THE WEEK IN CHICAGO.

Special Dispatch to The Bee.

CHICAGO, September 28.—The history of the markets for the past five days is uneventful. No features of especial strength or weakness were developed by any of the cereals or hog products. In fact, with the exception of one or two days, dullness has been the prevailing spirit of the board's business. There has been an unusual dearth of country speculation, which, at its best, is a powerful factor in determining prices. This is accounted for, in a measure, by the immense amount of grain in store. The stock in this city and Milwaukee is nearly 8,000,000 bushels, an amount unprecedented for this season of the year. Bears make use of this fact together with the other that there is a crop to be marketed virtually not yet out of the hands of the producers, to sustain their talk of lower prices. Foreign advices indicate there will be a decrease in European demand, Russia particularly, being estimated to require 60,000,000 bushels of wheat less than last year from this country.

Nevertheless there has been considerable long selling of wheat, most of which is readily absorbed by three persistent bear houses in this city. The number of foreign orders referred to above has made the market largely a scalpers' market. Fluctuations have not been so rapid nor wide as to bring a large increase of wealth to those professionals who are satisfied with fractional profits and losses.

Corn was rather neglected. The opinion is general that about all the corn is now marketable that can be sold as merchantable. Nevertheless, reports of snow in the northwest had a strengthening influence on to-day's market. Corn has been, apparently, almost entirely owned by local speculators and dealers, and local traders confined their operations to eastern markets. The receipts and visible supply are both nearly as large as those of last year.

Hog products have shared in the intermediate part of the week, at times being fairly active. The shipping market is improving somewhat, and the arrivals of hams beyond expectation, an undeterioration of strength prevails. There was some talk of a "scare" for October, induced by the heavy buying of short ribs by a local house, but the apprehension did not become general. The absence of excitement in the transactions of last week is accounted for, in part, by the absence of country speculators from their homes and the increase in the visible supply referred to above. The latter is with-parallel at this season, which is usually characterized by "scare" in some one of the commodities sold.

The presence of producers in town is however, a distinct advantage. All of these report a rushing business and more buyers than they can attend to.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Special dispatch to The Bee.

CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, September 28.—Wheat to-day was stronger and fairly active. Foreign advices quoted as low markets. New York advanced some early but later quotations indicated easier markets. Shorts covering advanced the price about 1¢, but later the market was quoted down, fluctuated and closed about half a cent higher than yesterday. Corn opened a shade stronger and slightly more active. Shorts evinced a desire to cover as in wheat and their demand forced an advance of 1¢, which was not sustained at large lines immediately offered. The market finally closed steady at 1@16¢ higher than yesterday. Pork was dull and active by turns. Its fluctuations made a good scalper's market, but outside of that the demand was moderately good and market improved chiefly on near deliveries. Just before the close a weaker market was manifested and a decline of 10@15¢ took place.

The final close, however, was steadier with 10@12¢ advance. In other hog products considerable interest was displayed. Lard was most prominent, trade in it being active.
