

WOMAN'S SECRET.
 "She is over-worked, poor thing! Proud, honorable, faithful, womanly, she determined to keep expenses down, and do the work herself. Right nobly has she done it, but at terrible cost. The sparkle that was in her eye when she was a bride is gone, and now she plumps and rosy cheeks are now hollow and colorless. She used to sleep lightly and gracefully, but now she drags one foot after the other with painful weariness.
 "For the sake of the family she does not mention her aching back, her acutely-painful nerves, her rheumatic twinges, her dyspeptic troubles, or the heavy weight she feels in her right side, that tells her her liver is going wrong. She thinks nobody knows about all that, and she will suffer on in quiet and unrepining patience. Alas! her secret is an open one, for it tells its own tale.
 "Whisper this in her ear, she ought to know it: Madam, Brown's Iron Bitters will heal your back, calm your nerves, kill your rheumatism, drive out your dyspepsia, and correct your liver. Dollar a bottle. Nearest druggist.

Catarrh.

At this season of the year everybody has a cold and some very bad ones. By frequent exposure the membranes of the nose become very sensitive, and catarrh and influenza are epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For many years in succession, beginning so far back I don't remember when I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of a continual flow from my nose.
Ring and Bursting Noises
 In my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Eliza H. Caulfield, Lowell, Mass.
 Jerome Brownell merchant and extensive miller at Victoria, Ontario, Canada, N. Y., writes: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for my Catarrh, and it has helped me. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best remedies for blood disease to be obtained."
100 Doses One Dollar.
 "I have been troubled with that distressing complaint, catarrh, and have been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and find it one of the best remedies I have ever taken. My trouble has lasted ten years, and never could get any relief until I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla."—Martin Sheld, Chicago, Ill.
Orange from Catarrh.
 Depends upon the amount and extent of the inflammation. Unquestionably many deaths from consumption can be traced to neglected catarrh. There is a violent distress, prostration and coughing spells, the eyes weep, the nose discharges copiously, and the head seems to split.
 In such cases Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the catarrh by its direct action in discharging the poison from the blood through the great outlet, so that healthy, sound blood reaches the membranes and is wholesome.

BANKER KILLS BURGLAR.

