in Boston's public frog pond? They did, the other day, but it was a part of the initiation of co-eds of Boston college into sororities, and the candidates peeled off their silken hose and waded into the cold water without a murmur.

MY CHILDREN'S WORTH.

By Mrs. Charles L. Kelly, of Nebraska City.

This story was entered in the Omaha free contest for amateurs by the Nebraska City Press, and won first place, carrying with it a cash prize of $100.

My neighbor has prospered. His home is the last word in modern architecture and equipment. It is his hobby. He loves every board and block and nail in it. He surrounds it with grassy plots and shrubs and flowers, and adorns it inside and out according to his sense of artistic grace and beauty. Not only is his home a source of pride and satisfaction to my neighbor, but by its beauty and grace and general attractiveness it sheds distinction and adds to the value of the property round about it.

Now, my home is a modest affair. It needs paint and the roof does not cover it as well as the mortgage. What is meant for a grassy plot shows bare patches like the exposed portions of a little boy's trousers.

And, instead of graceful, flowering vines, my house is overrun by little rosy ramblers who clamber about scraping off the paint and leaving muddy streaks in their wake. There are five of them, and all the hard work, sacrifice and care they mean to me is as nothing compared to the pride I have in their clear eyes, clean minds and sturdy bodies. To the hope I hold in their future the present struggle to keep them clothed, housed and fed is a small affair. They represent my family estate. To them I hope to leave an inheritance of character and courage. And to the world I shall bequeath, not large sums for charity, schools or hospitals, but a family of men and women equipped to take up the problems of life.

But when my neighbor begins to talk about taxes I have an uneasy feeling that, according to his way of looking at it, I should have drowned these dimpled babes before their eyes were open. He has it figured out to a penny how much it is costing him to educate one of my children. Now, I am paying taxes, too, but for nine months of the year my children are under the supervision of trained teachers, men and women of unquestioned character and high ideals. It doesn't seem to me that they are receiving exorbitant wages. But my neighbor has no children. To him school is just a building that cost too much in the first place, is costing too much in the upkeep and doesn't give back a profit to the town.

I believe my neighbor is wrong. My children have a monetary value to the town. For their needs my earnings are spent. I buy from him such things as he has to sell, thereby adding to his riches. I go farther, I am not raising pigs for profit, nor cattle for the mart, but raw material for the nation of tomorrow. They are not mine alone. They belong to my neighbor as well. It is to his interest as well as mine that they become fit and useful citizens. As they are trained, as they are educated, they will develop. The community has a part in that development. My neighbor has no more right to spread propaganda for cheap schools, a niggardly system that will dwarf the future of my children, than I have to throw trash in his front yard.

The second annual pure food show will be held in Alliance October 19, 20 and 21, under the auspices of the women of St. Matthew Episcopal church, with Mrs. Elmer McManis, manager of last year's show, in charge.

Leslie F. Ruwe, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Ruwe, a prominent Fremont family, accomplished what is considered little short of marvelous in a brain speed contest at Northwestern university. Young Ruwe, a student of the University of Minnesota, answered 100 questions in 13 minutes, 94 of which were correct.

LATEST PARIS GOWN

Paris first decreed stockingless legs, sleeveless gowns, and other such fashion extremes, and now comes the gown without a bodice, or at least with much less than usual. Our photograph shows Mile. Rhabna, the beautiful dancer who has created a sensation in Paris with her new frocks, composed mainly of voluminous skirts and bodices of pearls and lace.

TACKLING A HUGE JOB

Walter C. Loudermilk, civil engineer and forestry expert, with his bride of a few weeks, photographed at San Francisco just before sailing for China. Loudermilk will tackle the stupendous job of reforesting China, thus bringing back the soil to productivity, preventing floods and famine and creating new industries that will employ millions of people. His wife was formerly Miss Inez Marks of Pasadena, Cal., for five years a missionary in the Orient.
