A DEVILISH SIRE.

Who Deliberately Flings His First Born Alive Into a Snow Bank,

And Leaves the Naked Babe to Freeze to Death.

About two weeks ago an item was published in The Bee regarding the discovery in the Republican valley of the dead body of an infant, the evident victim of an infanticide. Later details now reach us of the discovery of the perpetrator of this unnatural crime, and they will cause a thrill of horror in every mother's heart, for they form the history of the most dreadful crime of the kind ever committed within the confines of the state. The history of the affair in brief is as follows:
A man named W. R. Whitney, living about ten miles south of Cambridge, in Furnas county, became engaged to a young woman and subsequently formed relations with her more intimate than legal. Fear of public condemnation spurred him to a sudden marriage with the girl and the two left together for the east and were about some weeks.
On their return they brought with them as far as Orleans a young infant, of which the parents were informed by the young woman was the mother. The next morning after arriving in Orleans they left on the train for the west, their destination being Cambridge. As they neared their destination and the train alighted upon the young man took the baby in his arms, telling his young wife that he was going to give it away and would see her in Cambridge. He then proceeded immediately to the Republican river, which flowed near, without attracting notice, passed on its frozen surface to the opposite side, when he stripped the innocent little babe of its clothing, with the exception of a band about its body, and with devilish coolness threw it into a snow bank. It is supposed that he afterwards burned the clothing, in order that no traces of his crime might be produced in the future. It is also believed that it was his intention to put the babe under the ice in the river, but that the thickness of the ice prevented its doing so.
He then returned to Cambridge, informing the mother that he had given the baby away, and the two kept secret the fact that they were father and mother. They soon after left Cambridge for their home.
A few days subsequent the dead body of the infant was discovered by a party who chanced to be crossing the river at that point and taken into Cambridge, where it created a profound sensation, especially among the wives of the farmers.
Among those who came to see the infant was its young mother, who had not for a moment dreamed that it could be her child. She recognized the body at a glance as that of her child, and, not supposing that her husband would be the guilty party, and forgetting their plans to conceal her indiscretion, gave way to her feelings, and said the babe was hers.
An immediate investigation followed, the result of which was that not a doubt of the husband's guilt was left and he was arrested and taken to Lincoln for safe keeping. His trial will take place at the April term of the Furnas County District Court, to be held in Beaver City.
The murderer is a well-to-do young farmer.

The Henderson Soldiers' Colony Battles Bravely Against Adversity.
An Interview With the Agent.
Mr. F. M. Jamison, president of the Henderson Soldiers' Colony, was met at the Creighton House Thursday evening by a Bee reporter.
He comes to this city to make arrangements with the B. & M. road for grain for the colony, the past season with the colony having been, alike with almost all the farmers in the Republican valley, unproductive.
The colony is situated in Furnas county, two miles above Wilsonville postoffice and twelve miles from Cambridge on the B. & M. road, the nearest railroad station to the new town established by the colony and called Garfield. The colony numbers forty-five families, all of whom had settled before last spring was fairly over. During the winter the colony picked out a site on Beaver creek and founded Garfield.
"The winter was cold and steady with us," said Mr. Jamison, "but by no means so severe as in other parts. We have had plenty of fuel all winter, good ash, selling at three dollars a cord. Our people on the whole are contented, though there are a few who are anxious to leave. If the season had been better last year the colony would have doubled."
"Are you all housed in good shape?" was asked.
"Wall, about one third of the colony have frame houses, the rest being content with sod houses and dug-outs. We are about to have a store and we are in expectation of a post office. We have no meeting house or school yet, but a few prosperous seasons will see us with both."
"Each family has from twenty to fifty acres in good condition, and there are a few who have more. We first planted corn only, but this year we are putting down besides corn—best oats, barley, garden truck and broom corn. The latter is a paying crop, and it is being planted in great quantities. Day by day yesterday we began sowing wheat, so you see we by no means do as you folk in this region. We shall want about two car loads of grain, or over 1,000 bushels. We only ask free transportation for it. You can get it right at fair prices. 'How are you off for water?'"
"The country is very well watered with streams, though we have to go down the creek for our drinking water. Wells require to be sunk from 150 to over 200 feet. It is, however, going down for. No finer water exists. 'Has there been any destitution in your section this winter?'"
"By no destitution, though there have been some cases of poverty. There is no destitution in our section in our part of the state. West of us in Dundy, Hitchcock, Chase and other grazing counties, the cattle men have suffered immensely. Five per cent of the cattle has been destroyed by the cold and the snow."
"Have you made any personal investigation of the fact?"
"Why, it is patent to all around us and up the locks of the Republican river, now that the thaw has come, whole herds of cattle are lying in heaps that have been buried out of sight by the drifts. The storm would drive them here and finally overtake them, when a drift would gather about them and bury the poor creatures out of sight. While the thaw was in progress you would see them gradually appear huddled together, still standing upright, and as the snow melted these would topple over alongside of those that fell when overtaken. These rights and carcasses number in each instance from seventy to over one hundred. Many herdsmen look at the carcasses with a shudder, if you heard of the man who had a herd of 3,000 sheep and who walked to the railroad office with his carpet bag abandoned and covered everything was gone. There are many such."
"You may remember a suggestion by The Herald some time ago to turn your part of the state into a grazing country?"
"Yea, but that is all nonsense. The settlers are coming in too fast for any plan, as it is there is no room for it. We had a fight this winter with the herdsmen on allowing cattle to run at large and beat them. We are paying close attention to this and having the law enforced on this sort of business. We settlers require it in self-protection."