Mr. Choate's Fatal Aim by Gaslight.
Thrilling Scene at the Bedside of His Wife—A New York Cracksman Dead on a Newark Porch.
 Special to The New York Morning Journal.
 NEWARK, Nov. 10.—"Fire again and fire low!" That is what brave Mr. Choate shouted to her husband, Homer M. Choate, paying-teller of the Seaboard National Bank, in Wall st., New York, when he had fired one shot at a burglar in her bed-chamber, in their residence, No. 77 Lincoln avenue, in this city, at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Three little children were sleeping in the same bed with the heroic woman, and her husband had to fire over her and her darlings to hit the escaping burglar. Mrs. Choate was the first to hear the soft footsteps in the hall. She shouted to her husband, who slept in an adjoining room. He seized his revolver, sprang into the hall, lighted the gas, and then heard her shout:
 "Homer, there's a man in my room!"
 Mr. Choate ran to her room and saw a man passing quickly toward a window on the opposite side of her bed. He fired at the burglar, but missed him. It was then that Mrs. Choate, who had half raised herself in bed, and who could see by the flash that her husband aimed too high, shouted.
 He fired again and saw the burglar disappear through the window. Mr. Choate quickly dressed and ran into the street, where he met police sergeant Vreeland, who had heard the two shots. With lights a search was made for the burglar, and his dead body was soon found on top of a grape-arbor, close to the piazza running about the house. One pistol ball had entered his back and passed through his heart, and yet he had walked across the top of the piazza to the grape-arbor, a distance of about fifteen feet.
 Mr. Choate gave up the revolver with which he shot the burglar. Two chambers were empty. He said that several of the second-story windows had been open because the furnace had overheated the rooms, and in some way the burglar-alarm was disconnected. It was easy then for any active man to climb to the top of the arbor, cross the top of the piazza and enter through a window. The burglar had left his shoes and coat in the arbor.
 At 11 o'clock Mr. Choate was taken to court, where he was released on his own recognizance. Many persons viewed the body in Woodruff's morgue. John Boylan, a New York clothier, recognized the dead burglar as a man who had called at his house and asked for a loan, saying that he had a woman who let her garments uniform. Ex-Coroner Vreeland said that the burglar was one of the men who boarded a Broad st. car at midnight and asked where Lincoln-ave. was. At the "gully road," a very lonely spot on the edge of Woodside, the fashionable suburban site of Newark, the men alighted. One of the men had a thin face, was twenty-five or thirty years of age, of medium height, had on reddish-brown clothes, and had a light moustache. The other man was short, had dark clothes, and his whiskers and moustache were reddish. The description of the first man is that of the dead burglar, who is supposed to be a New York cracksman.
 It was at first attempted to arrange the questions between the Northern Pacific and the other Pacific roads by leaving each free to do such business as it could get, but stipulating that all should do it at the same rates. This would have given the Northern Pacific entrance into San Francisco and the Central Pacific entrance into Portland, and would have afforded the people of each of those communities the advantage of the services of two different concerns, even if they worked at the same rates. But difficulties of one kind and another forbade this solution. Human nature is weak even among railroad men, and if the corporation had been let into each other's territory there is no telling but what in a moment of degraded appetite for a bit of the traffic going to a competitor some freight or passenger agent might have "cut" a rate, and then upon the unlooked heads of the world would have been precipitated the horrors of a "war"—which is what railroad-men call that state of affairs when one road offers to do business for the people at lower rates than another.
 The danger that anything so distressing might occur, and that the railroad might get to underbidding so that an emigrant could move his family and his goods into California for less than $1,000, or the grape-growers of Los Angeles might put their grapes into the Boston market for less than $800 freight on a car-load, has been averted by the adoption of the simple system of the Duke of Omaha. The Pacific coast has been partitioned off among the railroads. California is to belong exclusively to the Central Pacific; Oregon and Washington exclusively to the Northern Pacific. Neither is to compete for business in the other's territory. In pursuance of this agreement the Northern Pacific has given notice that after Nov. 9 it retires from California, as far as through traffic is concerned. On the same way the Central Pacific will after this take no through freight or passengers for Oregon or Washington.
 Last evening a Journalist visited the Choate residence. It stands 75 feet back from the avenue in a lonely cluster of evergreens, and it is a square frame house. Mrs. Choate has dark hair and eyes, round figure and a pleasant face. She said that the whole scene passed so quickly that she had no time to be afraid. Besides, her husband was near, and the gas was lighted. Her only fear was for her children.
 Judge Depue has ordered Deputy Sheriff Davis and Detective Renner to use all measures to capture the burglar who escaped, and to employ New York detectives to aid them. At 10 o'clock last night the dead burglar had not been identified. An inquest will be begun on Monday afternoon.

 There has been forwarded from Vermillion station during the year ending November 1st, 1883: 9,000 bushels of barley, 7,000 bushels of point, 600 bushels of oats, also, 78,200 dozen eggs, 286,000 pounds of butter, and 26,200 pounds of hides. During the same time the total amount of freight received was 13,320 pounds, and 5,196,000 pounds forwarded.
 The Pembina county commissioners have petitioned Congress to appoint two additional judges for that district, as the present business is so enormous so that it is impossible for one judge to properly dispose of it. There have been over 2,000 cases tried in the present year. The district comprises 7,000 square miles and a population of nearly 20,000 people.
 It is estimated that the quarter section of land upon which the capital is located at Bismarck will sell for $200,000. At an auction sale of lots on the 22d of last month, nearly $15,000 was realized the first day from the sale of sixty-three lots. They would have sold for a great deal more had not the decision of Judge Edgerton as to the validity of the location of the capital makes men of money shy about investing in Bismarck real estate.

 The new industry of Montana is the goat business. Two hundred Angora goats have been purchased and brought from California to stock a ranch on Shields river.
 The commissioners of Yellowstone county have completed the work of equalizing the assessment roll. It is expected that the valuation of property will amount to $2,000,000. The rate of assessment on the Northern Pacific is $3.60 per mile, being somewhat less than that fixed at Gallatin.

