The county teachers' institute is in session at the central school building. The Union Pacific intends to sell round trip tickets to the democratic state convention at Omaha for one fare.

Hoopes says the new Engravings and Water Colors are open to inspection and invites the public to call and see them.

Gleason, who robbed a man in the brush below town, has been held in $200 bonds, for lack of witnesses, to appear next week.

Very attractively made up posters for the G. A. R. reunion have been issued by the Union Pacific, to draw crowds to Hastings by that route.

Two pretty and irresistible book agents were visiting business houses and banks on Farnam street yesterday, and distracting the attention of the clerks.

Six hundred thousand dollars will be spent by the city this year in the improvement of the streets of Omaha. This will work remarkable and long needed change.

The deputy sheriff of Lancaster county has taken Maguire to Lincoln to settle up some matters there in regard to some fictitious cattle on which some parties gave mortgages. His saloon remains closed.

Detectives have discovered the man who counterfeited the draft of the First National bank, and it is supposed that he will be in Lincoln ere long. The bank is to have some additions made to its present draft to prevent imitation and forgery.

Mrs. James H. Peabody brought suit Wednesday to enjoin further grading of Fourteenth and Jones streets, claiming that her residence property there was bought and improved according to the old grade, and before any change could be made damage should have been assessed and tendered. Judge Neville granted a restraining order, preventing further grading until Saturday morning when application will be made for a temporary injunction.

BOUND TO LINCOLN.

The J. M. Thurston Hose Company roster of men.

On next Tuesday the members of the J. M. Thurston hose company, who have been in practice for several weeks past with their cart, will go to Lincoln, to take part in the fire men's tournament. They take with them the running cart which has done such good service in winning the championship of Iowa, and which they have been using on Douglas street. They will have another run up Douglas to-morrow evening.

The following are members of the team who will run: Wm. Webb, Wm. Coote, John Curry, Samuel Crowley, John Roesch, James Traynor, Patrick Norman, John Lacy, George Kott, Tim Collins, J. C. Pentzel, Jos. Donnelly, George M. Steele, Chas. A. Salter, Jos. Vanderford, Tony Herold, John Simpson, Jas. Cornick, Wm. Kott, Jas. Houck, George Blake.

This evening a grand ball is to be given at Cronn's hall by the hose company, the Omaha Musical Union orchestra being in attendance. Tickets admitting gentlemen and ladies are one dollar.

BURR DISCHARGED.

But Hardy Held Until Monday to be Tried.

George Burr and Henry Hardy were arrested Wednesday night, being on the Merchants' police patrol, and brought before Judge Anderson. Nothing could be proved as to Burr having personated a policeman, and so he was discharged.

Hardy, however, was held on his own recognizance, until Monday afternoon at two o'clock. Judge Anderson said that he would fine whoever was brought before him and found guilty of having personated policeman, as there was only one way of assuming the duties of a watchman or policeman, and that by regular appointment.

John Field, a colored boy, was fined $5 for carrying a revolver, notwithstanding an ingenious plea that he had forgotten to take it out when he changed his pants.

M. Fleming and Pat Madden for drunken disturbance of the peace, was tried at 4 o'clock.

Minnie McGinnis, Sarah Willis, Catharine Gillette, and Ed. Morris were arrested for being inmates of a house of prostitution. They will be heard September 1st, at 1 o'clock.

HERO AND HEROINE.

A Western Bridal Party on Their Tour.

Their Remarkable Departure From Home and Subsequent Trip.

The evening train on the U. P. road drew out from one of the little desert stations of Wyoming, a few days ago, leaving behind it a group of merry young men and women. The face of the young man and woman. The departure of the train was signalled by three rousing cheers by the forsaken young men and maidens, and in a certain manner strongly emphasized by the startling reports of several pistol shots.

The bride party in the car, were interested witnesses of this grand demonstration in their behalf, and lovingly looked in each other's arms, leaning from the same window, smiled and waved their respective good-byes to the married and the single friends from view. The former slowly lowered the window and sought their seats. Immediately, they became the cynosure of almost every eye in the car, and they justly merited the attention. She was youthful and buxom, and was dressed in her best, which was rather the shabby genteel order.

Her face bore a positive beauty, which cultivation and association with people of refinement would have made particularly attractive. As it was, there was the ruddy glow of health, the evidence of a robust constitution, and will, to power to charm the best young people of the district in which it beamed.

In her eye there was the merry and mischievous twinkle of the 18-year-old girl, that delighted in compelling devotion and took not a little delight in making the "feller she liked best" feel that he was not the only lad around she might have for the desiring. In her hat was concentrated the evidence of the height to which millinery had attained in the mountain town. It also gave indication of the fair bride's taste and the depth of her father's or, perhaps, her lover's purse. It was not new. It had once been white. It was now a soiled cream yellow. It shaped it emulate at one and the same time the cover of a market basket and a plug hat, which had not successfully resisted being run over by a cart wheel.

This covering was piled on the left side of the head, and seemed to be cultivating a very friendly relation, at the same time, with both her left ear and the back of her neck. The young man was dressed in a bran new cowboy outfit, so stiff in all its parts that he moved like a paralytic and smelled like a leather store. He was not as brawny as cowboys sometimes are; indeed, he seemed like a try in the west, but he was devoted to that black walnut complexion peculiar to members of his calling, and its expression was such that it might but recently have bidden good-bye to what Mark Twain would have termed a gospel duster's smile.