THE RIVER RISING.

The Swell in the Stream Begins this Afternoon in Earnest.

The river is rising rapidly. Up to noon Friday, since three o'clock yesterday afternoon, there has been a rise of only four inches, but about one o'clock the flood began pouring down and the rising of the stream became perceptible to the eye.
About the bridge the river has yet risen only a few inches, but the river will have risen considerably over a foot.
An incipient ice gorge has formed about eighty feet north of the ferry boat "Undine," of the ice described yesterday. It may, however, prove the nucleus for one more respectable in a few days. The ice on the opposite side of the river began to break to-day, but it was only carried to a point opposite the gorge first described, where it began a gorge on its own right. None of the thickest ice has yet given way, though if the torrents of water continue pouring down through the night it will no doubt be adhered to pieces in the rise.
About the bridge the river is as little indicative of a thaw as it was weeks ago. This may be accounted for from the fact that in the immediate neighborhood of the bridge, at least on the north side, there are not the shallow streams and air holes along the shore so noticeable farther up. The ice is very solid about the bridge and this fact will prove of great moment when the grand break comes. The ice for a great distance above the bridge will long have broken up before that about the bridge gives way. It is safe to say the ice immediately above the bridge will be all the way across of the most solid.
From an inspection of this locality it would appear to be of the greatest advantage to endeavor to break a channel to a point below the bridge from each of the gorges mentioned. That an enormous gorge will form about three hundred feet above the bridge is beyond doubt, as can be plainly seen by the ice.
The ice about the Undine has been loosened so that she may be spared any violent tussle with the flood.
The U. P. passenger trains eastward and westward, passed over the new track west of Fremont yesterday.
Information has been received at B. & M. headquarters that the ice went out of the lower Platte last night. Dispatches received last night from Yankton stated that the river was stationary, but that a heavy rise was coming down from Pierre.
"The St. Joe train arrived late this morning, and the U. P. train was late in getting out this afternoon.
Commencing Monday, March 26th, the Lincoln express train on the B. & M. No. 3 leaving Omaha 6:55 p. m. and No. 4 arriving at 10:55 a. m. will be discontinued until further notice. These trains are removed temporarily during the present condition of the Platte, which renders the running of the night train dangerous. Of course the removal of one of these trains necessitates the removal of both.

THE OMAHA NAIL WORKS

And the Omaha Building Contractors.