Huntington's Poor Memory.
 "Huntington, the New York railway magnate, is a very cautious man," a Wall street operator told me recently. "He never gets into any speculation unless he has a sure thing. For instance, not long ago an acquaintance of mine who had been having some transactions with Huntington went into the latter's office and attempted to carry a certain point by persistently claiming that Mr. Huntington had said so and so during a previous conversation. "My memory is very poor on such things," said the magnate.
 "Mine is excellent; it is as fresh as if it were yesterday," remarked my acquaintance.
 "The fact is, my memory is so poor I dare not trust it, and I never dispute my friends in whom I have confidence," continued Mr. Huntington.
 "Thank you, thank you, I know I am right, I know I am," ejaculated my now confident acquaintance, who was delightedly thinking that by this little stroke he would be a few thousands better off than if he hadn't suspected the railway man's defective memory.
 "Very likely you're right—very likely," quietly said Mr. Huntington. But— "William, William, bring your book, turn to January 1, 1883, and see what it was I said to Mr. W."
 The stenographer stepped out from behind his little screen, brought out his little book, and my friend's little game was up.
 "Your memory isn't as good as you thought it was, is it?" said Huntington. "William perhaps you had better write out what the gentleman has been saying here to-day and read it to him, so he won't forget it."
 As Huntington grinned at this cruel sarcasm my discomfited friend suddenly remembered he had an engagement with his broker, and hastened away.
Evidence of the Best Kind.
 Richard T. Robinson is a druggist living in Racine, Wis. Here is what he says: "Afflicted with Rheumatism I was unable to articulate a word distinctly for fully two months. A liberal application of Thomas' Electric Oil completely cured me. Am pleased to recommend it to all who suffer from this ailment."
"Wuss Than That."
 The other day a lone man sat in the railing seat at Elmira, having a lean grip-sack at his elbow and his battered hat drawn down over his eyes.
 "Come from York?" queried an old chap in a gray wool suit as he sat down heavy on the bench beside him.
 "Yes."
 "They say the stock market down there has bin rather perturbed of late?" continued the old man.
 "Yes."
 "Happen to perturb you any?"
 "Perturb! Perturb!" growled the Yorker. "Why, you old ass, I was cleaned out of $48,000 inside of three days, and am now hunting for a railroad job in the West. Isn't that perturbed?"
 "Well," answered the old man as he scratched his head from north to south, "I should say that it was wuss—considerably wuss, and I'm blowed if I don't travel with you. I've jest lost $840 at bunco, and we kin squeeze hands and sympathize."
 The two men shook hands and the Yorker departed.

BETTER ASK MA.

If the young woman of the period be a little less "previous" and consult her mother before throwing herself into the arms of the first man she fancies, her after lot would be a good deal smoother. The recent Burlington case is much in point. One young woman, of Quincy, Ill., got up at the Union Hotel in Burlington, Iowa, last Monday, in company with Miss Stroud, a girl of 20. She had come with him in order to get married. In the evening a mock justice of the peace met them at the hotel and professed to marry them, giving the bride the usual certificate. The newly married couple remained together until Wednesday, when the husband informed the bride that he had another wife living, to whom he must return. In spite of this, however, he came back on Wednesday night and left for good only on Thursday morning. Upon consulting an attorney the girl found that the supposed "justice" was no justice at all, and that her social status was decidedly complicated to be pleasant. With regard to the young scoundrel Leseur, who did this deed, it is pleasant to know that he is liable to meet his deserts, for the marriage is valid according to Iowa law, and renders him liable in a criminal action for bigamy. This, however, will be but poor comfort to the girl or her friends. Her recklessness in consenting to marry a man so nearly a stranger to her is paralleled every day in all parts of the country. It is an outcome of the American system of allowing young girls to form intimacies with men without the supervision or advice of their natural protectors, who in the nature of the case could have no other design in interfering than to prevent future regret. It is a system which, when the husband informed the bride and morning, and at every moment between, the incontrovertible truth that never in life will she have any friends so mindful of her happiness as her own father and mother.

