SWEET GIRL GRADUATE.

THE REGULAR ROUND OF COMMENCEMENT ESSAY ABOUT TO COMMENCE.

Brooklyn Eagle.

"Could I see the editor?" she asked, looking around for him and wondering what was going on under his table.

"Oh! yes; I'm him," responded the editor, evolving himself, and slipping a cork into his vest pocket. "What can I do for you?"

"I am a student at Parker institute," responded the blushing damsel, "and I have written a little article on 'Our School Days,' which I would like to have published in The Brooklyn Eagle, if you think it good enough."

"Certainly," replied the editor, gazing in unconscious admiration upon the beautiful face before him. "Does it commence, 'Our school days; how the words linger in sweet cadences on the strings of memory!' Is that the way it runs?"

"Why, yes," responded the beaming girl. "Then it goes on, 'How we look forward from them to the time when we shall look back to them!' How do you know?"

"Never mind," said the editor, with the engaging smile which had endeared him to the citizens of Brooklyn. "After that comes 'So sunshiny! So gilded with the pleasures that make youth happy, they have flown into the immutable past and come to us in after life only as echoes in the caves of sweet recollection.' Isn't that it?"

"It certainly is," answered the astonished girl, radiant with delight? "How could you know what I had written?"

"Then it changes from the pianissimo and becomes more tender: 'The shadows gather around our path. The roses of friendship are withering, but may we not hope that they will bloom again as we remember the affection that bound us here and made'"—

"No, you're wrong there, and the soft eyes looked disappointed.

"Is it 'Hope on, hope ever?'" asked the editor.

"That comes in further on. You had it nearly right. It is 'The dun shadows close around us. The flowers of friendship are sleeping, but not withered, and will bloom again in the affectionate remembrance of the chains that bound us so lightly.'"

"Strange that I should have made that mistake," said the editor musingly. "I never missed on one before. From there it goes, 'Schoolmates, let us live so that all our days shall be as radiant as those we have known here, and may we pluck happiness from every bush, forgetting never that the thorns are below the roses, and pitying those whose hands are bruised in the march through life.'"

"That's it!" exclaimed the delighted girl. And then comes 'Hope on, hope ever.'"

"Sure's you're born!" cried the editor, blushing with pleasure, and once more on the right track. "Then it runs: 'And as for you, teachers dear!'"

"Yes, yes, you are right," giggled the girl. "I can't see how you found me out. Would you like to print it?" and her face assumed an anxious shade.

"Certainly," responded the editor. I'll say it's by the most promising young lady of Brooklyn, the daughter of an esteemed citizen, and a lady who has already taken high social rank.

"That finishes the school commencements at one swoop," sighed the editor gloomily, as the fair vision floated out. "Can't see how I made that blunder about the shadows and roses and friendship. Either I'm getting old or some of these girls have struck out something. Here, Swipes, tell the foreman to put this slush in the next tax-sales supplement," and the editor felt in his hair for the cork, and wondered what had happened to his memory.

A Good Deed.

San Francisco Post.

There is nothing so noble and touching as a really spontaneous act of generosity, after all. The other day a rough, careless looking stranger was walking up Mission street, near Sixth, when he observed a lot of hoodlums clustered around the gate of a small farm house, in front of which a poor woman was weeping bitterly, surrounded by her terrified children. A scanty array of household goods on the pavement showed that it was a case of ejectment.

"What are you abusing that woman?" demanded the "man from below," addressing an ill-favored individual who was carrying out the furniture.

"I ain't abusing her," growled the landlord; she can't pay her rent, and I'm going to bounce the whole outfit, that's all."

"I've a good mind to bounce you," said the stranger, indignantly; "what is the amount she owes you?"

"Twenty-two dollars."

"Here, take it out of that," and the angry man took out his wallet and handed over a $100 greenback.

The evictor respectfully turned over a receipt and the change. Forcing an additional "V" on the happy woman, the stranger walked rapidly away.

"Centric cus, that," said the house owner, looking after the philanthropist, musingly.

But the philanthropist said nothing until he turned the corner, when he murmured softly to himself, as he put on a little more pedestrian steam:

"It is no use talking—virtue is its own reward. I couldn't have gotten another such chance to work off that counterfeit in a year."

THE COLLECTORS OF CARDS.

AN EPIDEMIC THAT SPARES NEITHER OLD NOR YOUNG, ÆSTHETE NOR SIMPLE.

