POINTS FROM THE PULPIT.

A Calm Discussion of Spiritualism—Plain Talk About Matrimony.

Despite the howling winds and the horrible night there was a large audience at the Baptist church Sunday evening to hear what Rev. Mr. Leman had to say about "Spiritualism," and among the audience were many of the prominent men in Spiritualistic circles. If they expected to follow the too common method of "pitching in red hot," they were sadly disappointed. He handled the subject clearly, logically, and dispassionately, and at the close some of those who differed from him, willingly congratulated him on the manner on which he had treated the subject. He reviewed the Bible accounts of the visitation of angels to this earth, and then met the question squarely whether these manifestations passed away with Bible times? He was frank enough to admit that he could find nothing in scripture or in reason to show that they did. On the other hand he believed that departed spirits influence the minds of mortals, and that they were "ministering angels." That was their mission—to help, to warn, to lead toward the good, but their mission was not to reveal anything new concerning either heaven or hell. Man had been given a complete revelation in the Bible, and it was not in the province of angels to add thereto. It was unreasonable to believe that angels could make revelations. If they could, Joseph Smith could make one, Moses another, Lazarus another. Each spirit might make a different revelation, and then who should decide which was right? Such a theory was not reasonable in view of the fact that man had all the revelation needed. History showed also that angels could not make revelations. The nations which had not the revealed word of God fell into idolatry, and could not by searching find God out. The Bible was also quoted to show the same fact.

The speaker pronounced modern spiritualism really materialism and of a gross form. They had fallen into error in many ways. He believed in the influence of spirits over the spiritual part of man's make up, but this he termed christian spiritualism. In striking at the abuses of modern spiritualism, he was careful about denying the kernel of truth and neglecting the conscious presence of a spirit influence, acting on the heart, and urging it to the good. The wheat shall not be thrown away with the chaff.

Next Sunday night he is to deliver another discourse, a virtual continuation of this, and will answer the questions: "Is there sorrow in Heaven?" and "Is there joy in hell?" He will answer some of the objections of infidelity, that those in heaven take in interest in the condition of those in hell.

PLAIN TALK INDEXED.

Rev. Mr. Mackay at the Episcopal church Sunday evening gave an address on "Marriage." He pictured out the ideal home and told some plain facts about the deplorable drift of married life. He spoke of the blessing of children in the home and how few seemed to appreciate them. The tendency was directly opposite, and the practical ideas concerning this subject were growing worse and worse. There were few children in the American homes. Somewhere, as he read in the paper the other day, it was the custom for a bride to carry a doll, and care for it, wash and dress it, until there were children of her own to care for. If such a custom prevailed here the country would be filled with dolls in the arms of adults. The speaker thought marriage fast becoming a mere means of satisfying lust, a legal sort of concubinage, and that the tendency was awful enough to demand heroic treatment at the hands of public speakers and thinkers. In regard to divorce, he believed that it was just in some cases, where marriage was really unbearable, and the union horribly abused by one, but he did not believe in marriage being a mere convenience, and that one should throw off a faithful companion for the sake of satisfying some fancy or caprice. If the earnest, plain talk given on this delicate subject could be carried into practice, it would make a revolution in society in many places.

THE VERDICT.

The Coroner's Jury Simply Find that Moses Nixon Hung Himself.

The suicide of Moses Nixon, an old resident of Pottawattamie county and an old veteran, was announced in yesterday morning's Bee. A jury was impaneled, consisting of Charles D. Musser, A. S. Barrett and Thomas Vallier, and they returned a verdict simply that "deceased came to his death by his own hand, in accordance with a card found upon his body stating, 'This is my own act.'" The little daughter of the deceased, a girl about twelve years of age, was the one that discovered the body of her father hanging in the barn, with a card simply stating as above that it was his own act. What led him to thus take his own life is still a mystery, but it is thought that it was done in a fit of despondency bordering on insanity. The bad storm of last summer ruined his crops and over this loss he brooded greatly. Sunday morning after eating his breakfast as usual, he went to the barn to look after the stock there, and about two hours later was found hanging there dead. Mr. Nixon was aged 47 years and was born in Fayette county, Penn. He had been a resident of the state thirty years, and as stated yesterday, was a member of the Abe Lincoln post G. A. R., and about thirty of his comrades went out to the Hazel Dell church yesterday afternoon to attend the funeral. Nixon leaves besides his wife, two sons and a daughter.

BUILDING BOOM.

Creston Seems to be Having One Just Now.

Creston, November 26.—Our city is just now experiencing a building boom, and thinking that THE BEE readers would be interested in knowing something of its details, a call was made on our architect, Mr. W. K. Ball, who gave me all the desired information required. Since a little over a year ago there has been no less than twenty-five or thirty business houses put up in elegant and substantial style. The two on Pine street, 46x100 feet and two stories high, are built of pressed brick and cut stone trimmings. The Iowa State Savings bank building, on the corner of Pine and Montgomery, together with the two next, are of the same style, and making that street loom up immense. I should mention in this connection the three built by Dr. Nance (brother of ex-Governor Nance of Nebraska) three brick buildings, all occupied I believe. But we are inclined to think that Maple street is outstripping Pine. Such great improvements as have been going on of late.

The Merchants' block, with its seven stores 100x154 feet, and all were rented, except those occupied by the owners themselves, before the foundations were laid. These, together with the fine structure occupied by THE DAILY ADVERTISER office, and the Eagle block, as offices for lawyers, doctors and sleeping apartments, and The Weekly Commonwealth, will make Maple street look handsome, so that eventually we opine it will be like unto Fourth street in the great city of St. Louis, (more or less).

Then there have been built two new school houses of brick, not, however, quite completed as yet, but will be soon. Mr. Ball, the architect informs me. These will be heated by steam, a grand idea, much safer and less liable to take fire, as it would be in case of the heat by stoves.

These school buildings will accommodate about 775 pupils; six large rooms in each building, and much more commodious than the little narrow tuckered up houses that are now in use.

Fine residences have also been built to the number of some ten or twelve, besides cheaper dwellings to the number of about 100. Altogether our beautiful city feels proud of her success in the past. Mr. Ball thinks that another year will see a greater boom than this, as everything is now most substantially arranged for.

The beauty about all nice buildings is that they are put up in a substantial and fine architectural style. This always catches the stranger's eye, as he perceives steps for a few hours in our city, and the general remark is, "Why, what a nice town you have here; I am surprised."

We should have mentioned before that the C. R. & O. have just completed a large store house. It is quite large and commodious, and will be considered a great convenience to the town.

WINTERS.

SEEING THE WORLD.

An Easy and Pleasant Chance to Travel While Staying at Home.

The tickets are only twenty-five cents and for children fifteen cents. The proceeds are to go for the benefit of the church that is making some marked improvements.
