

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

The Doctors and His Attendants Agree that He is Getting Along Finely.

But at the Same Time Their Care of the President Does Not Relax in the Least.

Dr. Bliss Says the Bulletins Were Not Rose-Colored, But Represented the True Condition of the President.

WHAT THE DOCTORS SAY.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Considerable comment has been caused by the reports made of the wrangling among the president's court of physicians. The truth of the matter is that some of the other physicians had criticized Dr. Bliss' treatment and Mrs. Garfield was worried thereby.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—7:30 a. m.—Dr. Bliss left at 6:30. He stated that the president was better than at any time since the shooting, his pulse was less than 100, respiration and temperature normal, and his condition in every way favorable.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—6 a. m.—The president still sleeps. Mrs. Garfield arose at 4:30 and has been at the bedside. Senor Scammon, the Mexican minister, was the first inquirer and has just left, much gratified at the favorable news.

THE MOST COMFORTABLE NIGHT YET. No official bulletin until 9 a. m. The night was a night of hope and the morning almost brings assurance. The president rested easily, and as naturally as if in ordinary health.

His mind is clear and vigorous, and if he feels any pain he lets no one know it. With his pulse at a hundred and temperature normal, it is but natural to expect that this day will be the most comfortable he has yet passed.

Surgeon-General Barnes, who has just come from the sick room, says that last night was the best he has experienced since the shooting.

An official bulletin just issued is as follows: "The president has passed a most comfortable night and has slept well. His condition remained throughout as favorable as when the last bulletin was issued. The pulse is becoming less frequent and is now 98; temperature, 98, and respiration 23."

SECRETARIES WINDOM AND KIRKWOOD and Postmaster General and Mrs. James came to the white house at 9 a. m. Mrs. James will spend the day with Mrs. Garfield. The cabinet officers mentioned remained long enough to be assured by the morning bulletins, and then went away to the duties of their general departments.

10:30 a. m.—The president has moved himself slightly in the bed without causing severe pain. He speaks of his recovery as a sure thing and Mrs. Garfield has the same feeling.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Mrs. Edson, the nurse who sat up with the president last night, has gone home to rest. As she left the white house she said she had a very comfortable night indeed. He had taken nourishment frequently, not much at a time to be sure, but in encouraging quantities.

Dr. Barnes, surgeon-general, states that a change for the better has been remarkable, and nothing but the wonderful constitution and will-power of the president could have wrought it. All was done that could be done, but matters looked dark on Monday night and the way was bright.

Dr. Rayburn has been rather hopeful of a final and successful issue with a happy change. He does not expect that there will be no more dangerous features in the case, or even that fatal effects are impossible, but he has strong faith in present evidences, and hopes that the worst will soon be over.

A prominent local physician who thinks most people are in too great haste either to kill or cure the president says: "You don't recollect or may not know that such a wound as his has its ups and downs amongst its symptoms of a most decided character. When symptoms are bad you don't seem to be taking into consideration anything but the fact that you must publish without any explanation or without qualification. When symptoms are good you do something on the other side. Out of this growth the constantly changing public feeling that the president is going to live it out, at one hour, and that he is going to die at the next. Now, the wound is a most dangerous one, and the president's condition is very critical. A change either one way or the other unless it is a rapid sinking does not demonstrate anything. It will be three weeks, I think, before the president can be regarded as out of danger."

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Mrs. Garfield is the only person, except doctors and nurses and Gen. Swain, who are allowed to enter the president's room at will. The other ladies, wives of the cabinet officers and intimate friends, are permitted occasional visits to the room, one or two at a time. Whenever Mrs. Garfield goes into the room she welcomes her with a smile, and she invariably speaks to him encouragingly. The surgeons do not remain continuously in the president's room. They can, they say, judge better of the case by staying away, except when they make an examination, and then they compare it with the last time what it was at their last visit. A good portion of the time one of the ladies is allowed to remain in the room to fan the president. Mrs. Blaine frequently relieves Mrs. McVeagh at the bedside, and she is relieved in turn by one of the other ladies. The president is inclined to talk to visitors more than the doctors think for the best, and he always talks in a cheery way. In response to an inquiry as to how he felt he said, "My good friends be of good cheer, I mean to pull through and I will."

Commissioner Dudley, who is an intimate friend, was admitted last night to the president's room. He was recognized and beckoned to the bed. "Dudley, I am glad to see you," was the remark of the sick man. "I know you have come here to see Garfield and not the president." Still addressing Mr. Dudley, he said: "I am very anxious to live indeed and if necessary I could let them cut off my limbs inch by inch. Still, if I have to die I am ready to go. Keep your courage up." The president frequently chats and jokes with those about his bedside. Col. Rockwell and Judge Swain are his most constant attendants, although Private Secretary Brown goes in every few minutes, when the rush of business by which he is surrounded will permit.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—7:30 a. m.—Dr. Bliss left at 6:30. He stated that the president was better than at any time since the shooting, his pulse was less than 100, respiration and temperature normal, and his condition in every way favorable.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—6 a. m.—The president still sleeps. Mrs. Garfield arose at 4:30 and has been at the bedside. Senor Scammon, the Mexican minister, was the first inquirer and has just left, much gratified at the favorable news.