New York Sun.

"It seems to have first broken out in Boston," said a scrap book and album manufacturer to a reporter of The Sun about the card-collecting mania. "At least, it was from that city that the great increase in the demand for books first came. New York soon followed; it has broken out with great violence in Philadelphia, and is moving westward like the epizooty. It does not seem to have penetrated the south to any great extent, but it looks as if it would sweep the country. Our house manufactures 200 different styles of card albums, and turns out a thousand a day. We are behind our orders, and yet we are only one house among a dozen here in the business."

The books manufactured by this house for the use of card collectors range in price from 25 cents to $10 apiece, and in quality from common cardboard backs to full morocco, with pages of fine cardboard on which to mount the cards. All sorts of designs embellish the covers—Japanese, Arabesque, Eastlake, and nondescript. On some, silver paroquets sits on gold boughs; some display red palms; blue flowers, and birds of gorgeous plumage sailing in golden skies; some display groupings of cards in various colors; but the most expensive and durable are in plain morocco and gilt.

"We always have had more or less applications for our cards," said a member of a firm that uses a large variety of picture cards for advertising purposes, "but they used to come mostly from school children, and Saturday was the day for the children's visits. But during the last six months card collecting seems to have become a fashionable pursuit with all classes of people. I understand that one of the finest collections in the city has been made by the wife of one of the vice-presidents of the Erie railroad. Another fine collection has been made by the wife of a leading officer of the New York Central road. One of the finest collections I have ever seen was made by an uptown doctor. At first we used to give cards freely to callers, but the pressure became so great that we had to stop the practice. Now we make collections of cards which we sell postage stamps from three cents up. We pay as much as $400r thousand for some fine large oleographs, which are in demand as 'centers' for album pages. When a person comes in for cards we simply hand him a circular giving our terms, and stating that we can attend to applications received by mail only. We still receive many office applications, but the bulk now come by mail. During the past year we have sent out about $6000 worth of cards, There has been a small profit to us on them, while at the same time they bear our advertisements. We buy our cards in such large quantities that we can dispose of them to collectors at a small profit to ourselves, and yet supply them cheaply.'

Every mail brings many letters, inclosing stamps to this house. Most come from New York, Boston and Philadelphia, but some from as far west as Chicago, and as far south as Charleston The firm have cards put up in collections ranging from 3c to $1 a set.

Some few shops put up a notice of "No cards given away," in order to keep off collectors, but most of them are making use of the mania for advertising purposes, and give away cards to draw trade. The cards of invitation issued by many up-town retail stores for their "openings" this spring were beautifully illuminated. A millinery house got up a beautiful card in the shape of two birds of gorgeous plumage, whose wings, when opened, displayed pictures of the latest styles in bonnets. Drug stores receive innumerable applications, but these are mostly from children."

Seekers for the beautiful in art cards have learned that really fine cards are not to be procured by the mere asking. A sort of reciprocity system has sprung up among houses which get out the cards. In order to give variety to the collections which they send out they make exchanges of cards among themselves, each house thus getting the advantage of the connections of the others in sending out advertisements. Care is taken not to disfigure the cards in printing advertisments upon them. The demands of the collectors have created a special business in the supply of cards. It is now a common thing along the thoroughfares to see card peddlers, with their wares spread out in large baskets. The weekly papers are full of advertisements of card dealers. The last issue of The Weekly Sun contained the advertisements of twenty-one firms which make a specialty of supplying cards to collectors.

Great taste is displayed in the making of fine collections. In mounting cards on an album page, a large, fine card must be had for a center, and small cards are arranged on the borders. Pains are taken to mount the cards so that they will harmonize in color and design, and be symmetrical in their arrangement on the page. Collectors become very expert in judging of the quality of cards, and can promptly tell whether a card is German or French, or whether it is an American imitation; how many impressions of color it has received, and what quality of colors has been used. Some of the best collections have as genuine an artistic value in their display of the varieties and excellencies of color printing as collections of prints have in their exhibition of the graver's art. While dealers do not expect the present mania to last, they say that it has done great good by stimulating designers and color printers to do their best work, and by creating a demand for fine-art cards that will be permanent.

The clerks at the post office say that last year not over 5,000 Easter cards passed through the mails; this year there were 60,000.

A Terrible Charge.

Detroit Free Press.

