Where Girls Make Mistakes.

Many girls think they are demeaning themselves if they are approachable. They cultivate an icy manner as a hall mark of respectability.

Don't be afraid of being pleasant. It cannot hurt you and will be as good as a tonic to all you meet.

What though you do think yourself superior to most of your acquaintances; is it good taste to placard your belief by a freezing countenance?

There is nothing like affability to conceal one's family skeletons. A haughty manner is a direct bid for the rest of the world to rake up ancestral secrets that you thought buried under a mound of gold.

The secret of many a homely girl's success is an affable manner that makes every one she meets feel as welcome as a cold soup in the dog days.

Not everyone has the happy faculty of drawing the best out of others, but no one need be guilty of the vulgarity of consciously seeking to put them at a disadvantage.

Snubs have a way of coming home to roost that is as surprising to the snubber as when her pet Tabby avenges a tweaked tail with her claws.

Be affable. Most of us can forgive an injury quicker than a rudeness.

Be affable. There is no one so lowly that her good will can be scorned, and nothing so quickly makes ill will as haughtiness.

Be affable. If you are not pleasant because it comes natural, be pleasant because it is the only manner that is well bred.

Some people lack affability because they want to be disagreeable, others because they are naturally stiff and reserved. The former might as well reconcile themselves to hatred; the latter should take a course in cordiality.

The shyest person can cultivate affability. She will be surprised to find that the effort not only helps her own shyness, but is a regular magnet as a friend-winner.

If you want to be affable take an interest in every one you meet. You will soon show it despite your nature. Kindly feelings are not snub-breeds.

Do not confound affability with lack of reserve or gushing. The over affable person is as cloying as a coy spinster whose youth has fled.—Burlington Gazette.

The above was handed us with a request that we publish it, with the hope that it may do some good. While the article deals altogether with girls it applies to the young man whose hat is too small, who has the idea that he is "IT." That for him to notice common folks is beneath his dignity. Whenever a young man gets the swell head he is apt to imagine that he is made of a superior article of clay and that if it was not for his being here the world would go to smash. That he is an oracle of superior intellectual attainments and an Adonis whose charms the fair sex can not help but notice with admiring glances. In communities of this kind there is no room for the aristocrat and the young man or young woman who tries to pull through with the mistaken idea that they are too good to associate with common people, will find in the long run that they have, to put it mildly, acted decidedly foolishly.

Recognize your old neighbors and friends however humble may be their station; whether arrayed in the height of fashion or clad in the garments of respectable toil, but do not pass them by with a haughty air. Whatever may be your lot by virtue of learning, of wealth or social position, remember the true lady or gentleman is always courteous and respectful to all.