BALDNESS.

What Occasions it, and How it Can Be Avoided.
 Boston Medical Journal.
 O. Laasar has continued his observations of the nature of premature baldness, and has further convinced himself of the communicability of at least the form associated with dandruff. When the hair which had fallen out in such cases are collected, rubbed up with vasoline, and the ointment so made is rubbed among the fur of rabbits or white mice, baldness rapidly makes itself visible on the parts so treated. That this is not due to the vasoline was shown by anointing other animals with the vasoline alone, which produced no effect whatever. He considers that the disease is spread by hair-dressers, who employ combs and brushes to their customers, one after another without any regular cleansing to these articles after each time they are used. During frequent visits to the hair-dressers, it can scarcely fail that brushes are used which have been shortly before dressing the hair of one affected with so common a complaint as early baldness. Females, he thinks, are less often affected with this form of baldness, because the hair-dresser more frequently attends to them at their own homes, and there uses their combs and brushes. In order to prevent, as far as possible, the commencement of baldness, the hair should be cut and dressed at home with one's own implements, and these thoroughly cleaned. When it has begun, the following mode of treatment is suggested: The scalp is to be daily well soaped with tar or fluid glycerine potash soap, which is to be rubbed in for fifteen minutes firmly. The hair is then to be drenched with, first, warm water, and then gradually colder water. A two per cent carbolic solution is next to be pretty freely applied. The head is then to be dried, and the roots of the hair are to have a half per cent solution of Naphol in spirit rubbed into them. Finally, a pomade containing a half to two per cent carbolic or salicylic acid is to be used to the head. This treatment has in many cases brought the disease not only to a standstill, but the hair has been to a considerable extent restored.

 It is estimated that 8,000 gallons of whisky have been sold in Hallett this past season.
 A new body of ore has been struck in the bottom of the shaft of the Silver King mine. It is about three feet wide and rich.
 The Elkhorn mine produced, during the month of October, $22,000 gross in ore extracted and shipped to the Philadelphia smelters. The net profit, after freight, shipping, etc., amounted to $18,000, leaving a net profit to the owners of $44,000.
 Outside of Ketchum there is probably no mining camp in Idaho at the present time carrying on active operations with the vigor of Bullion. Two hundred men are employed on and in the Bullion mine, and an average of two car loads of ore are shipped daily. Forty men are employed in the Mayflower twenty in the Jay Gould, and twenty in the Idahoan. This makes a total of two hundred and eighty-five miners in four mines, besides numerous lesser forces in the vicinity.

 There has been forwarded from Vermillion station during the year ending November 1st, 1883: 9,000 bushels of barley, 7,000 bushels of point, 600 bushels of oats, also, 78,200 dozen eggs, 286,000 pounds of butter, and 26,200 pounds of hides. During the same time the total amount of freight received was 13,320 pounds, and 5,196,000 pounds forwarded.
 The Pembina county commissioners have petitioned Congress to appoint two additional judges for that district, as the present business is so enormous so that it is impossible for one judge to properly dispose of it. There have been over 2,000 cases tried in the present year. The district comprises 7,000 square miles and a population of nearly 20,000 people.
 It is estimated that the quarter section of land upon which the capital is located at Bismarck will sell for $200,000. At an auction sale of lots on the 22d of last month, nearly $15,000 was realized the first day from the sale of sixty-three lots. They would have sold for a great deal more had not the decision of Judge Edgerton as to the validity of the location of the capital makes men of money shy about investing in Bismarck real estate.

WYOMING.