At a Danville hotel dinner-table, conversation turning upon the war, a Richmond (Va.) mercantile traveler, protested against a compliment to the North Carolina confederates, claiming that North Carolina troops were never ready for action except at meal times, and that they wouldn't fight anybody but each other, and then only when there was whisky in camp. "Why," he added, "in one engagement some dismounted Virginia dragoons had to charge right over the backs of a regiment of those cowardly 'tar-heels' who lay flat on their bellies, afraid to get up."

"An' them foot cavalry rid right over the rosin-chawers, did they?" put in an old chap who had been too busy to speak before.

"Right over them!" repeated the drummer, evidently pleased to observe the apparent interest and delight of the odd-looking old gentleman.

"Well," said the old man, "though I'm a Caroliner coon myself, I'm free to icknowledge that them verginians allars did beat h–l a chargin. They'd jist charge right over anything. "Say," he continuen (and even the active waiters stopped to listen), "I've know'd 'em many an' many o' time durin' the war to charge over—over seventy-five cents for a quart o' butter milk!"

"PARDNER, SHAKE."

TWO SOULS WITH BUT A SINGLE THOUGHT.

Louisville Courier Journal.

Murray's barber shop, on Third street, between Green and Jefferson, was the scene yesterday afternoon of a rather remarkable occurrence. Shortly after noon, a rough-looking young man, clothed in a ill-fitting suit of coarse, new jersey, stepped into the barber shop, and, with a degree of awkwardness that was most amusing, seated himself in a chair and announced that he wanted his hair cut and his face shaved "as slick ez er noo dollar."

The queer-looking person, with all his rough appearance, had a remarkably soft, white skin, and had evidently been working somewhere indoors. He had scarcely taken his seat before another young man, about his own age, similarly dressed, and almost as singularly awkward, came in and took another chair, remarking that he also wanted a quick shave and a slick haircut. The tonsorial artist started to work about the same time, and both of them engaged their subjects in conversation.

"You got a mighty fine skin," suggested the barber to queer-looking young man No. 1.

"Well, I should smile," responded that worthy, tipping a knowing wink at his reflection in the looking glass. "I've been to work whar a man ginerally gits a soft skin if he stays thar long enough."

"Been working in a soap factory, I reckon," politely suggested the barber. "I understand that men who are employed about soap-factories generally have pretty complexions and soft skin."

"Well, I hain't been working about no soap-factory, nuther," replied the young man, with a wicked grin.

"Perhaps you are employed in a glycerine factory, then?"

"Well, I hain't been no such thing."

"You don't work in an oil refinery, do you?"

"No, I don't, by golly; but looka hayr, don't you wanta know whar I wurk?"

"I do, indeed. I'm stuck on that skin of yours," replied the barber.

The young man grinned and the barber listened. At length the former said:

"Well, I don't work no whar jest now. I'm from Columbus, Indienonny, and I've been at Jeffersonville ever since trying to prove that I warn't guilty."

"The hell you say," enthusiastically yelled the young man in the other chair, bolting straight up in his seat. "Pardner shake! You ain't got none of the best of me. I just left Frankfort this morning. I went up there five years ago for having a pair of pants on that belonged to a man who stole a house. This 'ere's a picnic; this 'ere is—" and while the barbers stood back in amazement, the discharged convicts embraced each other with a feeling that had a decidedly emotional effect. Aftergetting shaved, they walked off together to get drunk, wondering how they happened to be discharged on the same day, and stumbled into the same barber shop at the same time. They refused to tell their names, but the first one mentioned says that his home is at Columbus, Indiana. The other did not say where he lived.

Dear children, did you ever study the structure of the bumble bee, and notice how wisely nature has provided him with delicate anatomical arrangements, by which he is enabled to propel himself through the air, and protect himself from the changes of climate.

Did you ever stop to think how wisely he has been constructed, and, although small in size, yet perfect in mechanical operation.

First, let us notice the buffalo overcoat which he wears. This enables him to withstand any change of temperature from hot to cold, without catching pneumonia. Then he has a buff vest which he can wear to picnics, and a dark, seal-brown style of pants.

See also the soft, velvety covering to his foot. This enables him to meander softly up the pant leg of the young man who puts up the picnic swing.

Then again, if you look closely at the bumble bee and tickle him with a straw, you will see a protuberance on him which he uses as a glad surprise. When the exercises lag a little, and he desires to throw a little variety into the proceedings, he takes his mirth-provoking little instrument out of his pocket and sharpens it on his boot. Then he steals up to the young man with the striped pants and clocked socks, and waits for the regular order of business, so that he can introduce his bill.

