Cole's mammoth concern arrived from Council Bluffs early in the morning and streets were crowded with spectators awaiting the approach of the grand pa-geant promised them, and for once the lisplay was prompt in its appearance. shady sides of the streets after unloading proceeded to the grounds on north 18th street.

At 10 o'clock Farnam and Douglas were thronged and even the sunny side was lined with eager watchers, anxious to see the big parade. The rubber balloon men, the boys scattering dodgers and other attractions, were early on the field, and the visitors from the country laid in and dispartment headquarters this afternoon, and posed of the usual amount of lunch at an forwarded to Washington for considera- early hour. All the children in town were wild to go to the circus, and under the veil of their anxiety the parents turned out en masse.

The procession was a splendid one. and, in many of its features, was novel beyond any that has ever made its appearance in our streets. In length it has, we believe, never been surpassed, and while many have been more marked for the number of gorgeous chariots, none has been so interesting in its details. The van drawn by camels and another by elephants attracted great admiration, the traces used in the latter instance being broad enough and heavy enough to have guided Noah's ark through the streets. The bands of music were above the average, the cage of lions the best yet exhibited; and, in short, there seemed to exist a praiseworthy intention to show substantiality and not gilt and tinsel in this prelude to the show. There was no attempt to dazzle the eye, but the solid features of the show were modestly set forth and this fact was appreciated by the vast
