

THE DAILY BEE.

OMAHA.

Friday Morning, August 10.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Who are Lippitt, Leak & Co. m-ekw. The Spirit Lake excursion leaves Omaha August 17th at 6 p. m., arriving next morning at half past five.

The "Stout City Route" excursion for Spirit Lake on the 17th seems to be the crowning event of the season. For full information, tickets, &c., for the Spirit Lake excursion, on the 17th, call on Harry Donnell, 14th and Farnam St. aug10-17.

Some walking sign-boards have appeared on the streets. Charles Shiverick is advertising a fine lot of Chamber Suits just received. It will be of interest to housekeepers and parties intending to purchase furniture to call and see them.

The trial of the Redick-Nugent case comes off to-day. Nugent's goods were scattered on the sidewalk yesterday morning--counter, ice-chest, etc., in front of the disputed store.

County taxes which have been delinquent since the first of May and have been bearing interest, if not paid by the first of November, will be collected by distress, in the announcement made by treasurer Kish.

The city council at a late meeting passed a resolution which restores to the mayor the right to make all purchases for the city and for the city officers, according to the provisions of the law. This increases the mayor's duties very heavily.

The annual meeting of the different rifle teams of the department of the Platte occurs at Fort Omaha, the 21st to 27th of September, with this programme: September 22, individual skirmish match; 23, regimental team match; 24, 200 and 500 yards; 25, short range match; 26, 200 yards; 26 and 27, competition for places on the department team of twelve.

An Omaha woman wants a divorce on the ground of "extreme cruelty." She alleges her husband pilfered her face powder to polish up his brass chain. The cruelty to which some men subject their wives is brutal, that's a fact; and it is doubtful if our readers ever heard of a more aggravated case than the one we have just quoted. A man who cannot afford a gold chain should not involve an innocent woman into marriage. State Journal.

The real estate boom in the suburbs continues to increase. Already the fence posts and lumber for the fences about the premises of the new Brown hall are on the ground, and work will begin there at once.

Dr. Grady has made a purchase upon Cuming street, through the Ames real estate agency, running up into the thousands, from Dr. Mercer. Additional information is received of the extension of the street car track out to the reservoir. The Brown hall business promises to progress faster even than was demanded by the terms of the contract with the donor of the site.

A Life Saving Present. Mr. M. E. Allison, Hutchinson, Kan., saved his life by a simple trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which caused him to read a large bottle that completely cured him, when doctors, change of climate and everything else had failed.

A SPLENDID AFFAIR. The concert at Max Meyers' Hall last night. The concert at Max Meyers' music hall last night was an unequalled success in every particular and not less in point of attendance than in the unexceptionable character of the entertainment.

SLUGGED AND ROBBED.

A Montana Man Comes to Grief in Omaha.

An Outrageous Case of Outlawry.

An outrageous case of robbery was reported at police headquarters last night, which shows that the town is still infested with a gang of thieves, confidence men and sluggers.

It appears that a man named James Conroy went up to Montana some time ago from his home in Iowa. He had a team and after traveling about for some time sold it and came down from Sioux City to Sioux Falls in a boat.

Yesterday he fell in with a man on lower Tenth street and the two went about together all day, drinking at the various saloons on their route. Toward night Conroy's companion led him off on South Seventeenth street and there proceeded to tackle him and down him for his pile.

Conroy, however, was too good for his assailant, and got away from him and started toward town. Before he had gone far he was overtaken by two men, one of whom dealt him a terrible blow behind the right ear with a "slung shot," cutting the scalp wide open.

They rendered him insensible by the blow and then robbed him of $170 and his watch and left him. The money consisted of one $100 bill, two $20 bills and three $10 bills.

Conroy was taken by some one to police headquarters, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. Leisenring and later in the evening he left for his hotel. There is no clue to the robbers and they will probably escape with their booty.

PETER RUSER. The funeral of the painter who fell from the High School.

The funeral of Peter Ruser, the unfortunate painter who was killed by falling from the High School roof, 110 feet to the ground, washed yesterday afternoon from Jacob's undertaking rooms. Two brothers, who had been discovered living about eleven miles south in Sarpy county and were notified yesterday of the accident.

Albert Altendorf, the foreman for Windheim on the High School job, says that none ordered Ruser to proceed to the roof, that he found him at work when he arrived. He says that the roof was dry and six feet thick and that Ruser was putting on the second coat of paint where it had been safely painted once before.

Windheim's shop was locked up this afternoon and all the employes attended the funeral of their fellow workman.

PERSECUTED POLICE. The City Jail Swallows All Who go on Duty. The "Merchant's Police," eleven in number, went on their respective beats again last night, notwithstanding the treatment of the night before, and the warning that it would be repeated.

During the fore part of the night they were to be seen everywhere, but after midnight their lights were extinguished by the regulars, who arrested all whom they found armed with "billys" and "bull's eyes," and locked them up as suspicious characters.

SHERMAN'S STAFF.

What General Howard Has to Say About a Washington Telegram.

Movements Consequent Upon Sheridan's Charge to the Generalship.

"In this morning's paper," said General Howard to THE BEE local this noon, "I observe a dispatch from some Washington correspondent in regard to General Sheridan's removal to Washington and other transfers, that is very unjust to our army officers."

The reporter had seen the dispatch referred to and wondered how much of truth there was in it. It said that neither General Schofield or Pope wished to be removed to Chicago in Sheridan's place and that a number of "carpet knights" under General Sherman, captains who were drawing colonel's pay, were "greatly disturbed by reason of the impending change."

