 "It has become so common to write the beginning of an article, in an elegant, interesting manner."
 "Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such."
 "And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible."
 "To induce people."
 "To give themometrial, which improves their value that they will never use anything else."
 "The remedy so favorable noticed in all papers."
 "Religious and secular, is."
 "Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines."
 "There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness."
 "And ability."
 "In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."
Did She Die?
 "No!"
 "She lingered and suffered along, pinning away all the time for years."
 "The doctors doing her no good."
 "And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."
 "Indeed! Indeed!"
 "How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A LAWYER'S POW-WOW.
The Bar of Douglas, Sarpy, Washington and Burt Counties to Meet,
And Discuss the Fitness of Men for the Judgeship This Fall.

A petition has been circulating in this judicial district for the last few days, calling a meeting of the bar to consider what course shall be advisable in selecting district judges this fall without regard to party. The general opinion seems to be that the present bench is a very able and agreeable one and that it is best retained as it is. The following is
THE CALL:
 We, the undersigned, members of the Douglas county bar, in view of the fact that at the coming fall election two judges of the district court for this district have to be elected, and believing that the best interests of all citizens in the community depend upon the selection and election of upright, capable and efficient men to fill the judicial office; would, therefore, without respect to party, recommend that a meeting of the members of the bar of this district, comprising the counties of Burt, Washington, Douglas and Sarpy be held at the court house in the city of Omaha on the 30th day of August 1883 at 2 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of consulting and agreeing upon a plan to secure the election to this office of men whose only recommendation shall be their fitness for the place.

A Safe Return.
 Mr. Henry Eicke, who went across the Atlantic some months ago to visit his native land, returned yesterday with his

Kuhl, the well known farmer and his wife.
 Accompanying him were twenty-six settlers who come to make their homes in America.
 A pleasant feature of the return was that the party was met at New York City, as they landed from the steamer, by Mr. J. H. Lehman, the merchant of this city. To see a familiar face from Omaha once more pleased the voyagers greatly and they landed in the Gate City yesterday morning in the highest spirits.

AN ACTIVE BRAIN.
Wonderful Development in a Pennsylvania Boy 5 Years Old.

Little Morris Castle, aged not quite 5, is a very remarkable child, says the Echo Dispatch. He has never been to school a day, nor has he ever been taught at home, yet he is a better mathematician than two-thirds of the grown people a year out of school. The pleasant little fellow, perched in the largest editorial chair in the office, was asked if he could count one hundred.
 "Forward or backward?" asked the boy, looking up quickly.
 "Either."
 Morris chose the latter, and rattled off the numerals from 100 to 1 in better time than his questioner could, were he to begin at 1.
 "Twice 60?" asked the Dispatch man, and Morris answered the question and his father volunteered to elect problems equal to the boy's ability.
 "How many feet in a mile?" asked his father.
 "Five thousand two hundred and eighty" replied he, without the least hesitation.
 "One thousand five hundred and forty-one and one-half," he replied, almost before the question had left the speaker's lips.
 Then followed questions involving both memory and calculation, and with reasonable range not a problem puzzled the boy for an instant. He would look up with his pretty blue eyes, move his lips slightly, as if calculating to himself, and give the answer in a business like way that was simply astonishing. He held readily the number of feet in a rod, hours in a day, days in a year, ounces in a pound, times 400, three times 72 and four times 31. He repeated the "threes" in the multiplication table, and could have gone on to the end for aught the Dispatch man knew. Mr. Castle said that no effort whatever had been made to teach the child, and that he had obtained his knowledge of mathematics by his own exertions, and up to within a few months his parents knew nothing of his precocity.

NEED A SMALLER FIELD.
 It was evident from the start that the diamond of the regulation size was entirely too large for the girls either for running or throwing. A ball thrown from pitcher to second base almost invariably fell short and was stopped on the roll; the throw from first to third base was an utter impossibility. The throw was a novelty at pastime and excited the players who watched the game to uncontrollable laughter. All the girls handled the ball in the same way. The right arm was doubled and the hand brought near the face, then a sudden jerk threw it thirty feet or so. In catching all the girls held their hands out in front of them with the palms up, and if the ball was caught it fell well enough, but if it came straight and fast their courage failed and they got out of its way without delay. Capt. Williams was the fiercest hitter on the field, sending one ball far past centre field and making three bases on it, but in the field she was equally good. Her pretty hands were doubled and she kept her eyes close to the ball, and she was the only one to any fast-coming ball. Miss Healey, who was phenomenally tall and thin, showed no fear of the ball and much proficiency at the bat. Once she sent a flyer over the head of left field, Miss Stanton, who tried to catch it in her lap, but made a bluff of it.

