

THE DAILY BEE.

OMAHA.

Tuesday Morning, October 2.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Overcoats and gloves are seen everywhere. Hereafter, letter postage will be two cents only. It is a cold day when we don't have a rain. There is a big run of stock east on the U. P. just now. A great deal is being put on the Farnam street entrance of the Paxton hotel. A literary society is being formed by the young folks of the First Presbyterian Church. Cold rains like this make a man hang to a coal fire like a bill collector to a hard customer. Anthracite coal has gone up seventy-five cents on the ton since Saturday. It is now $11. The new English tiled floor in the Omaha National bank is completed and is very handsome. Remember that the Garland stove is sold in this city, and can be found at Lang & Folsch's.—cod-ff

The annual State Convention of the Christian church will be held at Greenwood, Neb., commencing October 4th. Notary public commissions have been received at the county clerk's office from Governor Dawes for Geo. R. Henderson and J. L. Watts, of this county. The 25th will win—On and after this date the Cozens will charge $2.00 per day and will give the best accommodations for that price in the world. P. RUMBERT & CO. oct-1-1885.

Last night, as sundown, began the Jewish new year, according to their calculation the year 5664. It will be appropriately celebrated about town, Crouse's hall being the principal point. There was a great rush at the stamp delivery window yesterday for the two-cent stamps, but none of the new issues were sold. The old style tops must be sold first until the stock is used up. The Democratic central committee of Douglas county are requested to meet at the office of Chas. Kaufman, on Twelfth street, Nebraska National bank building, on Wednesday, Oct. 3, at 3 o'clock p. m.

A collision between two yard engines in the Union Pacific yard is reported to have taken place Saturday night, both engines being badly used, but no one hurt. The engineers have both been laid off. Mr. H. Baswitz, who has been for years head salesman in Mr. Louis Branch's clothing store, has accepted a position in the clothing house of S. Jacobs, at 1120 Farnam, where he will be pleased to see all his old friends and customers. Trinity Cathedral will be closed to visitors before long while the last touches are being put on the interior and the altar and chancel furniture erected. The pews are all placed and are quite handsome. One or two windows are yet to arrive.

We understand from good authority that Mills, Omaha's crack shot, has declined to come to time on his shooting contest with Geo. Leffingwell, of this city, which was set October 25th, and in consequence loses the $100 forfeit money.—Fremont Tribune.

We learn that Father O'Connor has been called to Omaha by Bishop O'Connor to take charge of the Cathedral of that city. This is the most important position in the diocese of Nebraska after the position of Bishop.—Fremont Tribune.

Desired by a young gentleman, the acquaintance of a young lady whose views of life are sufficiently above the conventionalities of a small town to think well of this offer. Object, mutual entertainment and pleasure. Discretion a matter of honor. E. R. 25, Bee office.

John Shandara, a married man who some weeks ago left Omaha and his wife and took another man's wife with him, has written his wife from Cheyenne to come and join him. He has found out that his old love is the best after all. Mrs. S. will leave for the West in a day or so.

Mr. H. Haubens, who has been in Omaha for some time now, and has made a large number of friends in the city, has accepted an appointment as cashier in The People's Bank, which has just been opened by Mr. Toft. Mr. Toft is fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Haubens, who will certainly prove a great acquisition and a valuable man for the position.

Complaint was made in the police court yesterday that Miles Gard tried to cut his mother-in-law's throat Sunday. He will be heard Saturday. He has to learn that a miss is not as good as a mile. John Williams poked some cows of Fred Geisler's that got in his field. He comes up before his honor next week.

The District Court opened its October session yesterday, Judges Wakley and Neville on the bench. The bar committee, to examine applicants for admission, was appointed, consisting of young men, H. D. Estabrook, R. E. Gaylor, Charles Ogden, A. C. Wakley and R. W. Patrick. The bailiffs for this term are Henry Grebe, Thos. A. Pieronnet, George Hansen, Edward H. Crowell.

A petition is circulating addressed to the council, and signed by a large number of our citizens, asking that Bernard Haas be retained as keeper of Hanson Park, at least until next May. There is considerable said against the sudden loss of his position, and it is thought that he has not been given fair warning, as he has expended a large sum in laying out his flowers in the park and other improvements.

A suit was begun in the District Court Saturday by Mrs. Ferdinand Hirschtel, the widow of a young man who went from this city to Dakota last March, and falling to find employment there freed despondent and suicided. He had insured his life in the Germania Life Insurance company, and the company refusing to pay under their rules, this suit is brought. Chas. Ogden, Esq., is attorney for Mrs. Hirschtel.

A funeral took place at one of the cemeteries near this city last week which saw the lack of sympathy between man and man fully illustrated. The deceased had long worked in this city, and after an illness of considerable duration, died of the consumption. At the funeral there was but one carriage and its occupant was the widow. At the grave the solitary mourner had to assist by pulling the stick from under the coffin as it was lowered to its last resting place.