"I have heard quite contrary in regard to General Schofield," said General Howard; "that is, that he has expressed a strong desire to go to Chicago, and that he has charge of the Department of Missouri, and in all probability that will be the transfer made."

"How about General Pope?" "He probably would prefer to remain at Leavenworth, as he has only two years longer in the active service. He was lately made a major general, however, but he has not assigned a division, which is charge of the Department of Missouri, which includes Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico."

"How much longer service has Schofield?" queried the reporter. "Oh, Schofield is young yet. Let me see; he must have eleven years before him. He would stand just as prominently in Chicago, I am sure, as he does now on the Pacific slope."

"In regard to the second part of the dispatch, it is true that these 'carpet knights' as they are called, attached to General Sherman's staff, are having too soft a time of it?" "The statement does them an injustice, I think," answered the general. "When the general of the army schools an aide-de-camp he then becomes ex-officio a colonel. It is no reproach to a man. Omaha's postmaster might be made postmaster-general and when he returned here to take up his old office in the same way. The nature of their work varies, sometimes it is most important. When the general-general of Canada passed through this country, one of these aides accompanied him, representing the general of the army. Some pretend to laugh at this, but it makes our country appear well before other nations. These are functions that no one but a gentleman of good points could fill."

"Who are General Sherman's aides?" "Well, our general has a smaller staff than any commanding officer in any other country. There is Col. John E. Tourtelotte, a captain of the 7th cavalry, one of the most gallant of men. He was sadly wounded at Alatoona, Ga., when he successfully held back a division of ten thousand of the enemy. Then there is Capt. John M. Bacon, of the 9th cavalry, who has been in the general's staff many years, and Col. Orlando M. Poe, of the engineers, a valuable man, and Col. John C. Tidball, a lieutenant-colonel of the First artillery. He represents that branch of the service. He was in the Mexican war. 'Carpet knights,' indeed! Why, they are middle-aged men. Tidball is 'Are their duties onerous?' "They are responsible positions. There is a vast amount of correspondence to the general of the army and he has but these four men to assist him personally. They are, of course, relieved by clerks, but they must see that everything is kept in exact order. They are always on duty."

TRITZ'S DEATH.

The Details of the Drowning Case Wednesday.

Cornerer Faul Does Not Decern an Inquest Necessary.

Yesterday's BEE contained the substantial facts of the drowning of Edward Tritz, and yesterday the details were obtained from his companion, Charles E. Schrote.

Tritz was born in Westphalia, Prussia and had been in America about three years. He was employed at first in the Smelting Works in this city and subsequently in Boyd's packing house, after which he was with Mr. Schrote for about a month. He was not a drinking man at all and he accumulated quite an amount of property, with which he assisted his only brother, Joseph Tritz, to the full extent of his means. The deceased was a member of Nebraska Lodge, No. 26, Knights of Pythias and had the esteem and respect of all who knew him.

On Saturday evening, August 4th, he was out on his life as he is as follows: Of late Tritz had been out of work and was staying temporarily with Mr. Schrote and the two had made a sort of arrangement to go into business together. They intended to buy a team and buy and sell produce through the country, and for that purpose went yesterday to look at a team.

They returned home about 4 o'clock and were sitting Schrote's soon taking a lunch when Tritz saw a pair of oars lying on the floor, belonging to Willie Schrote. He at once proposed that the boy should take them over the river but Willie protested that the boat was to small. They then went down to the river and got a young lad named Tom O'Peters to take them in his boat. He rowed up stream a little and finding the load too heavy, Mr. Schrote got out on the shore and followed Tritz and Peters across the river in his sons boat, reaching the same shore not over two minutes behind the other boat.

After beaching the boat they crossed the sandbar to a clear water pond near by, where they found Tritz, Patey Whiting and a lad named Smith in swimming. The latter two were experts, and were diving and bantering Tritz to go into deep water.

Mr. Schrote did not go in swimming, but merely washed himself off in the edge, and dressing, started to walk across the sandbar. He had gone but a short distance, when his son ran toward him and called him to come back quick. He ran to the pond, but Tritz had already disappeared below the surface. A number of men from Council Bluffs were near by, and one of them dove down several times, but could not find the body. The bottom of the pond was as cold as ice, and the diver was unable to continue his search.

Mr. Schrote took his partner's clothes and returned with them to Omaha, where he reported the catastrophe. Several persons, including the brother of the drowned man, went over and fished with a seine all night for the body, but without success. The search was resumed this morning and about 8 o'clock the remains were recovered.

They were at once brought over to this city and laid out in a room near Tenth and Farnam streets, from which the funeral will take place at 2 p. m. Sunday.

The dead man was above the medium height, stoutly built and a fine specimen of physical manhood. He was unmarried and has no relatives in this country, except the brother mentioned. His business in the old country was that of a coal miner.

The body when it was recovered gave almost conclusive proof that death was caused by cramps. The arms were drawn together and the fists clinched with the thumbs inside the fingers. The only bad mark on the body was that one of the eyes was bruised and discolored. This was either caused by one of the poles used in the search striking him or by trawling attaching themselves to the eye.

Coroner Faul, of Council Bluffs, was telephoned but had learned the facts and did not deem an inquest necessary. The remains are therefore at present, in charge of the Knights of Pythias who will bury it with the usual rights of the order, on Sunday.
