This Week Will See the Reservoirs Ready for Water.

The Pumps and Machinery.

Yesterday THE BEZ missionary spent several hours in, looking over the waterworks in company with the engineer, Harry Birkinbine, and gaining from him such information as it seemed probable would interest the public and serve as answers to the many queries which are asked daily concerning the enterprise, the importance of which renders it among the vital concerns of the city.

There are about 160 men now at work, so that the enterprise is furnishing employment to many, while at the same time a permanent and valuable improvement is being made. At the river work on the long conduit is being pushed along lively, despite the obstacles which ever attend any and all attempts to do anything with the little Missouri.

The conduit from the river for 1,200 feet more is being boxed, the remainder being an open channel. In order to prevent all possibility of any mishap or stoppage of supply, a second conduit, also boxed, is being run for some distance from the head, a work which is in keeping with the carefulness and thoroughness of all features of the work.

Passing along down the length of the conduit one finds the siphon well all complete and ready for the starting-up of the works. At the engine house everything is rapidly getting its finishing touches. The building itself is a fine structure, and the interior is an interesting place to visit, as the pumps, boilers, etc., are now all in place. Here are two of Andrews' centrifugal pumps having a capacity of 30,000 gallons a minute, equal to a steady stream of 30 inches in diameter. They are propelled by two Westinghouse high speed engines. These pumps are to force the sandy water of the Missouri into the subsiding reservoirs. The other two pumps are Knowles' compound duplex pumps, maximum capacity of 6,500,000 gallons a day. These are to take the water after it settles in the subsiding reservoir, and force it to the storage reservoir at the head of Glen Avenue, from which it is distributed to consumers.

The steam heating apparatus at the engine house is also completed now. Four 100-horse power boilers loom up in fine shape. In setting them 110,000 bricks were used, enough to make a pretty good sized building of itself. The great stack reaches up about ninety feet, and the flue, measuring 48 inches and lined with fire brick throughout, makes a big throat for the smoke to pour out of. The interior of the building is being finished very attractively as well as conveniently. There is not a nook or corner but what is being finished thoroughly with the best material and most skillful workmanship in every detail.

The two great subsiding reservoirs, with a capacity of over eleven million gallons, will be all ready for receiving water by Thursday of this week. One is now all ready, and the other would have been had it not been for the rains, which kept the bottom so wet that it could not be bricked, and an attempt to hurry up the work by bricking the sides without this support resulted in a slide, necessitating the relaying of a portion, but now the work is going along all right, and a few days will see it finished.

There will then only remain the building of the fence around the tops of the reservoirs, and the grading of the walks.

The gate house between these two reservoirs is all completed, and here is noticeable the same thoroughness of work, even the hinges on the doors and the locks being of the best to be had. In fact anyone visiting the works cannot but be impressed with its prominent features of care and thoroughness in every detail, the work evidently being done to last.

The storage reservoir in the other end of the city, known as the Glen Avenue reservoir, is all ready now receive water. In fact the work has progressed that the reservoirs can be filled now at almost any time, and it is the intention to fill the subsiding reservoirs in the course of two weeks.

At the foot of the Glen Avenue reservoir is the gate house, which contains the fire protection apparatus and the necessary stop valves. This is complete in all respects.

This building, like the others erected, has its peculiar features which mark it as one of the water work's structures, all of which, though differing in details harmonize wonderfully in general appearance.

There has been some unavoidable delay in some of the pipe-laying, a large quantity having been wrecked in transit, and it takes time to manufacture other pipe to take its place. There is less than 2,000 feet yet to be laid, and it is the expectation that by crowding matters the water supply will be ready in less than a month.

The heavy and hard work has been done already. How heavy and hard, one can best conceive by taking a drive over the works and seeing the most prominent external evidences. Without such a personal inspection one can have little or no idea. There have been many obstacles and hindrances, floods, bad weather, delays in getting material, etc., but the work has been pushed along, and as it now nears completion, it assumes proportions which impress the average observer with its magnitude and expense, much more forcibly than has the pipe-laying and the other work, equally great, but not on the surface. A special and very important feature of the works is to be found at the new central police station, where the compressor of the fire protection is located. This is an upright wrought iron cylinder, in which as water is admitted at the bottom, compressing the air, which is carried through pipes to the operating cylinder of the fire protection apparatus at the central police station the entire pumping force of the waterworks can be brought to bear directly upon the entire city distribution. Should any accident occur to the pumping apparatus, an automatic valve opens and the entire contents of the store reservoir, amounting to 4,000,000 gallons, will be at the disposal of the fire department. There

At a meeting of the city council last night a petition was presented by McCleary asking for damages for washing out of a lot on Washington avenue.