Then when the young man looks far out across the waving green of the fragrant meadows, and says to the blonde girl with the Swiss muslin dress, "O, Peri of North America, fairer than all the grand aggregation of living wonders, queen of my heart and acting assistant general manager of my glorious ultimately, did not ever ponder on the great wide rolling sea of life's tempestuous hitherto, or cast your longing eyes upon the bright-hued promise in the all pregnant contiguously, and then consider how adown life's inveterate perspicuity, unflecked by storm cloud, we two shall glide athwart the woof of efflorescent consanguinity—"

Then the bumble bee gets the speaker's eye and introduces his bill. The young man rises to a point of privilege, and he does it so earnestly, and looks so wild and agitated, that most everyone thinks he is going mad.

When a bumble bee has vaccinated a man, the best thing to do is to put the hot place on ice.

Bumble bees like to roll up their pants legs and wade around in the syrup, and then come out and walk over an oil painting.

In picking up one of these birds, the best thing to do it with is a pair of red hot tongs or a pair of sheet iron mittens.

The only existing remedy for every species of Acute or Chronic Disease of the Organs of Respiration, and an absolute SPECIFIC FOR CONSUMPTION!
THIS all-powerful vegetable preparation expels from the lungs and air passages, the mucus and muco-pus produced by pulmonary inflammation, heals the irritated membranes, and renovates every organ which utilizes the breath of Life. It contains no stupefying poison, and is in all respects a healthful medicine. The rapidity and certainty with which it is astonishing. Its effects go deeper than the mere symptoms of pulmonary disease and discharges the cause from the system. Free and painless expectoration is the mode by which it relieves the lungs, chest and throat from the burdens which oppress them; thus arresting Consumption and Bronchitis in the germ before they reach the more dangerous stages. The emaciated sufferer in which it has been administered with entire success as a remedy for every variety of malady which affects the Respiratory Functions, amount to more than at the present date, and yet the preparation is only in the infancy of its usefulness. The great defect of all Cough Remedies hitherto introduced is that they are simply expulsory. Hence they are useless; for unless the causes of the acrid secretions which are coughed up are removed, and the ruptured, inflamed or maturated surfaces healed and restored to their natural tone, a cure is impossible. Fritsch's Prussian Cough Syrup accomplishes these objects. The mucus and muco-pus which are the consequence of Lung Disease, are thrown off by its while at the same time it soothes and invigorates the weakened tissues.
ANNIHILATES A COUGH

USE FOREST LEAF & JUNIPER KIDNEGEN, THE GREAT KIDNEY REGULATOR AND DIURETIC.
TRADE MARK

KIDNEGEN is highly recommended and unsurpassed for Weak or Foul Kidneys, Dropsy, Bright's Disease, Loss of Energy, Nervous Debility, or any Obstructions arising from Kidney or Bladder Diseases. Also for Yellow Fever, Blood and Kidney Poisoning, in infected malarial sections.

By the distillation of a FOREST LEAF with JUNIPER BERRIES and BARLEY MALT, we have discovered KIDNEGEN, which acts specifically on the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, removing injurious deposits formed in the bladder and preventing any straining, smarting sensation, heat or irritation in the membranous lining of the ducts or water passage. It excites a healthy action in the Kidneys, giving them strength, vigor, and restoring these organs to a healthy condition, showing its effects on both the color and easy flow of urine. It can be taken at all times, in all climates and under all circumstances without injury to the system. Unlike any other preparation for Kidney difficulties, it has a very pleasant and agreeable taste and flavor. It has been difficult to make a preparation containing positive diuretic properties which will not nauseate, but be acceptable to the stomach. Before taking any Liver medicine try a bottle of KIDNEGEN to CLEANSE the Kidneys from foul matter. Try it, and you will always use it as a family medicine. Ladies especially will like it, and gentlemen will find KIDNEGEN the best Kidney Tonic ever used.

NOTICE.—Each bottle bears the signature of LAWRENCE & MARTIN, also a proprietary government stamp, which permits KIDNEGEN to be sold (without license) by druggists, grocers and other persons everywhere.

PUT UP IN QUART SIZE BOTTLES FOR GENERAL AND FAMILY USE.

If not found at your druggist's or grocer's, we will send a bottle prepaid to the express office to you.