HOW THE BLUES PLAYED.
 Of the Blues Miss Evans was probably the best batter, but her catching and throwing were far below par. In throwing the ball she was as close to her side, and flung the ball with a lady-like jerk that raised it seven or eight feet in the air and propelled it probably ten yards. Miss J. Darlington, who was first base for the Blues, did honor to the position. When the ball was carefully tossed to her so that she could put her hands down and scoop it in she took hold of it gracefully and sent it back to the pitcher, but if it came at any speed she quietly stepped aside and let it pass. So it was, indeed, with the most of the fielders. The most promising flies slipped through their lovely little hands like water through a sieve, but still they smiled and contentedly ran after the play ball, as though it were just as much to deliver it at one time as another. There was no un lady-like hurrying about their play and they never condescended to the excitement that inspires the other sex when engaged in this interesting game. Speed was of no great moment and no young lady in running the bases was seen to sprawl flat on her face and crawl, as it were, to the bag—a thing that may be seen any day when men are playing.

NINE INNINGS PLAYED.
 Inced, dignity and perfect modesty characterized these female players, who seemed to enjoy their game greatly and to pay little heed to the jocular advice of the admiring spectators, who gave frequent hints and suggestions as to their method of play and often urged them to run or hit harder and to "hold on to her, Mary," and so on. There were nine innings played, in which Captains Williams and Evans covered themselves with glory and applause, and Misses Willis, Elliott, Cassidy and Stanton of the Blues, and Misses Miller, Morris, May and Norris, of the Reds, ran their bases with rare speed. Miss Miller as a pitcher was generally successful, and sent such lovely full balls that it was a pleasure to hit them. Miss Williams succeeded her, but her pitching was not equally effective. There were nine innings played, the Reds making 22 runs and the Blues 8.
 The young ladies have been only ten days in practice. When they master the many style of throwing and catching, which they declare they will soon do, their play will be well worth seeing. They are to play a game on September 1, on a half-sized diamond, which will better suit their style of batting and throwing.

Why They Discharged the Cook.
 A man at Long Branch recently entered a restaurant and said: "Have you any clam chowder?" "We have, replied the waiter. "Bring me a plate." A plateful was placed before him and he set to work with great gusto. After he had taken

BELLES AT THE BAT.
How Sixteen Girls and Two Boys
Peccolities in Fielding, Batting and Throwing That Amused a Critic Crowd.

Philadelphia Times.
 Sixteen young ladies, aided by two young lads, played base ball at Pastime park in the presence of 400 or 500 persons, of whom a few were ladies. The players were modestly dressed as to their bodies and their skirts reached to their knees. One side wore dresses of white, with blue trimmings, and stockings of a light green color, while the other had red trimmings and red stockings. All wore jaunty little white cloth hats and base ball shoes of the regulation style, except one girl who luxuriated in fifteen-button gaiters that reached a span above her ankles and must have taken half an hour each to fasten; all had untanned bell-bottom trousers, little waists, such as Williams, who acted as captain of the Reds, had a full suit of that color, and Miss Evans, who held similar command on the other side, sported a lovely outfit of cerulean blue and a little hat that had a flaunting blue ribbon.

When the game was called the Reds went to the bat, each girl clamoring about the scorer's table to know when it would be her turn to "go in." Finally, Miss Poole, a dumpy little girl of about 17, took the bat, which she handled much as if it were a doll baby. The Blue fielders were Miss Willis, catcher; Miss Evans, pitcher; Miss P. Darlington, short stop; Miss Sally Darlington, first base; Miss Jennie, second base; Miss Elliott, third base; Miss Hurry, right field; Miss Cassidy, center field, and Miss Stanton, left field. When they had all been shown to their places Miss Evans delivered a high one to Miss Poole, who hit it full and sent it back to her with a whizz. Miss Evans dodged it carefully, and left field, coming in to cover her miss, got her hat knocked off and giggled hysterically. Meanwhile the plucky hitter had run three bases, and was standing on the third base. The pitcher, Miss Miller took the bat and threw up a fly one that fell almost into Miss Darlington's hands, through which it passed and rolled half a dozen yards away. Miss Darlington looked disappointed at the fugitive ball, but made no attempt to follow it, and the result was that Miss Poole came home and Miss Miller puffed around to and fro. The ball finally reached the hands of the pitcher by three easy stages, being missed twice successively on its way.