The twin had hardly taken their seats when the young lady turned into tears. The feeling of homesickness had already come upon her. She sobbed aloud, and attracted even more attentively thereby the undivided attention of the crowded car. The newly-made husband was trained in the business in such cases made and provided. The next instant his arm encircled her waist and the fair form was gently moved, as a consequence, in a reclining position until the drooping head rested upon her protector's bosom. Then were poured into the listening ears of the weeping damsel the whippers of consolation which the young husband was able to conjure up from the resources of his vocabulary. Some of these whippers found their way into the damsel's mouth because it was noticed that several times, the lips of the twin were in closest contact. By degrees the disconsolate maiden returned to her former self, and there ensued such a scene of embraces and kisses, and whispers and hugs, as is witnessed only on a well-appointed bridal tour. Indeed, overstatement is hardly warranted, for they have been proposed and accepted a thousand times. Of course, it was a picnic for the other passengers, of whom many had been there before. Some of them had not, and to them especially of the rough border class, it was something of the enjoyment of which was almost superfluous. Several of the more demonstrative of the latter resorted to their neighboring companion and began a honeymoon of their own, imitating to the letter the traditional performance which was being given by the heroine and hero. It would be difficult to describe the scene in the car when this emulation became almost general. The amuck, the "ohs," the "ahs," the "ahs," the "ahs," became almost legion. Meanwhile the loving pair seemed almost unmindful of the merry scene of which they were the occasion. At length, however, the pair separated for a moment and the fair one looked around and smiled upon the passengers. Immediately a dozen flinty snarls, and with the appearance of the lady, acknowledged the potency of her sway, and began to make themselves irresistible in appearance by the sundry tugging of scarfs, straightening of shirt fronts, banging of hats and smoothing of heads, and returned the smiles with the lavish interest of millionaires.

At this juncture one of the smitten border gentlemen, deeming himself beyond compare, reached for a brassy sleeping companion of the male gender, who was making himself audible with sundry excellently developed snores, and lovingly pressed him to his bosom; so lovingly, indeed, that the aroused sleeper opened his eyes with an ejaculation which sent the embrace to his feet. "In the name of ---, what are you giving me, you ---?" The embrace sought to appease the enraged sleeper, and, after a time, succeeded.

He then directed the other's attention to the spoony pair in the other part of the car. As the half-sleepy eyes took in the antics, the mouth opened, and a smile gradually stole over the sunburnt face. The smile was followed by a laugh, the laugh by a roar, and the last in turn by a yell, "I'll be chased right up if that don't tumble the animal in a tone of stentor to time. This was a new element in the scene and increased the excitement to the utmost. I'm going to take a hand in it and you can take the hinder if I don't." The next instant the speaker had clambered over his companion's knees to the aisle. As he did so, he showed a frame of herculean proportions.

Hestrode like a giant, and a pair of star spurs rendered ominously musical every step as he advanced toward the bride party. He soon reached them, and standing before them with his hat in his hand, said: "Say, gardner, where I come from, right up yer in Sawtooth, we'r allers chinned by the happy man who'r kias the gal for good luck, and yer goes."

A WATERY GRAVE.

Which was Sought by a Young Colored Man.

He is Pulled Out of the Water by Main Strength.

Early last evening a young colored man, named Henry Owens, stole a pair of shoes from L. B. Williams' store. He ran down Dodge street followed by four or five citizens crying "stop thief!"

At Twelfth street he turned off to Douglas and ran to the river bank where he dived himself and plunged into the murky waters of the Big Muddy. A detective of the western agency was among others who were on his trail and secured a boat in which he followed the colored man, who was making for the lower shore, out into the stream. The detective finally hit the fugitive over the head with an oar, and brought him to a stand still. He was taken up and lodged in the city jail, the charge of grand larceny being placed against his name.

LIRUOR LAWS.

The Result of the Sabbath Statute in Kansas City.

It Gives Wyandotte a Big Boom.

A Bex representative yesterday learned from a Kansas City gentleman, who is visiting in the city, some interesting facts relative to the workings of the high license and Sunday law in Kansas City. The Sunday law is being rigidly enforced even in wicked Kansas City. All lemonade and cigar stands close on the day of worship, and a holy calm pervades the entire city. Drug stores are open for the sale of medicines only. Toilet articles and general merchandise cannot be purchased, nor can liquors of any kind be secured after midnight Saturday.

"What do you Missourians do for drinks?" queried the Bex man. "Well, you see there is one thing that saves us. That is the blessed fact that prohibition Kansas is our neighbor. The street cars between Kansas City and Wyandotte, Kansas, are crowded from Saturday night until Monday. Saloons run over there right along. Thousands from Kansas City spend Sunday over in Wyandotte."

"Will the Downing high license law prove a success?" "I think the Sunday clause will gradually be ignored. You see it is nothing new, but it is being temporarily enforced by reason of the impetus it got from the license clause. We have had a Sunday law for seventeen years, but it was a dead letter and there is no reason to believe it will not prove so again. It is being too severely enforced. The people of Frank James country have experienced a change of heart lately but they are not yet ready for a puritanical code. They will tire of the new boots after while. Then you may look for the happy-go-lucky observance of Sunday."

Enterprising local agents wanted in this town for an article that is sure to sell. Live 4 1/2 cent stamps preferred. Address: Hamilton Food Preserving Co., 72 Kilby street, Boston. m&wlin

Russia Salve is unrivalled for its speedy healing qualities. Ask your druggist for it. 25 cents.

The brick church in course of erection by the colored Methodists at the corner of Eighteenth and Webster streets will soon be in condition for occupancy. Great praise is due the Rev. Mr. Mitchell and his official membership for the noticeable improvement which they have contributed to that locality by the erection of such a substantial and handsome structure. And the colored people of this city have highly honored themselves by their noble generosity in contributing for a puritanical code. They will tire of the new boots after while. Then you may look for the happy-go-lucky observance of Sunday."

We learn that the Sabbath school children are being rehearsed for a grand concert, which is to take place on Wednesday evening next, at which time the occupation of the new church will begin.
