THE RACE AT SHAW'S FLAT.

San Francisco. This was a close, hot, sultry day in July, 1860, and the crowd of gamblers, miners and loafers, who had been sitting in front of the Long Tom saloon on Washington street, Sonora, and lying around that popular resort in the cool of the shade afforded by the awning overhead and the loust trees, which looked wilted and dirty from the heat and dust, were gathered around a little knot of angry and excited men near the main entrance. The subject of dispute was evidently no secret, for the participants talked both loud and firm, gesticulating wildly and glowering at each other in a threatening manner.

The central figure of the group was a well-known gambler from the adjoining county of Calaveras called Duff Hardy. He was one of three brothers, all sportsmen, men and desperate characters, who will be readily recalled to the memory of those who lived in the southern mines in the early days.

It will take you up or back out of it, just as you please. I'll bet one thousand dollars, and put the money up in Murphy's hands (Murphy was the proprietor of the Long Tom), that the gray horse can beat the black a mile on the Shaw's Flat track at any time within the next three months.

Such a scene of fierce excitement has seldom been witnessed, even on a race course. Men raved and cursed and yelled, shook hands, and shook their fists in each other's faces, threw their hats in the air, and trampled them under foot; hugged one another, and behaved like a mob of crazy men.

THE STARTLING EFFECT.

As such a scene of fierce excitement has seldom been witnessed, even on a race course. Men raved and cursed and yelled, shook hands, and shook their fists in each other's faces, threw their hats in the air, and trampled them under foot; hugged one another, and behaved like a mob of crazy men.

CARRYING OFF THE STAKES.

The Hardy crowd swore that the stakes should not be given up, and with six shooters in hand dared any man to take the money from the track. The movement was of great danger, for all were terribly excited, and both sides were ready for the signal for slaughter.

HE HAD GONE LAME.

And was in no condition to win. Tuolumne was in despair and Calaveras triumphant. Some of the crowd, and for play hinted at. Immediately a great change could be observed in the betting. Those who had put up heavily on the gray were anxious to "hedge" by getting on the black, not only by the Calaveras people, but by the Tuolumneites as well.

For the fray. Bill Marvis was on hand as a witness. The Hardys and their crowd came over in force. Quiet citizens were in a row of their lives. Many anticipated a riot, with great loss of life. Some feared that the town would be burned. Even in the court room angry and fierce words were exchanged, while at every little commotion the click, click of the derringers, colts and "pepper-boxes" could be heard with alarming distinctness.

THE ALABAMIAN.

Among the Calaveras party was a man named Shirely, a tall, slender, black-eyed Alabamian. This man was a leader on his side. He appeared to be brave, determined and desperate. Several times during the course of the trial, Shirely and Mavis met and cursed each other fearfully. Pistol in hand, drawn and cocked, each poured out upon the other the vilest words in the English language.

THE STREET SCENE.

One afternoon, when court had adjourned and the crowd were surging through the main street, Shirely met Mavis near Cabest's restaurant, in the lower part of the town. Walking up to him and clutching a cocked derringer in his right hand, he asked: "How will you fight me?" Mavis quietly turned away, without a word, and Shirely entered the restaurant. After dinner Shirely was walking up Washington street, and Mavis met him near Clary's restaurant, directly in his path, talking with some

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

Chinese theater performances in Portland, Oregon, commenced at 7 o'clock this evening and last until 3 o'clock the next morning.

There are about six highly successful stars among the 1,800 actresses now playing in the United States.

Lawrence Barrett as Landotto, Lord of Rimini, which part he first played in Chicago, has made a decided hit at the Star theater, New York. He will continue it there during a nine week season.

Miss Agnes Ingersoll is home from Germany.

The Emma Abbott opera company will number 65 persons this season.

Amis Paxon's brother Gus is considered the most promising comedian on the Pacific coast. He is only 14.

John F. Ward resumed the Pittsburg opera house with his new Irish play, "Top o' the Morning," which proved a success.

Genevieve Rogers has accepted a position in our leading city with the assistance of Miss P. Sall, Sgt. Montgolfre, Sgt. Pasquelis and Mr. C. Sternberg.

A POLICEMAN'S DUTY.

Policeman Ed. K. Heath, 29 North Street, Portland, Me., May 11, 1883, writes: "I have been troubled for a good many years with inflammation of the bladder, dating as far back as during the time I was in the army. I suffered with dull, heavy pains in my back and kidneys, intense for some time, and had several times been recommended, and was examined by one of our best physicians, who pronounced it inflammation of the bladder, and I went to the hospital for treatment, but all medicine and treatment had seemed to fail. I was recommended to try Hunt's Remedy, and had been using it several weeks when I had a long time troubled with a weakness and inflammation of the bladder, with a complication of other diseases peculiar to women. After using only two bottles it has been completely cured, and I can say that my wife had in praise of this wonderful medicine, and I would highly recommend it to all who are suffering from kidney disease or inflammation of the bladder."

Portland, Me., May 11, 1883.

I hereby certify that I know the facts of the sickness of Mrs. E. K. Heath, and that they are correctly stated in the foregoing certificate, and her cure was accomplished by the use of Hunt's Remedy.

A. W. SMITH, Druggist. Cor. Portland and Green Streets.

NO MATERIAL CHANGE.

This is to certify that I have used Hunt's Remedy for the kidney complaint, and derived much benefit from its use.

I have been afflicted about one year, and received treatment from the local physicians, and used a number of so-called specifics without any material help. I am happy to say, after using three bottles of Hunt's Remedy, I was completely cured.

I never fail to recommend it, and you art at liberty to use my name in any manner you may desire.
