THE SPOOPENDYKES.

Mr. S. and His Spouse Undertake a Fishing Excursion. Brooklyn Eagle.

"Say, my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, with a social sort of a grin, "how would you like to go fishing?"

"Wouldn't that be perfectly lovely!" squealed Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I never was fishing in my life, and I always wanted to try it. Where can we go?"

"Well, there are lots of places around Brooklyn. Last summer I saw boys catch a good many fish off the dock at the foot of State Street. We might go there."

"Just the place," conceded Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I'll bet a spoon of thread I get the first shad!" and in her glee Mrs. Spoopendyke waltzed across the room and back again.

Mr. Spoopendyke smiled pleasantly upon his wife, and started out into the yard to get some worms, while Mrs. Spoopendyke rigged herself up for the pending excursion.

"Got any fish sticks?" she asked, as Mr. Spoopendyke returned, rather warm from his exercise.

"I've got some fishing rods, if that's what you mean," replied Mr. Spoopendyke, "but I could only find four worms."

"Can't we break em in two?" inquired Mrs. Spoopendyke, anxiously. "Could if we had a buzz saw," granted Mr. Spoopendyke. "Come along, if you're coming," and thoroughly equipped for the expedition Mr. and Mrs. Spoopendyke set out for the State street pier.

"How long before they bite?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, hoisting her hook out of the water and examining the point of a worm her husband had impaled thereon.

"They'll probably bite at that as soon as they can borrow a step-ladder," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, eyeing the dangling hook. "If you calculate to get any fish, you'd better let that thing down in the water."

"Oh!" said Mrs. Spoopendyke, dropping the hook. "Do you think I could catch a gold fish?" she inquired, after a pause.

"Hi! hold on there, I lost him!" ejaculated Mr. Spoopendyke, firing his hook up toward the Heights.
