

A SCOUT'S STORY.

An Incident Recalled by a Visitor to Harper's Ferry.

The Historic Spot and Its Surroundings.

Special Cor. Philadelphia Press.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. Va., August 10.—Harper's Ferry and its environment have been so often described and its historical associations so frequently narrated that it would be difficult to say any novel in reference to it. Very early in the century the beauty and picturesque quality of its river and mountain scenery were graphically depicted by Thomas Jefferson, and since then the John Brown raid and Stonewall Jackson's exploits have added historical and romantic interest to the bright, flashing rivers which join each other at the edge of the town and to the huge cliffs which overhang it. Harper's Ferry is surrounded with battle-fields; within a radius of less than twenty-five miles during the "late unpleasantness" no less than ten hard-fought battles took place. For four years the sound of artillery was nearly as familiar to the ears of its inhabitants as the crowing of the cock in a country barnyard. It heard the thunders of artillery at South Mountain, Antietam, Monocacy and Opequan. A sad, melancholy, deserted-looking place it is now. Like Yorktown, the cruel wounds of war have never been healed, and its only glories are in its ruins and its memories.

Harper's Ferry is now in West Virginia, being in Jefferson, the extreme eastern county of that rugged new state. For years it was a source of discontent to the neighboring gentry and they were, without their own consent, cut off from their old mother state, but many events of late years have made them entirely reconciled to their fate.

Quite an interest, however, is still maintained here in the politics of Old Virginia. Coming along from Baltimore the merits of Cameron and Daniel were warmly discussed, and I had some conversation with an intelligent supporter of the former whose statements somewhat surprised me. He will write further on this as soon as I can visit Harrisburg.

THE STORY OF A DARING SCOUT.

Some years ago, whilst waiting for the eastward bound train at Harper's Ferry, I had a most interesting interview with one of the scouts that penetrated the federal lines here just before the capture of the place by Stonewall Jackson. As well as I remember, his name was Tabb—a tall, lithe, keen-eyed Virginian, with a strong, aggressive-looking chin, yet soft-toned and low-voiced. He told me of his adventures, the eventful night when he was sent in, really as a spy instead of acting in his legitimate business as a scout. His directions were to get into Harper's Ferry (where he was slightly acquainted with one or two Southern sympathizers) and ascertain as near as possible the number and position of the garrison, and also particularly to find out about their morale. He was dressed in Federal uniform with high cavalry boots, which he had recently captured.

Passing by two or three narrow escapes from cavalry videttes, in our narrative I will endeavor to give as nearly as possible his account of his adventures in finally getting within the federal lines. He was endeavoring to enter the town from the west. From about 9 o'clock at night till 11 he made futile efforts to get past the infantry pickets—for the town was thoroughly picketed, and all were on the alert. At length he got down to the river bank, but saw some distance in front of him a sentinel upon his verge. A daring idea then seized him. Potomac here is very wide, but not deep in the summer or the early part of the autumn. It was the night of the 12th of September, 1862. He determined, with the assistance of a short pole that had come into his possession (the river bottom is full of stones and current very rapid) to wade out in the middle of the stream and come to shore below the pickets. Bending over until the water actually splashed into his face, and stumbling over the rocky bed in such a way that he often feared the noise of his boots upon the stones would be heard on shore, several times nearly losing his footing, and his ears bewildered almost by the noisy bawling of the rapid stream, he yet succeeded without being discovered in reaching the bank very near the town, and just beneath the track of the Baltimore and Ohio road. Here, almost exhausted, concealed by the bank and slight railroad embankment, he paused to rest and listen before boldly venturing upon the shore. Above him on the other side of the river, a great somber shadow, black as Erebus, seemed toward the top, where camp-fires on the further side faintly gleamed. The Maryland pieces of artillery. The brave Colonel Davis, who had so alarmed our friend the scout, escaped, and he cut his way through with his command only to meet a soldier's death at the bloody cavalry fight of Brady Station in the following June. Cured of Drinking.
"A young friend of mine was cured of an insatiable thirst for liquor, which had so prostrated him that he was unable to do any business. He was entirely cured by the use of Hop Bitters. It allayed all that burning thirst; took away the appetite for liquor; made his nerves steady, and he has remained a sober and steady man for more than two years, and has no desire to return to his cups; I know a number of others that have been cured of drinking by it. From a leading R. R. official, Chicago, Ill. (Times) Aug 18-81.