A Full and Complete Endorsement by the Men Who Drive Nails for the Men Who Make the Nails.
The following document speaks for itself in no uncertain tone. Its signatures will be recognized as those of the men who do the contracting for buildings erected in this city and vicinity, and settles beyond doubt any question as to the superiority of the nails made by the Omaha Nail Works:
We, the undersigned, contracting carpenters and builders, of the city of Omaha, Nebraska, testify that we have used and are now using the nails made by the Omaha Iron and Nail Company, and cheerfully offer our testimony that they are first-class in every respect, also are clean and full weight as guaranteed by the company:
ROSENBERG & Bro., A. W. Phelps, A. McKinstry, Geo. C. Bassett, R. C. Flint, R. Stevens, Edward Ansonow, A. H. Donckew, W. W. Hamann, J. H. Fries & Co., H. H. Dorsey, Charles Gardner, M. McAvoy, Chas. Taylor, Bolton, Dutton & Co. C. P. Simmonds, J. W. Miller, John H. Butler, H. F. Hamann, A. F. Gross, C. Lawrence, Geo. W. Miller, W. W. Troughton, Fred. Doolan, C. F. Goodman, Refrigerator Factory, Geo. F. Labagh, Storekeeper, U. P. R. R. James Haynes, Andrew Graber, G. S. Stevenson & Co. J. M. Counsman.
The vast amount of building that is to be done this year, not only in Omaha but in all parts of the west, has given a corresponding boom to the nail trade, and our Omaha nail works are now preparing to meet this demand.
Up to July, 1880, Omaha nails were made from what is known as small scrap-iron, but the improved, heavy machinery then introduced changed the process, and the heaviest railroad rails are now being used almost exclusively.
This material universally acknowledged to be A No. 1, because it has the advantage of being of the best iron thoroughly and systematically wrought.
Improvements, which will be made that will add vastly to the superiority of these nails, which, for the last nine months, have been acknowledged to be the best in the market. This is proposed that the Omaha Nail Company shall, with true Omaha enterprise, lead in the markets of the west for honest quality. This they have done in the past by keeping, not only up with the advance of the day in machinery and other essentials, but a little ahead of that advance.
The Omaha Iron and Nail Co.'s works can successfully compete with the largest eastern factories, because the iron here used would otherwise have to pay freight for shipment to the Pittsburgh market. Eastern prices are paid for labor, in all departments, heating, rolling and cutting. A great advantage in quality is secured by the Wyoming coal, which alone is used in the furnaces. This coal, unlike the eastern soft coal, is almost free from sulphur, and this fact causes, not only a superiority in the product, but also a large saving on iron. The sale of the iron is taken care of from the furnace to the Smelting Works is an advantage possessed by no other factory, and about offsets the extra cost of the superior coal.
To still further economize the cost of production, a new train of rolls, called break-down rolls, made by the Omaha Foundry and Machine Company with Totten & Co.'s patent rollers, will be placed in position within four weeks.
This new process insures a superior quality for the nail, as it gives a double weld that absolutely prevents the nail from splitting, which, as every man who ever drove nails knows, is the great objection to all nails made by the ordinary process. This system also gives a more perfect plate, thus saving the waste of material, which is usually a very considerable item.
Four engines, aggregating four hundred horse power, are used. The 40 horse power engine used to drive the cutting machines has been taken out and a new 100 horse power has been put in its place, so that all machines can be added to an almost unlimited extent. The thirty-two inch rollers required will probably be doubled in number before a year passes, as the home demand is rapidly increasing.
A new cooper shop fitted with the latest improved machinery, is contracted for so that excellent hardwood kegs can be produced in quantities as required at small cost, and thus the percentage of expense for production of the manufactured article is constantly being reduced; hence, the Omaha Nail Company is offering the most favorable position possible in that most important particular. In thirty days hence the cost of the factory, machinery and improvements contracted for will amount to $65,000. Thus, any one can see that this is a business of importance to our city and the west.
Our buyers will note one very important fact; the heavy eastern freights are largely saved by purchasing of the Omaha Nail Co.
The interested attention of Omaha manufacturers has demonstrated that our home products can successfully compete with the most violent competition.
Our lead works, smelting works, packing house, machine shops, distillery, breweries, barb wire works, fertilizing works, soap works, canning establishments, refrigerator factory, shot factory, and numerous other manufacturers of this city have all prospered and extended their business in many instances to almost the entire exclusion of eastern products, purchasers reasoning justly that a home manufacturer cannot afford to sell a poorer article to home consumers, and that new factories must build up a reputation by furnishing superior goods.
The Omaha Nail Works managers are evidently determined to make a nail that is perfect in every respect.
