

What will it do? Brown's Iron Bitters? Good for what? Well, see what it has done. To begin with dyspepsia. It has cured some of the worst cases. Then chills and fever. Who wants to shake with cold and burn with heat, when a bottle or two of Brown's Iron Bitters will drive the source of the mischief away? How about rheumatism? It cured Mr. Brashear, of Baltimore, and hundreds of others. Those dreadful nervous troubles. Mr. Berlin, of Washington, the well-known Patent attorney, was entirely relieved by Brown's Iron Bitters. The ailments of the kidneys. Brown's Iron Bitters cured Mr. Montague, of Christiansburg, Va., and an army of other sufferers. Debility and languor. The Rev. J. Marshall West, Elliptic City, Md., is one of the many clergymen restored by Brown's Iron Bitters. And as with vertigo, malaria, liver complaint, and headache, Brown's Iron Bitters is the Great Family Medicine.

HENRY VILLARD'S LOVE.
Romantic Career of a Millionaire New Yorker.
How He Achieved Fame and Fortune and Won a Beautiful Boston Belle—The Memory of His First Sweetheart.

On a bright, frosty morning late in the fall of 1853 a stout German youth hastily made his exit from the little university of Munich, Bavaria. He wore the conventional tight-fitting suit of the German student. A cloth carpet-bag contained his wealth with the exception of a few florins in his pocket and a stout walking stick in his hand. Heinrich Hilgard was a bright youth, an apt scholar, had passed through the elementary school of Zweibrücken, the town of his nativity, and the several classes of the Latin school, and finally had spent a year at the French school at Pfulzbourg, in Lorraine. He terminated his pursuit of knowledge by taking "French leave" of the university of Munich. School life had grown monotonous. He had entered upon it at six years of age, and twelve years later had concluded to seek his fortune. The youth tramped to the home of his father, who then occupied a judicial bench in the town of Zweibrücken. With a fair show of meekness and contrition the son listened to the anticipated censure and then coolly proposed that his father should settle upon him a small fortune with which he desired to speculate in American cities. The result of this interview was that a few days later Heinrich Hilgard left the parental roof with sufficient funds to carry him across the ocean to a settlement in a remote corner of Illinois where an uncle had preceded him a year before and was engaged in farming.

Heinrich, it is said, had left behind a beautiful French maiden, whose acquaintance he had made while attending college in Lorraine, and his step in entering upon the world had been induced by an ambition to become worthy of her hand.

On November 3, 1853, the intrepid young man landed in Castle Garden. The grandeur of the metropolis dazzled him. Instead of going at once to Illinois, he decided to try his fortune here. A year of misfortunes and ill-luck, however, served to alter his mind considerably. With a sinking heart he sought his relatives in the township of Belleville, St. Clair county, Illinois, and there remained as a farm assistant for several years.

During the long winter evenings Henry, as he had now become known, amused himself by corresponding for German papers at his old home. At last he secured a little money for his articles in a German paper in St. Louis. This was the turning point in the career of the ambitious youth. He soon increased his knowledge of the English language by diligent study, and soon after settled in St. Louis, where he obtained employment. Then he interested himself in the progress of the rapidly increasing western cities and wrote glowing accounts to "The New York Tribune" and "Herald." In 1858 he was engaged to report the political campaign between Lincoln and Douglas for the New York Press. He rapidly rose in journalistic circles and then for the first time the name of Henry Villard, a non-diplom, became known to the people of New York. Under this name he won many laurels when war was declared between the north and south in 1861 he was engaged by "The New York Herald" as a war correspondent.

VALUABLE TIMEKEEPERS.
The Public and Private Clocks of Philadelphia.

Some that Do Not Vary a Fractional Part of a Second in Twenty-Four Hours—The State House Clock.

Philadelphia Record, Dec. 1.

