What should be done with the Gypsies? These strange people in a strange land seem to have the ability of making a living without labor. All the ordinary man hears about them is that they have robbed his neighbor. They are adepts in the fine art of stealing and they ply their trade in broad day light and plunder the unwary right before his eyes. These people without question are undesirable and if every one who is robbed by them would swear out a warrant for their arrest they might be induced to either seek greener pastures or else to go to work. That they should be allowed to live off the country by pilfering and stealth is a disgrace to this country.

If a private individual owned our power plant he would be industriously seeking to sell all the current he could. This current ought to replace every gas engine in the city and it ought to reach out and furnish power to the farmers surrounding the city. It could be furnished to them for pumping, grinding, churning, cleaning the house, currying the horses and light up the house and barn.

Now that we have a new unit, a splendid equipment, a new council and a united people things ought to hum. This council goes into office with the backing of the entire city a thing that has not happened for many years. Let us sink all difference which we may have had in the past and to a man render all the assistance that we can to make this city efficient in every respect. By pulling together we can make it a happier, better, greater Red Cloud.

President Taft made thirty thousand dollars last year. This amount was his net gain after paying his hired man the maid and one or two detectives. Of course in order to make such a thrifty showing he had to practice the most rigid economy and the household dined principally on baked potatoes and corn bread. Like the prudent man he is investing this little sum in stocks as he verily testified to the assessor back in his home town in Ohio.

And yet we hear the cry every now and then that the president's salary is too small, that he cannot pay the expenses of the White House and come out even. If this be true where did the thirty thousand come from? How much could he save if he were mayor of Red Cloud? After this no poor man need hesitate to place himself unreservedly on the altar of his country.

We have before us the reply which Rev. Payne made to our article of two weeks ago in which we gave our impression of his sermon on Christian Science. We have no desire to engage in a sectarian controversy, neither do we wish to champion the philosophy of any creed or doctrine. There is good in all of them and they are all trying to uplift humanity and to make the old world of ours a happier more peaceful place in which to live. It must always be a cause of regret when one sect turns on another and denounces it instead of fighting the common enemy. The Pilgrim fathers left their home land and settled in a new country just in order that they might worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience and then made life miserable for the quiet unpretentious Quakers who settled in their midst.

We are pleased to know that the orthodox church is doing so much for the poor. This was not brought out in the sermon. As to the word "orthodox" judging by past history it is used to mean anything. In reality "orthodoxy is my doxy and heterodoxy is your doxy."

It may be true that "no orthodox church today in any denomination would think of putting such a doctrine (eternal fire punishment) in its creed" but we wonder if that doctrine has ever been removed from the creeds of the churches already established.

The Apostle Paul was a great preacher but we read that he performed wondrous works of healing and shown by these works that he had had that great experience in life and had heard the call "Go preach the gospel; heal the sick."

It gives us pleasure to learn that the evangelical churches are curing the sick today. Rev. Payne thinks that this healing art is a "dangerous thing in the hands of the ignorant or untrained." If this is true what a terrible calamity it must have been when those ignorant fishermen were turned loose on an unsuspecting public two thousand years ago. How those poor heathen Gentiles must have suffered when they were made well! It is no wonder that most of the early Christians met a violent death.

As far as the reality or unreality of sin is concerned we know nothing. That might have been the one fundamental point of the sermon but to us it had no significance. We had always imagined that if there was anything in the gospel for mankind it was the Good Tidings that the captive was made free and that sin was forgiven and that those who believed were "saved" before Christ died as well as after.

So long as any denomination continues to run down another denomination, which professes to practice the teachings of the same Christ, holds it up to ridicule and scorn, denounces it as dangerous, just so long will men be kept from affiliating with either. We believe in the freedom of conscience and we are perfectly willing to let every sect go about its work in its own way. We also feel free to take exception to any public address, whether from the pulpit or platform, which misrepresents or mistakes facts as we understand them. We may have "missed the point" but we still insist that the command was "preach the gospel; heal the sick."

Youth Had Much to Learn.
An English gentleman once fell from his horse and injured his thumb. The pain increasing, he was obliged to send for a surgeon. One day the doctor was unable to visit the patient, and therefore sent his son instead. "Have you visited the Englishman?" said his father, in the evening. "Yes," replied the young man, "and I have drawn out a thorn which I ascertained to be the chief cause of his agony." "Fool!" exclaimed the father. "I trusted you had more sense; now there is an end to the job."

Needed Encouragement.
The Young Doctor—"They tell me you are noted for encouraging your patients." The Successful Old Doctor—"Yes, Many of my wealthiest patients think they are sick when there is nothing the matter with them--and I always encourage them."

Necessary Change.
Rev Mr. Hillers—"Mistah Johnsing, what for you call dat son of yoh's bank Walton, when he was baptised George Washington?" Mr. Johnson—"Eeence, sah, dat rascal's reputation for veracity made dat change imperative."--Christian Register.

His Birthday Present.
Father--"So, my dear boy, I wish you many happy returns of the day, and as a reward for your diligence and good conduct I will get the dentist to draw that bad old tooth that gives you so much pain!"
