can be secured by the use of lumber, usually at a great saving over substitutes and with much greater stability. Shingles and novelty siding properly used is one example for exterior effect, and for interior purposes there are dozens of patterns and a variety of woods that, with comparatively little extra cost, furnishes just those dainty pleasing touches that mean so much for comfort and coziness. 'Twould surprise you what really can be done with the superior lumber we handle these days and how perfectly substantial a frame house can be built. We want to talk with you about this lumber question before you build and give you the benefit of our years of observation—tell you why frame construction is the best and show you by comparison why we think so. Come in and let's get acquainted.