Miles City eleven were saloons; and the only thing that put the fire out was whisky.
 The Utah & Northern freight office at Butte last month remitted $115,000 to headquarters as receipts on freight shipped here during the month.
 The assessment roll of Beaverhead county this year will show about $2,300,000 property, as against $1,300,000 last year. The tax levy is twenty mills.
 An assay office has been established in Livingston, notwithstanding the fact that nearly all the mining properties of Gallatin county are owned at Bozeman.
 The new industry of Montana is the goat business. Two hundred Angora goats have been purchased and brought from California to stock a ranch on Shields river.
 The commissioners of Yellowstone county have completed the work of equalizing the assessment roll. It is expected that the valuation of property will amount to $2,000,000. The rate of assessment on the Northern Pacific is $3.60 per mile, being somewhat less than that fixed at Gallatin.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Mrs. Hennessy, of Virginia, Nev., is said to be heir to $2,000,000.
 A farmer in Santa Barbara harvested 1,010 sacks of beans from thirty acres—about $135 per acre.
 The San Gabriel valley orange crop will this year amount to 30,000 boxes, as against 50,000 last year.
 The location of the late anthracite find within twenty miles of Los Angeles is not generally known.
 Next year will see a largely increased area of agricultural land under cultivation throughout New Mexico.
 Sixty thousand dollars were paid to the workmen in the Mare Island Navy Yard on Friday, the 9th inst.
 The grape crop of the Mesilla valley was disposed of at an average of six cents a pound. This is about double the price obtained for Keeley Island grapes.
 The Puget Mill Company have on their stocks at Port Ludlow, W. T., the hull of the largest barkentine yet built on the coast, a vessel of 700,000 feet lumber carrying capacity. She is all planked and the men are planing her off, and in a month or six weeks she will be ready for sea.
A Quick Recovery.
 It gives us great pleasure to state that the merchant who was reported being at the point of death from an attack of Pneumonia, has entirely recovered by the use of DR. Wm. HALL'S BALM FOR THE LUNGS. Naturally he feels grateful for the benefits derived from using this remedy for the lungs and throat; and in giving publicity to this statement we are actuated by motives of public benefit, trusting that others may be benefited in a similar manner. On sale by all Druggists.
Huntington's Poor Memory.
 "Huntington, the New York railway magnate, is a very cautious man," a Wall street operator told me recently. "He never gets into any speculation unless he has a sure thing. For instance, not long ago an acquaintance of mine who had been having some transactions with Huntington went into the latter's office and attempted to carry a certain point by persistently claiming that Mr. Huntington had said so and so during a previous conversation. "My memory is very poor on such things," said the magnate.
 "Mine is excellent; it is as fresh as if it were yesterday," remarked my acquaintance.
 "The fact is, my memory is so poor I dare not trust it, and I never dispute my friends in whom I have confidence," continued Mr. Huntington.
 "Thank you, thank you, I know I am right, I know I am," ejaculated my now confident acquaintance, who was delightedly thinking that by this little stroke he would be a few thousands better off than if he hadn't suspected the railway man's defective memory.
 "Very likely you're right—very likely," quietly said Mr. Huntington. But— "William, William, bring your book, turn to January 1, 1883, and see what it was I said to Mr. W."
 The stenographer stepped out from behind his little screen, brought out his little book, and my friend's little game was up.
 "Your memory isn't as good as you thought it was, is it?" said Huntington. "William perhaps you had better write out what the gentleman has been saying here to-day and read it to him, so he won't forget it."
Evidence of the Best Kind.
 Richard T. Robinson is a druggist living in Racine, Wis. Here is what he says: "Afflicted with Rheumatism I was unable to articulate a word distinctly for fully two months. A liberal application of Thomas' Electric Oil completely cured me. Am pleased to recommend it to all who suffer from this ailment."
"Wuss Than That."
 The other day a lone man sat in the railing seat at Elmira, having a lean grip-sack at his elbow and his battered hat drawn down over his eyes.
 "Come from York?" queried an old chap in a gray wool suit as he sat down heavy on the bench beside him.
 "Yes."
 "They say the stock market down there has bin rather perturbed of late?" continued the old man.
 "Yes."
 "Happen to perturb you any?"
 "Perturb! Perturb!" growled the Yorker. "Why, you old ass, I was cleaned out of $48,000 inside of three days, and am now hunting for a railroad job in the West. Isn't that perturbed?"
 "Well," answered the old man as he scratched his head from north to south, "I should say that it was wuss—considerably wuss, and I'm blowed if I don't travel with you. I've jest lost $840 at bunco, and we kin squeeze hands and sympathize."
 The two men shook hands and the Yorker departed.