An aperted fight, by biting and kicking, took place on the corner of Harney and 112nd.

Sunday, between a roan and a white horse which had been turned out loose for a little exercise. The fight lasted fifteen minutes and was comic beyond description. A big crowd assembled to watch the combat and it was only stopped by two successive dog fights, which took place in the crowd and drew the attention of the horses as well as the men.

The German torchlight procession next Saturday night will contain five hundred torches and all the German societies in the city. It will parade the principal streets, in honor of the bi-centennial of the landing of Germans in America. A celebration at Turner Hall afterward will embrace speeches by Jacob Hauck and F. Sekus, ex of the Tribune, Chas. Kaufman vice president of the day, the president yet to be chosen. Wm. Mack will probably be marshal. It is suggested that our principal business houses along the line of march decorate their store fronts.

A new organization to be known as the Metropolitan Club, composed principally of business men of Omaha was formed Sunday at Max Meyer's hall. The officers are M. Goldsmith, President; Sol Prince, Vice-President; Newman, Treasurer; D. Kaufman, Secretary; A. Mandelberg, Charles Schaub, S. Goetz, Trustees. The object of this club is social amusements, and it will soon have a permanent location.

A box will be sent to the Home for the Friendless next Friday from Mrs. Hawer's residence, 1512 Davenport street. Contributions of food and money are asked from the friends of Omaha for the inmates of the Home. Stoves are much needed now at the Home. Mrs. Hawer has a large stove worth $20. They will be sold for $10. Any one wishing to help in this work can give their contributions to Mrs. Dr. Dinmore, 1724 Capital avenue, or send her word and their contributions can be called for at their homes.—J. E. Grant, Secretary Auxiliary Society, Home for the Friendless.

Mrs. John T. Clelland, of this city, yesterday received a message from Chicago to come on as her husband was dead. No particulars were given and as Mr. Clelland only left home a month ago, and was in excellent health when last heard from, and was to have started home today, the whole affair is involved in mystery. The deceased is one of the oldest traveling salesmen in this State, representing last before his death the firm of Kahn, Schenbrunn & Co., the wholesale clothing of Chicago. He was only 35 years of age, and was from Marysville, Mo., where his mother now resides. It is a sad case and the details will be looked for anxiously.

The Iowa State Register of Sunday says: "Mr. H. D. Gilney, until recently chief dispatcher for the Rock Island in this city, and who resigned to accept a more lucrative position with the Union Pacific railroad company at Omaha, has been made the recipient of a very elegant clock of esteem from those employees of the Rock Island with whom his duties brought him most closely in contact, the conductors of the Central Iowa division. Conductor H. L. Cook leaves for Omaha this morning with a beautiful gold watch bearing the monogram "H. D. G." on the outer case, and on the inner the inscription, "To H. D. Gilney from the Conductors of the Central Iowa Division." Mr. Gilney's surprise will only be measurable by the esteem in which he is held not only by these sixteen conductors but by the officials and all employees of the company with whom he has for several years been associated." The watch was duly presented to Mr. Gilney yesterday morning by Conductor Cook.

HAD IT BAD.

A Man Who Was Pursued by a Fearful Smell.

He Prepares to Die Before the Cause is Discovered.

Among the worst practical jokes ever played on mortal man was that of which the senior member of a corner drug store in Blair was recently the victim.

While he was busy in the store one afternoon waiting on customers, a friend secured his hat, a new one, and stepping into an adjoining place, dextrously removed the silk lining, putting in the crown a thin film of the rottenest Limburger cheese that ever gladdened the nostrils of anyone possessing that depraved taste. The lining was then returned, and the hat put back where it was found.

When supper time came the man put on his hat and went home, where he found his wife taking bread, and stood by the stove, hat in hand, as she took the splendid leaves from the oven. The hat had a bad effect on the false lining of the hat, and its wearer thought it came from the bread. He smelled the leaves, and pronounced them unfit to eat. His wife followed suit and her verdict was the same, and they were fired out of the house.

The next morning the nuisance still continued to increase. Carpenters and plumbers were sent for the floor tapped in several places, and the cellar examined with lanterns. Once these inspections were sure they were "on to the racket," as the house owner stood a good bit in one corner, but they tore out a section of the wall and found nothing. A manure pile a block away was mistaken for the haunted man nearly had a fight in getting it removed.

He went down town and tried to wait on a couple of ladies, but they heat a lousy retreat, and when he went to dine at the hotel the landlord told him that he really couldn't let him stay there in that condition. When he went home in the evening his wife persuaded him to wash his feet well, as a last resort, and he did so, but the villain still pursued him.

Morning dawned again and the evening and the morning went the first day he had worn the hat and the evening thinking 24 hours and he was beginning to think he was going to die and that dissolution was already setting in. After he went to the store his wife went to consult the family physician but the joke got out and the almost distracted victim discovered the origin of his trouble. He threw the hat out in the alley, lining and all and taking down a double barreled shotgun is now hunting for the practical joker, and if he finds him there will be blood on the moon.

