There was to-day a strong and fairly active market for staple cotton goods and new business, coupled with deliveries on account of back orders, reached an important aggregate amount. Further attention was given to hosiery and shirts and draw-ors by neckage husers and start weakness. Washington.

The Iron Trade. Philadelphia Press.

We have again to report a week of depression as regards prices, although the volume of business appears to in- Cathedral, crease rather than otherwise. The position is an enigma to everyone. A demand of an almost unprecedented proportions, prices down to or below cost, yet the market is gradually weakening. No satisfactory explana-tion can be given for such a state of prices will improve, or must improve, but they don't. Without pretending to explain something which others fail to explain, we cannot avoid the impression that the weakness is largely due to foreign competition. A total importation of upward of 250,000 tons during the first four months of the year, large quantities afloat, and negotiations for still heavier lots pending, are facts which furnish food for serious reflection. Then again, the condition of the English iron trade is growing worse, stocks increasing, consumption decreasing, and Continental markets closing their doors to British products. It should not be a surprise under such circumstances to find English iron-masters unloading here. Prices obtained certainly seem low and it is declared that transactions have been at a heavy loss to sellers, but it seems quite likely that still greater loss would be incurred by holding. In the absence of any better theory we conclude that our market is over-weighted by Great Britain, and unless some other outlet can be found the United States will have to take the surplus at some price. It may do very well to decry the quality of foreign iron, but the fact is beyond question, gone out on strike. It is, therefore, ance upon the Sangerfest, Mr. Burkhardt in one sense true that American formerly lived in this city. furnaces cannot furnish all the iron for which there is a consumptive demand. What proportion they will furnish depends entirely upon the difference in prices. It is not unlikely that we are alread at the price, working up to full capacity. A try to Omaha yesterday. Outside of heavier demand would increase east, the slight inconvenience occasioned by and a falling off may be necessary to the dust, the streets were in excellent so far reduce it, that our iron-masters may be again placed in a position to meet foreign competition. The labor Half the population seemed to be on market in this great country is exceedingly sensitive, and with an abundance of remunerative employment, such as now exists, it is impossible to produce iron at lower rates than are now current.