The Land Bill Succeeding—Strong Demand for Retail Duties in England.

A Cry for Tariff Reciprocity—The Cornell Crew's Mishap.

LONDON, July 5.—Few people share Mr. Gladstone's confidence that parliament will adjourn in the first week in August, but every body agrees that the land bill is going smoothly since the government secured precedence for it over all other business. The subject of a teaching fair, gives less trouble than was expected. The Parnellite opposition is no longer formidable; the house now pays little attention to Parnell or his satellites, but looks to Mr. Shaw and Charles Russell as sufficient authorities on Irish radical views. The government, though often unable to accede to their proposals, finds no difficulty in dealing with them frankly. The conservatives have practically abandoned opposition, such guerrillas as Mr. Chaplin and Lord Randolph Churchill excepted.

THE NEW GREEK FRONTIER. The Greek debate in the house of lords on Thursday was remarkable for the agreement of Earl Granville representing the government, Lord Salisbury representing the opposition, and Lord Rosebery representing the active English friends of Greece, all three considering the present frontier either satisfactory or the best attainable under the present circumstances.

REPARATORY DUTIES. Reports from various parts of the kingdom indicate that retaliatory reciprocity theories are making converts among manufacturers, both employed and operatives. A correspondent affirms that the conservative leaders have been seriously considering, since the Preston election, the advisability of adopting reciprocity as a party cry. Their local agents in manufacturing districts are strongly urging this policy. The same authority says that Lord Salisbury supports the proposal and intends, during the autumn to declare his views publicly. Other Tory chiefs, recognizing the impossibility of taxing wheat, fear the effect on farmers of the adoption of a protective policy benefitting manufacturers exclusively.

THE GREAT PERPLEXITIES. The growing irritation on questions arising out of the French treaty, combined with the obvious reluctance of the French negotiators to make any serious concessions, and the hostile tone of the French minister of commerce, equally favor the reciprocity movement. Mr. Tirard's declaration favoring the modification of English free-trade doctrines for the purpose of self-defense.

ENGLAND AND THE SILVER MOVEMENT. The Economist, referring to the announcement of the willingness of the Bank of England to resume the purchase of silver for the issue department if suitable arrangements are made by France and the United States, says that every creditable man in England, and every supposed that the bank proposes any large operation in silver. It will buy only such amounts and on such terms as insure profit. The same journal advocates the sending of Mr. Goschen to the Paris monetary conference, but reaffirms that each country must judge for itself whether to employ one or two metals.

THE BRIGHTON RAILWAY MURDER. The police believed last night that they had trustworthy information of Lefroy's whereabouts, the evidence indicating that the Claytons could produce him. Later they received the astonishing announcement that Lefroy intended to appear voluntarily to-day. Witnesses at the coroner's inquest at Balmombe testify that every road near Balmombe and every railway station on the Brighton and other lines were watched. Orders were sent by the police, that if Lefroy took the train on the road from any point for Balmombe not to arrest him, but to accompany him, and allow him to travel with freedom, but if he passed Balmombe to arrest him instantly. The inquest opened this morning. Nothing has been heard of Lefroy at the police headquarters. The police say they neither believe nor disbelieve his reported intention, but they are perfectly confident that they will capture him if he is alive. They feel certain that he has not got abroad and that he is near home. The inquest prevails in Scotland Yard at the general criticisms on police inefficiency. Hence the detectives are using measures previously unknown in England, and of doubtful legality. One high authority declares that it may be necessary to enforce a house-to-house search if Lefroy is not otherwise found. It is admitted that no theory of facts yet advised clears up the mysterious points in the case. The public interest is unabated.

THE CORNELL CREW. I know no ground for the allegation that the Cornell crew were unfairly treated, in the foul between them and the London crew on Thursday. The umpire's decision showed both equally to blame; hence, a fresh start was ordered. The Cornell crew again started badly, but were very easily beaten, losing the race from inferiority of style and place, as most carmen predicted they would. No hostility was shown by the public, but marked cordiality, the crowd cheering. The fiasco to-day, when in the match with the Hartford crew the Cornell men ran into the bank, shows sufficiently that something was wrong with their steering. If they wish to vindicate their reputation as carmen, they will have no difficulty in making a dozen matches. No first-class English four would think them dangerous.

THE FASTER ON HIS THIRTY-NINTH DAY. National Associated Press. CHICAGO, July 6.—Griscom started in on the thirty-ninth day of his fast at noon to-day, feeling badly used up from the heat but still cheerful and confident of his ability to hold out. He now weighs 154½ pounds, a loss of 42½ pounds since beginning. He is two pounds lighter than yesterday. Pulse, 72; respiration, 14; temperature, 98.
