Misplaced Confidence. A story is going the rounds of the State press concerning an Omaha man who was formerly a banker of Fairmont. It was the custom of this financier, when he was forced to employ a lawyer to attend to bussiness passing through his bank, to him. Among the attorneys with whom he had this arrangement was one who is now a resident of Dakota. When they left Fairmont, the banker claimed that the lawyer owed him $25 of undi-vided fees. The lawyer did not admit this, but claimed that the account was balanced. Postal cards and threatening letters were sent to Dakota, but failed to bring any response. At last the financier decided to appeal to the generosity of the lawyer, and wrote, "I have always believed you to be an honorable mn, and now I leave it to you to say how much you justly owe me. Send me what you think is right, and I will call it square." In due time a box, marked "specie," came to Omaha by express. The charges were $1.55, which the banker promptly paid. He opened the box, carefully removed the thick covering of sawdust, and down in the