Worthy of Praise.
As a rule we do not recommend patent medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, than we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. Electric Bitters are truly a most valuable medicine, and will surely cure Biliousness, Fever and Ague, Stomach, Liver and Kidney complaints, even where all other remedies fail. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend to all. Sold at 50 cents a bottle at J. & M. Mahon.

MISS PINNEO.

Interesting Interview With the Champion Horse-woman.

A Race Arranged with Mrs. Burke at Omaha in September.

Correspondence of The Denver Republican.

"Miss Pinneo," said a Republican reporter who happened to be in Greeley yesterday, and had called on the young lady, "no doubt you realize that you are, as it were, the daughter of the state of Colorado, and that the people of the state are always deeply interested in whatever they may hear from you of you. If you will grant it, they would be pleased to know what races you have in contemplation, with whom, upon what conditions, and whatever other information concerning yourself you may be willing to give."

Now, Miss Minnie 'was at home in a little parlor, cosy and homelike; wasn't feeling very well; just recovering from a protracted, but not serious illness, which first came upon her while in Leadville attending her last race. Notwithstanding this, she kindly consented to talk a little. "During the races at Omaha, on September 3, I shall ride a ten-mile race against Miss Nellie Burke of Nebraska. I am not acquainted with this lady, but have heard that she is an excellent horse-woman, having ridden several successful races. For this race there will be a purse of $2,000—$1,000 on a side. At present I am not aware that I shall ride any other race this fall. My father is now in the east, and may have made arrangements for others that I do not know of."

It will be remembered that immediately after the Pinneo-Curtis race in Denver Miss Curtis challenged Miss Pinneo to ride her a race somewhere in Kansas. Colorado's horsewoman accepted the challenge and a race was then arranged for, to come off some time during the fall on the Topeka race track. In answer to a question concerning this Miss Pinneo said: "The time for this race has not yet been agreed upon. I am, however, willing and anxious to ride it whenever it may be convenient to Miss Curtis. It is possible my father will see Miss Curtis or her friends while he is east, and that they will agree upon a time when we shall meet on the track at Topeka."

Just here in the conversation something was said about rumors of one kind and another, when Miss Pinneo became quite earnest and talked as though she meant what she was saying. "It has been reported," continued she, "that Miss Belle Cook, the well-known Californian, has challenged me to ride a race with her, and that I have not accepted. This is not true. I have myself a standing challenge to Miss Cook to ride a race of ten or more miles at any time, at any place and for any sum of money within reasonable limits. I have published this, and she has not seen fit to accept."

It is evident that Miss Pinneo considers herself the best horsewoman in the United States to-day, and will only be too glad to demonstrate this, upon any and every opportunity.

ORDINANCE NO. 473.

An ordinance creating the office of city scavenger, and prescribing the duties of the same. Address all communications to the City Clerk, at the City Hall, Omaha, Neb. Sec. 1. The mayor shall, within ten days after the passage of this ordinance, and annually thereafter, on the first Monday in April of each year, by and with the advice and consent of the city council, appoint a city scavenger, who shall be promptly to remove all dead animals that may be in, or upon the avenues, streets, alleys or other public grounds of the city of Omaha, and there shall be the limits of said city, and there shall be the same in some inoffensive manner, and who shall before entering upon the duties of his said office, give a bond with good and sufficient security, to be approved by the mayor, in the amount of one thousand dollars, conditioned on the faithful discharge of said duties. Sec. 2. There shall be kept at the office of the city clerk a book, in which may be entered by any citizen, notice of the presence of any dead animal in or upon any of said avenues, streets, alleys, or other public grounds, and it shall be the duty of said city scavenger to examine said book daily and immediately to remove and dispose of as aforesaid any dead animal as to which he shall so receive notice. Sec. 3. The city scavenger shall receive as compensation for his said services, the amounts following: That he shall, for each horse, mule, ass, cow or calf, one dollar; for each calf, calf, swine, sheep, goat, or animal of such size, twenty-five cents for each dog, cat, fowl, or other small animal, ten cents. Sec. 4. It shall be unlawful for the owner of any animal to allow the dead body of the same to be or remain upon any avenue, street, alley or other public grounds of said city, and the said city shall be entitled to recover from any person so offending, by appropriate action, the full amount of all expenses, or costs, incurred by said city, through or by reason of such offense. Sec. 5. This ordinance shall take effect and be enforced from and after its passage. THOS. H. DAILEY, Mayor. President City Council.
