A COLORED MAN'S KICK, The Political World not Altogether

If what has transpired in this community may be taken as an indication of what is true of other communities, the Republican press of this country has exhibited a remarkable degree of uneasiness during the last four or five months concerhing the negro. No sooner was the fact of the intention of holding a colored national convention made public in May last than our stalwart friends of the Remelancholy sighs, and circulate columns of editorial prophesies of the dreadfully demoralizing results which must inevitably grow out of such gatherings. Their prophesies in this respect, however, will be rated with those that are commonly received from the signal service bureau. The convention has met, done its work, and dispersed, the constituents thereof have returned to their respective vocations. And all this without any of the dreadful concomitants fore-hadowed in the predictions of our prophetic quilldrivers. THE BEE, in recent editions, admits that we have made rapid progress during the short period since our liberation from bondage, but implies that the cause of our failure to have attained the level of social equality with the whites is attributed to the fact of our having a larg proportion of "unreliable idlers among us, following this with the implication that the entire race, collectively and individually speaking, should expect to continue in a condition of po-litical and social abjection because of the presence of this obnoxious element. Does the editor of The Bee mean to say that the "unreliable idlers" among us constitute a larger per centage of the colored populace of America, than those who earn their bread by honest toil? Or would he say that the base element numbers a large proportion of our entire peo-ple, (colored,) than exists among the other classes of inhabitants. That there

The Republican of the 3d inst., says that "the negroes have forgotten that they are American citizens." If this be true, it may be said in answer, that the negroes have f regotten a fact which the editor of The Rspublican and others of his ilk seem never to have quite learned.