An ordinance was presented prohibiting cows running at large. Referred.

Another ordinance was presented from the Masonic Temple association asking the right to build a driveway under the sidewalk. Referred.

An ordinance was presented granting the U. P. railway the right to lay tracks on Twelfth avenue from the transfer to Main street.

The following contracts were let for filling streets: Robert Percival, for filling Seventh street to the creek, 21 cents; Mr. Wilber, filling Broadway between Seventh and Eleventh streets, 22 cents; Sam Lacy, Seventh street from Broadway to the creek, 27 cents; Third avenue from Tenth street to Union avenue, 27 cents.

Sam C. Roedam, Ninth avenue from Broadway to the creek, 27 cents. Fifth avenue, between Third street and Ninth avenue, 28 cents.

All other contracts were left open until to-night.

Allerman Siedentopf asked that a committee be appointed to investigate the charges made against him by J. M. Phillips. The charge grew out of the appointment of the allerman's property. He desired to prove the falsity of the charge and then compel Phillips to take it back or sue him for damages. The committee was appointed with instructions to report this evening, to which time the council adjourned.

A PRODIGAL. A Wayward Omaha Girl Found Here and Taken Home.

Yesterday a very respectable appearing, middle aged mother appeared here in search of her wayward daughter, a girl of eighteen, who had gone to the bad. The poor mother's mission was a sad one, indeed, but it proved a successful one. With the aid of the police the girl was found in a house of ill-fame here, but she at first refused admission to her room, having locked the door and saying that she did not want to see her mother. The mother and the officers pleaded with her through the keyhole, and the girl inside began to sob as if her heart would break. The door was finally opened, and the mother entering threw her arms about her daughter, and both wept together. The girl even touched the heart under the blue coat and star, and the scene was indeed a sad one. The girl consented to return home, promising to return also to a path of virtue, and the mother took her with her across the river.

Civil Rights. In his sermon Sunday night Rev. Mr. Lemen handled the late civil rights decision somewhat. He did not assume to criticize the decision from a legal point of view. The decision might be all right as a law decision, but whether it was or not, its effect was a step backward and a big step. He also called attention to the manner in which the decision had been received in the south, as showing that there was still existing much of the old feeling of caste and that the color line was not yet obliterated. This indication should be a warning, as they pointed out an existing danger to the republic. In regard to the Supreme court he held that it was a relic of the respect felt by the early fathers for monarchical forms and that it would be better if the Supreme Justices, instead of being appointed, it was better for a certain term by the people themselves, and directly responsible to the people. He held, in fact, that it would be better if all such important positions were filled directly by a vote of the people, as the people of this country needed no monarchical sort of check. If the people trusted themselves, it was better even then, than to have them injured by others, for feeling the wrong, they would speedily right it themselves. The speaker leaned evidently toward pure Democracy, but not in the degenerated use of that term.

ROBBING A SLEEPER. A Cheyenne Man Has His Roll Taken While Asleep.

Robert Stuerman and J. M. Smith, two strangers in the city, were arrested yesterday on the charge of robbing a man named Fred Brokan, who came here from Cheyenne and stopped over night at the Broadway Hotel. The Cheyenne man when he went to bed had $95 in his pocketbook, and when he awoke yesterday morning his money was gone. The two men were arrested and had for two nights previous occupied a bed in that room, but that night had gone to the St. Jo house. It appears that Smith, however, had during the early part of the night visited the room in which the Cheyenne man was sleeping, but remained only a short time, then going to the St. Jo house, where he deposited with the landlord $85. Yesterday morning he took the money from the landlord, but when arrested he had only about $7 and denied that he had any larger amount. His chum, Sherman, was suspected of having helped in securing the money and he too was arrested, and both were placed in jail to await examination, their cases being set for next Friday.
