

THE ALBANY GAME.

Continuance of the Balloting, in Which Pairs are Declared No Good.

Prospect of a Close of the Contest this Week.

Two More Ballots With No Result.

THE JOINT CONVENTION.

ALBANY, June 13.—The early trains this morning brought in large numbers of the country members of the legislature.

The official total joint ballot for a successor to Conkling was: Wheeler 16, Conkling 24, Cornell 8, Lapham 6, Jacobs 26, Folger 2, Tremain and Bradley 1, Rogers 12; total 99.

The official total joint ballot for Platt's successor resulted as follows: Depew 36, Platt 21, Kernan 27, Cornell 6, Crowley 3, Lapham 2, Folger 3; total 98.

Spinoza's resolution was called up after the announcement of the result of the first joint ballot and read.

Robertson took the floor and said he favored the resolution so far as it would prevent pairing and should be confined to that he would favor that. Husted asked Spinoza to withdraw the preamble.

Spinoza accepted the Husted's suggestions. Robertson said if at any time it became necessary that leave of absence should be granted to any member he would have no difficulty in obtaining it.

Brooks raised a point of order that as the resolution would make a new rule it should lie over one day. The chair decided that the parliamentary law was against the point raised by Brooks.

Madden said the rule should be adopted. It would be but just to those who meant to remain and vote, those who had remained and refused to pair, and those who choose to go away, and simply defeated all effort of action of those who remained at their post.

Spinoza thought the resolution should pass its direct effect would be to expedite the business of the session. Without some such rule absentees could delay an election until such delay would defeat at least an election at this session.

Pratt said the resolution, if it passed and hurried up the election of a senator, would help Democrats who had nothing apparently to gain from any delay.

Husted favored the original resolution. Sharpe thought the law of congress governed the proceedings.

Pitts said the pairing was being used to either delay or defeat, or at least impede, an election to the wrong of the people of the state. Members should stay, for if the attendance on Saturday been full an election would probably have been secured to fill one of the vacancies.

Drapers opposed the resolution, as he thought the conference had no power to enforce it. He favored the convention recording an expression against pairing or absentism, and thought that it would have the desired effect.

Carpenter asked that the resolution be amended so as not to annul the existing rules, and that Spinoza thought the statement that the convention had not power to make such rules as it desired for its government, was ridiculous and hoped the resolution would be adopted.

In order to allow existing pairs to expire before the adoption of the resolution it was by common consent allowed to be over till to-morrow. At 1:05 on the morning of Mr. Davenport the convention adjourned. The voting to-day was uneventful and showed no suggestive changes.

Bellevee Burglarized.

On Saturday evening a hard-looking man was observed going south on the railroad track, and a little after dark the same person was seen going round town, looking up alleys and in windows, but no one paid much attention to him. But about 2 o'clock Sunday morning the daughter of the postmaster was awakened by some one pushing open her chamber door. She called out and asked what was the matter, thinking some of the family had been taken ill. The person made no reply, but deliberately turned and then down stairs and backed into the kitchen, appearing to be in no hurry. The daughter then went to her father's room and awoke him. He got up and went down stairs, but the bird had flown. Further investigation showed that the thief had tried to get into the postoffice through the window, and, failing in that attempt, had gone around and gained an entrance through the back kitchen window.

TWISTED TROUBLE.

Receive for that Golden Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, a thousand thanks. I suffered for many years with rheumatic pains in my limbs, my legs were drawn together, and people called me "crooked Haertel." I used St. Jacobs Oil, and was cured, and now feel so well that I think I could dance as in my young days. JOHN HARTTEL, Fremont, Ill.

ESTRAY.

Taken up by the undersigned on May 15th, 1881, on my farm at Pleasant City, Neb., one will mare pony 7 years old, branded with a star on the left hip, and a white hind feet, no other marks. W. H. WILSON.

The Lorillard Brothers.

The two Lorillard brothers, Pierre and George, are clear ahead of all rivals as turf men. Neither can be called a sporting man, in the common sense, but both are ardent lovers of the particular sport of horse racing, and it may be said that they are proud of the eminence they have reached as owners of fine horses and patrons of the turf. Belmont, who was at the front in the same way not many years ago, seems to have fallen to the rear. His interest in racing has not diminished, but the prestige of his stable has gone down, and the Lorillards now carry the chief honors in turf circles.

There is a great deal of rivalry between them, but it is entirely of a friendly sort. Pierre's stable ranks highest, but George's is only a little lower. At the close of the season last year it was said that Pierre's stable had cleared him over $100,000. It is said that he expects to do even better this year, though of course racing, like matrimony, is not always a safe thing to discount. But the Lorillards need not care much whether their stables bring in any money or not. They naturally prefer to make them pay, but even if they did not pay, it would not make much difference, so far as bank accounts are concerned. Their great tobacco business goes on as it did before they became turf patrons, and their estate, one of the largest in New York, grows more valuable every year. A large part of it is located in the best business quarters and has trebled and quadrupled in value since the founder of the house of Lorillard invested his surplus profits in it. Their real estate income alone would enable the Lorillards to live royally, even if they gave up business altogether, and their stables did not bring them a dollar.

Hamilton County Alliance.

AVON, HAMILTON COUNTY, Neb., June 13.—At a meeting of the County Alliance of Hamilton county, called for June 11th, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: RESOLVED: That we hold an Alliance convention to elect candidates to fill the several offices that may be vacated this fall.

Hamilton county farmers are thoroughly aroused and are organizing an alliance in almost every school district. They will do all they can to correct the abuses inflicted by monopolies and political rings. Members of all the political parties have forsaken their respective parties and joined the alliance.

Ang Bang.

Fashions change gradually, unless they did they would not be followed, for suddenness would demonstrate their absurdity. The revolution that they make are not obvious until they have been regarded through a series of years. The feminine mode of wearing the hair at present is a fair illustration.
