Council Proceedings

June 9, 1911.
Council met in regular adjourned session. All present.

Mr. Fogel reported that Mr. Fincher agreed to open Arch street.

The Council agreed to turn the City of Red Cloud over to the 4th of July committee and all benefits derived therefrom.

Mr. Mizer presented receipts from John G. Potter for water used in 1904, 5 and 6, amounting to $2.08 and stated Mr. Potter would be willing to take water on the same basis.

Mr. Rich stated that Mr. Potter now owed the city $15.24 for back water rents and unless the council instructed otherwise it would have to be paid before water would be turned on. No action taken by the Council.

Council refused to grant Miner Bros. Co., permission to construct a cess pool in the alley back of the store building.

Council appropriated not to exceed $150.00 to illuminate the streets on the 4th of July and appointed Strong, Mizer and Hutchison a committee to look after it.

Council instructed the Mayor to have the City Marshall inform P. A. Hansen to take care of the waste water from laundry running down the alley back of his premises.

Joe Fogel was instructed to look after the bridge on Second avenue.

Mr. Nelson proposed to the Council to put 200,000 gallons of water in the well for $3,000. Matter was laid over until the next meeting.

The grade on Division street was lowered one foot.

The Possessive Case

Leonard, reading by the window caught sight of a vision of youthful loveliness and recognized his only daughter. Dropping his paper, he went to the door to welcome her with a kiss.

"Well, what is Mrs. Bride doing out this Sunday morning without Mr. Groom?" he asked, jovially.

"Oh, papa," she replied, "I've just come to tell you that George and I have found a perfectly lovely flat and we are going to housekeeping at once. I know you'll be awfully glad, for I've heard you say that you didn't believe in young people boarding. Now, aren't you delighted that we are going to have a little home of our own?"

"Yes, indeed, Ethel," Leonard tried to throw into his voice the amount of enthusiasm which appeared to be demanded.

"Now, where's mother? I want to tell her, too. Oh, here you are, ma. Isn't it perfectly lovely that George and I have found an apartment only two blocks from here in the Panama? By a week from today we'll be all moved in. It's the cunningest little flat—not so very little—seven rooms. It's going to furnish up beautifully. My mahogany bed will look lovely in our guest chamber."

"What mahogany bed?" inquired Mrs. Leonard.

"Why, the one I used to have before you put the brass one in my room for a surprise when I came home from school. Of course I'd rather have the brass bed in my own room, for I've always thought such a lot of it. And I'm going to use my old rug in my room, too, even if it is a tiny bit worn. Don't you think it's more sensible than to buy some new thing that is not really nearly so handsome? George and I are determined not to be extravagant."

"Quite right, Ethel," agreed her father. "Don't buy anything you don't have to."

His wife looked at him, but he was so intent upon lighting a cigar that he didn't respond to her questioning eye.

"Now, I think, mamma," said Ethel, "in order to save you trouble I'll just tie a tiny bit of this red ribbon that I've brought on all my things, so when the expressman comes for them you won't have any uncertainty about which articles he is to take. Here's this darling little tea chair. Don't you remember when you bought it, mamma, I said I wanted it for mine?"

"Yes, I remember," Mrs. Leonard said, smiling.

"And, of course, the afternoon tea table goes with it. I'm going to serve tea every afternoon when I'm at home, and I want you to come and have some as often as you can. Very likely George and I will often go home with you to dinner afterward. Won't we have fun visiting back and forth? Papa, will you please tie this piece of ribbon around that Venetian glass vase on the mantel?"

"Well," she remarked, descending a few minutes later, "I think I've marked nearly everything except the Dresden dessert set and the—"

"The Dresden dessert set?" interrupted Mrs. Leonard.

"Yes, mamma; don't you know I asked you for those dishes when I was a little bit of a thing and I've always looked forward to having them in my own home? But, of course, if you have any objection—"

"Oh, no, Ethel, you may have them."

"As for the piano, papa, do you think it ought to be tuned before or after it is sent over?"

"I hadn't realized that it was to be moved."

"No, I suppose not. Haven't I grown up and married quickly? It doesn't seem long since you bought it for me to practice on, does it? Now I must run over and meet George. He's at his mother's house picking out his things and he'll need my help. Good-by, dears. Aren't you glad we're going to housekeeping?"

As Ethel left Leonard turned a face of mock despair toward his wife.

"Well, she's our daughter," Mrs. Leonard was on the defensive at once.

"And she can have anything of ours she wants, can't she?"

"Of course."

"And it was downright considerate of her to leave us enough to continue housekeeping in a 'bumble way, wasn't it?"

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Leonard. Then she laughed—because it was her habit to laugh when her husband did.

He Was Handicapped.

Masters Willie and Tommy, whose parents are next door neighbors on the north side, do not get along as amicably as might be expected. A few days ago Willie came hurrying to his mother, his entrance heralded by an anguished wail of woe. "Now, what's the matter?" asked mamma. "Why, boo-hoo, it's Tommy," he shrieked plaintively, "he's makin' faces at me." "Well," exclaimed mamma, "didn't I tell you not to play with Tommy?" "W-w-well," he sobbed, "I ain't playin' with him. He's over in his yard makin' faces at me." "Oh, well," said his mamma, "can't you make faces at him?" "W-w-well, boo-hoo, I did," wailed Willie; "but he's so much homelier 'an me that he skins me every time."—Pittsburg Gazette.

NOT ADVICE, JUST BACKING

Repenting Heiress Did Not Want Friend's Practical Views, but Wanted Silk Stockings.

The heiress had married a struggling young artist, and mamma and papa were not any too well pleased. In consequence the parental supply had been cut off. The heiress was perfectly loyal, however, to the man of her choice, had full faith in his future and tried hard to help him, but she found his present rather difficult, as she was not accustomed to economy. Also she found that while he was temperamentally liberal with himself in some directions, his anxiety to make good with a bank account often became most intense when she needed some articles of wearing apparel. In other words, he was willing to spend money for almost anything else except her clothes.

"Of course I love Arthur," said the heiress loyally, "and he really isn't ciese—just anxious to make good with mamma and papa, but he has no idea how hard it is for me to buy cheap goods. Just think of my having to wear stockings that cost only 50 cents a pair!"

"Never mind," said her friend consolingly. "It is just as easy to keep little stockings clean as it is silk."

"That's exactly the trouble," moaned the heiress ruefully. "I wish it were not. If I could make the plea to Arthur that silk hose could not be kept clean it might have some weight with him. Besides, I should have more nerve, in that case, to insist on having silk ones. The next time I tell my troubles to anybody I shall pick out some one who will tell me that only the most expensive stockings can be kept perfectly clean."

"Oh," said the adviser in dismay, "is that what you want? I thought you wanted the truth."

"Oh, did you? Does anybody who seeks advice ever want the truth?"

"What I want is silk stockings—and somebody to back me up in getting them."
