From Lucile's Diary

Mother's small and perfectly unnecessary household economies annoy me dreadfully at times.

I said to her one day recently that I wished she would have our nickel telephone taken out and replaced by the unlimited service.

"As you nearly always use my nickels," laughed mother, "I don't see why you should care which kind of telephone we have. Seriously, dear, I think that if even a little money can be saved by using the nickel phone we ought to do it cheerfully."

I knew it was useless to argue the matter with mother any further at that time, but I did not give up the idea of securing the unlimited service.

I rarely abandon any plan on which my mind is set, for I think persistence is one of the important elements of strength of character.

That evening just after dinner Betty called me up and asked me to come over and play cards.

"I hope you haven't any engagement," she said, "for Bob has brought a friend home to dinner tonight and we would like to have a little bridge."

When I got to Betty's I was sorry I had taken the trouble to change my dress. Her invitation was very misleading. I had naturally supposed that when Betty said Bob had brought a friend home she meant a man friend, and I was greatly surprised to be introduced to a plainly gowned and quite uninteresting looking woman.

"Miss Clyde went to school with Bob years ago and now she teaches in a western college," whispered Betty while I was removing my wraps. "She is very bright and charming."

"Really?" I murmured.

As we joined Bob and his old friend in the drawing room I noticed the telephone in the hall.

"Oh, I see you have the unlimited service now!" I exclaimed. "I'm trying to persuade mother to have it put in at our house."

"What's the use?" asked Uncle Bob, good-naturedly. "Whenever you feel an excess of telephonic enthusiasm coming on, drop in here and help yourself to our phone."

"That's awfully sweet of you, Uncle Bob," I replied. "I believe I'll avail myself of your generosity now while Betty is getting out her cards and the bridge table."

I slipped into the hall and rung up Mr. Owen, who has been ill for a few days. He appeared to enjoy a chat and we visited for quite a while. Then I remembered that I had promised to pass the evening at Louise Erwin's house, so I phoned her my apologies for not going. There were several others to whom I wished to speak and I was in the midst of a conversation with Arthur Knight when Betty called me.

"Just a moment, dear," I answered, considerably ignoring her petulant tone.

"Now, you are surely through," Betty said, coming into the hall a few minutes later. "Bob's fuming for our bridge."

"Poor Uncle Bob!" I laughed. "He'll have to be patient a little longer, for I'm waiting for a long-distance call."

Betty left me without another word, and in a minute more I was listening to the voice of Wisner Lee, whom I had been lucky enough to catch at the hotel in Cleveland where he is just now. I told him about the new tennis club that some of our crowd are organizing and I asked his advice about the kind of racket I should buy. Wisner is such a devoted tennis player that he forgets all about time when he is discussing his favorite game. As he was so thoughtful about the racket, begging the privilege of choosing the one for me, I had not the heart to break off the conversation.

It was rudely interrupted by Uncle Bob, who asked me with uncalculated sharpness if I was "going to talk to that chap all night."

"Of course not," I said. "What time is it?"

"It's exactly 10:45 o'clock."

"Mercy! I must go home at once!" I exclaimed.

"Why, we haven't had any bridge," protested Betty, "and I was going to make a Welsh rabbit, Lucille."

"Well, I'll stay for a wee bite of the rarebit," I conceded. "Then I must fly. You know how mother dislikes having me remain out late."

Uncle Bob was extremely tactful all the way home. In fact, so short and gruff were his remarks that I was sorry I had bothered to go to his house. I have not seen him since that evening, but yesterday he told mother that a large bill had come in for long-distance telephoning which he thought I would want to pay out of my allowance. When mother spoke to me about it I said that I was simply astonished at Uncle Bob.

"Why, he invited me to use his phone any time," I told her.

"But he didn't expect you to talk to Cleveland for over an hour," said mother. "I do wish, Lucille, that you had not abused his generosity. It makes me very uncomfortable when you displease your Uncle Bob."

"Well, mother," I remarked, "if you would allow me to have the unlimited service put in a little unpleasantness like this would never happen."

Mother just sighed in that martyr-like way of hers.

The men have come today to change our phone. It will be a great comfort to have the unlimited service.

A woman is extolled for her virtues and adored for her weaknesses.
