An event of apparently insignificant importance has been discussed with considerable interest by the quidnuncs during the week. William Randolph Hearst, at one time the candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency and more recently the promoter of the so called "independent" party, between whom and the president there has been no love lost, called this week at the white house for the first time in his somewhat meteoric life. It is said that Mr. Hearst received a telegraphic message from the white house that the President was delighted with Hearst's helpfulness in the late campaign and well he may be, for if the political candle of Mr. Foraker has been snuffed the credit or the blame is due to Mr. Hearst. There has been much speculation as to what Mr. Hearst said to Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Roosevelt to Mr. Hearst on this visit, but nothing can be learned as to the conversation. It is hinted that this first interview was merely an ice breaker and that it marks the beginning of more friendly relations between these two hitherto bitter adversaries.

As might be expected during the sitting of the tariff revision and as the volume of the testimony grows, the middle increases. Democrats, like Republicans, are quite willing to admit, free of tax, everything in the next county. The wool growers and rice planters of Texas, the sugar planters of Louisiana, the iron factors of Alabama, the coal kings of Georgia and the saw mill hustlers of North Carolina all want protection. On the other hand, the shoemaker of Massachusetts want free hides from South America and a high tariff on boots and shoes and all leather goods, while the cattle kings and feeders in Montana, Wyoming, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska want a high tariff on hides and no tariff on boots and shoe and leather goods. It is possible that the discussion of the tariff will begin in Congress early in December, but what's the use? The passage through both houses of Congress by March the fourth, of a bill in which there are so many conflicting interests, is out of the question. The general routine business of Congress can be accomplished only by diligence in the three short months, broken by the Christmas holidays, which constitutes the short session of Congress.

IT IS NOT A SAVING POLICY

to go without insurance. The risk assumed is too great for the small premium you keep in your pocket. Figure out how many years you would have to be free from any fire in order to save the value of your house and contents. Then consider that you may have a fire this very night. The cost of even a little blaze will be more than the premium of Better have me issue you a policy to-day. It's a whole lot better to be sure than sorry, as many an uninsured man has been.