Instantly Relieved.
 Mrs. Ann LaCour of New Orleans, La., writes:—I have a son who has been sick for two years, he has been attended by our leading physicians but all to no purpose. This morning he had his usual spell of coughing, and was so greatly prostrated in consequence, that death seemed imminent. We had in the house a bottle of DR. Wm. HALL'S BALMS, for the LUNGS purchased by my husband, who noticed our advertisement yesterday. We administered it according to directions and he was instantly relieved.

Diners Which Are on the Whole Worse than Dyspepsia.
 One misses ice water and our various cooling appliances very much; it is possible, with a good deal of trouble, to get a glass of water with a few pieces of dirty ice in it, but it always seems to do so much surprise, alarm, and horror in the spectators that one has to seek out a secluded corner of the restaurant to drink it. I do not know which they regard as the worst, drinking ice water or eating raw tomatoes. Now, I am very fond of the latter, and always eat them when I can, but from seeing a crowd around my part of the room every day, I begin to have some suspicion that the proprietor uses me as an advertisement, and that crowds come daily to see the great American tomato-eater. Ice water especially seems to be regarded as a deadly poison, the cause of all the dyspepsia in America.

It is a fact that we do have more dyspepsia than the people here; but I think it is due rather to the quantity of food we take than to the nature of it. For many reasons, the quantity taken here is limited, the chief being that everything is so badly prepared that no living man could eat what we would call a respectable meal; then also the habit of paying separately for every individual thing one eats, even to the bread, is not conducive to a large appetite.
 The ordinary midday meal here for the better classes is as follows: First, a soup which has a whole legion of names, which are given to it according as to whether it contains sausage, potatoes, liver, or some other abomination, the body always remaining beef soup. This soup is, on the whole, not very bad. Next comes the inevitable "Kindfleisch," the boiled meat from which the soup has been made, a dark, dry-looking substance, easily chewed, but as all the salts have gone over to the soup, having absolutely no taste; it is easily digested, and, though not palatable, is perhaps as nourishing as any other meat. Next comes the "Braten," and a glow of satisfaction comes over the face of the diner, for he has eaten his "Rindfleisch," to live, and now lives to eat his "Braten." This consists of baked, or more generally, fried veal or pork, and is served swimming in gravy and onions. A salad, made either of lettuce or cucumbers, which have been soaked in salt water several days, to take all the colic out of them, is generally eaten with this. After this comes the dessert, or "Mehlspeise," which may consist of anything in the world, provided we exclude all that is good. With this dinner a quart of beer or a pint of wine is generally drunk.
 You see by this that the most fertile source of dyspepsia, overloading the stomach, is practically excluded. Possibly another thing which helps to keep the eater braced up is that he eats everything with his knife, and in this way must take a not inconsiderable amount of iron into his system. True, dyspepsia is a very uncomfortable and uninteresting disease, but, even if we were obliged to get dyspepsia from our manner of life, I do not know but that it is to be preferred to the German dinner. In some of the larger cities, where a higher degree of civilization has been reached, as in Vienna and Berlin, one can do better.

Is your Life Worth a Dollar?
 Perhaps that seems a high price for it, considering how poor your blood is, and how your whole system is prostrated, debilitated, and enfeebled. People have been heard to say, under such circumstances, that they would not give the toss of a copper for the choice between life and death. But when it comes to actually drawing near the grave, a man naturally draws back, and says he does not want to die. Life is very precious, and even to a broken-down man it is worth saving.
 One dollar will buy a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. That one dollar may start you on the road from misery to recovery. A man must take a very mean view of himself who is not willing to invest that much in making one serious effort to rescue himself from deadly debility, and to step into the enjoyment of solid health. Brown's Iron Bitters vitalizes the blood, tones the nerves, and rebuilds the system. Its work is well known. Invest that dollar in a bottle.

about a dozen spoonful he drew a pair of opera glasses from his pocket and looked intently at the chowder for some time. Then he jumped into the air and shouted: "Eureka!" "What's that?" yelled the proprietor. "I've got it!" yelled the diner. "Got what?" asked the restaurateur. "A clam!" "Great Scott!" yelled the proprietor. "What's got the clam?" And before the diner could say a word, the proprietor picked the clam up in a pair of gold pinners, and bore it triumphantly to the kitchen, threw it back into a huge boiler of chowder and said: "Who dealt the chowder to that dark-haired man over there?" "I did," said the assistant cook. "Then you are discharged for dealing out the clam that we use for flavoring purposes."
