A Court Keeping Cool.

There was an air of funereal stillness about the police court yesterning, that betokened little business. Judge Beneke occupied his usual place on the bench, and made a violent effort to keep cool. The policemen and most of the audience contented themselves in the same way. There were only two cases on the docket and these were for disturbing the peace. ## Having a Salutary Effect.

The police generally seem to think that the new law imposing a fine of $10 and costs in simple cases of intoxication is working a salutary effect upon such portions of the community as are addicted to occasional jamborees. There are fewer arrests for that offense now than before the law was passed. Heretofore $3 or $4 would get a man out of such a scrape, but now it takes over $13.