This story is literally true and not the result of any Limberger cheese in the reporter's hat.

Mrs. Jeffries and niece, Miss Dumas, left on Sunday to visit friends in St. Louis. T. W. Hatchford, is in the city, representing the Chicago coal house of J. L. Hathaway.

VETTNER'S VICISSITUDES.

A Laborer on the Streets Who Plays Like a Golschak.

Working for $1.75 a Day to go to the Boston Conservatory.

A Genius Who Hides His Light Under a Bush I.

It is an old saying that "appearances are often deceitful," and it is exemplified almost daily in everyday life.

A few evenings ago a Bee reporter dropped into a down-town summer resort, where during the summer concerts have been given frequently, but which is now closed. While conversing with friends he noticed a man who paced the floor constantly, smoking a common clay pipe and clad in the garb of a day laborer. Above the medium height, heavy built and wearing a full, brown beard, his face sunburned from exposure to the weather, he was the picture of health, and the worn, slouch hat, brown overalls and jacket of the same material and general get up of the man, gave him the appearance of being from the Emerald Isle.

Some one was lamenting the absence of any one who could furnish some music on the piano, when the proprietor said there was a man there who could play, and to the astonishment of the reporter, walked up to the man and asked him to play for him if he would favor the party, which he consented to do without either hesitation or eagerness. Going to the instrument he unlocked it, took several books of music from a chest near by and with the touch of an artist soon filled the room with melody. In fact, he played everything that was called for and much that was not, selecting the classical music and responding to anything that was named.

The reporter was subsequently introduced to him and learned that his name was Alfred Vettner and that he was of German instead of Irish extraction. He stated that he was traveling dirt for a contractor on Sixteenth street at $1.75 per day, and showed a card which he carried about him and which he showed to the reporter. His only explanation for occupying that position with such musical talent to help him out was that he had no influence to help him up and had to work until he saved money enough to do something for himself, it being his intention to take a course at the Boston Conservatory of Music, which he had long considered quite as good as going abroad.

It was subsequently learned that he was a graduate of a Heidelberg university, a Greek and Latin scholar and in short an educated man in every respect, even his English being spoken without the foreign accent and without introducing German words from time to time to express himself.

Mr. Vettner is without doubt a remarkable man. His playing is not that of the amateur but the professional, and he does not play by ear but reads music like a book, and it is doubtful if any pianist in town is more the master of the piano than he while many are earning a competency by teaching cannot play half so well, much as he was at a disadvantage by having his hands stiffened by toil, and it is greatly to his credit that with all his ability he is not ashamed to do honest, hard work instead of trusting to the fickle public to aid him in accomplishing his purpose.

When one said that if he would shave up, wax his whiskers and assume, put on a broadcloth suit and kid gloves he could readily obtain a livelihood, he modestly rejoined that he had seen the day when his hands were not unused to white kid gloves.

It is to be hoped that some one interested in musical matters will make the acquaintance of Mr. Vettner and aid in securing for him that influence which alone is necessary to place him in the highest rank in the musical world.

THE WRONG MAN.

An Adventure of One of the Base Ball Visitors.

Some of the Allegheny boys had quite an adventure on the last day of their stay in this city. Three or four stalwart fellows were out taking in the town Saturday morning, and dropped into a second-hand store, which was in charge of a woman. They got to cutting up, and soon one of them fell against a cot and slightly damaged it.

In the afternoon, just as they were about to take carriages for the grounds, an officer appeared on the scene and was accompanied by the woman, who picked out one of the men as the party who broke her furniture. The officer was about to arrest the base-ballist when he demanded to see a warrant first, and he backed in his demand by several equally stout-looking players. There were prospects of a lively row when the manager stepped up, and, learning the cause, inquired what the damage was. He was told that $5 would liquidate the bill, and rather than that, the manager went up and paid the amount in the police headquarters, after which he hired two boys to carry the cot down to the hotel, where he proposed to burn or break it up before he left.

It turned out that the man identified by the woman was not the man who did the damage at all, but that the latter stood in the doorway smoking the pipe and coolly taking in the situation.

THE OMAHA RESERVATION.

The Commissioners Still at Work on Their Report.

The three commissioners appointed to appraise the lands on the Omaha reservation, which are soon to be thrown into the market, have been at work in this city for quite a while, preparing their report, which will be ready to be forwarded to Washington in about a week.

The appraisers are Daniel Duggan, of Jackson, Dakota county, John Fontanelle, of Calhoun, and J. B. Detweiler, Esq., of this city. They have had a big job on their hands both in their work on the reservation and in summing up its results. But it is probable now that the lands will be open inside of thirty days for purchase.

Mr. Duggan is a very pleasant gentleman and an old resident of Nebraska, who, notwithstanding the overwhelming Republican majority, he has always been a rock-rotted Bourbon. His appointment on this commission came to him entirely unlooked for.