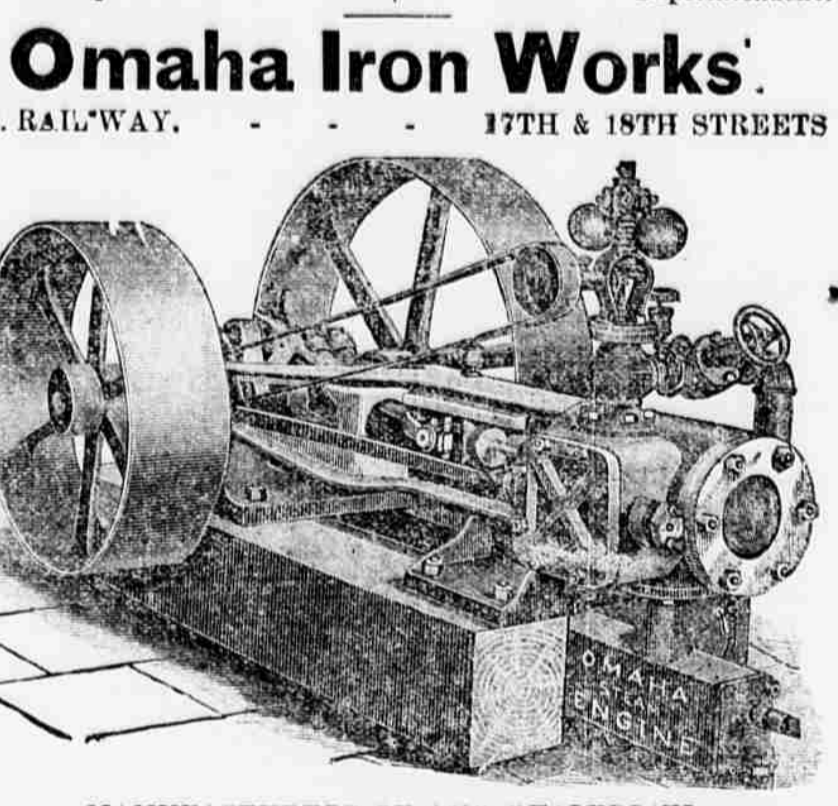

With a radius of two squares of Third and Walnut streets there is a number of valuable clocks, the owners of which pride themselves on the accuracy of their timekeepers. This rivalry is a subject of much good-natured comment among the business men in that vicinity, and has led to the keeping of daily records of the time each clock shows. Many days elapse without some of them varying a fractional part of a second. Others again, on account of their location near the street, suffer from the vibrations of walls during the passage of heavily loaded teams, which result in a slight variation from the true time. Every day at noon the time of each clock is taken and comparisons made therefrom.

But if it is true that General Sheridan entertains these sentiments, then he fails to comprehend American institutions and is unworthy of the high place to which he has been raised by the favor of the people. He is the second military officer in the national army, the president being the commander-in-chief. The secretary of war is an executive officer only in the sense that he is the sole representative of the president in military matters, and when the latter does not see fit to interfere in the actual conduct of the war, he gives the general absolute power during a time of peace would be to make him independent of his commander-in-chief and create an imperium in imperio, a thing not alone foreign to republican institutions, but repugnant to the spirit of all civilized governments. The chief civil officer, who is necessarily the chief military officer, is in America, usually a civilian in his antecedents, but not always. There is no alternative but to make him the supreme executive in military as well as civil matters, and in his absence or non-action that supremacy devolves on his secretary for the department of war. The nation uses the army as a man uses a sword; it is his weapon and he never permits it to escape his control. This republican way for an army neither Prussian guard, Strelitz, Janissaries nor Mamelukes, but patriotic soldiers, always amenable to civil command and civil discipline. There may be differences of opinion between the general of the armies and the chief representatives of the civil power, but there may also be and often are differences between a general and his subordinates. These are human, and when they occur the difficulties arising from them must be obviated according to the situation.

THE JURY WENT "DIMMYCRATIC."
Washington Star.

A pretty good story is told upon the authority of one of the postoffice department inspectors who was sent to North Carolina to attend to the prosecution of a man who had riled the United States mails. While the inspector was awaiting for his case to be called he sat in the court-room. A jury filed into the court-room and the inspector observed that it was composed of seven white and five colored men. "Gentlemen of the jury have you agreed upon a verdict?" asked the clerk in that solemn manner which pertains to court clerks. "We an sir," responded an old gray-headed negro man, who had been foreman of the jury, either out of spite or because of his white head. "What is the verdict?" asked the clerk. "Why, Judge," said the colored foreman, looking up to the court, "de jury am gone 'dimmycratic.'"

How Japanese Pop the Question.
Cincinnati Enquirer.

When a young man has been "stitched" with an almond-eyed beauty he ties a branch of the "celastrol alatus", or species of mistletoe, to the door of her house, which, if allowed to wilt and die, implies that he is rejected, but if it be taken in time and the inspector observed that it was composed of seven white and five colored men. "Gentlemen of the jury have you agreed upon a verdict?" asked the clerk in that solemn manner which pertains to court clerks. "We an sir," responded an old gray-headed negro man, who had been foreman of the jury, either out of spite or because of his white head. "What is the verdict?" asked the clerk. "Why, Judge," said the colored foreman, looking up to the court, "de jury am gone 'dimmycratic.'"

AN EXTRAORDINARY CASE.
AUSTIN, TEXAS, Feb. 20th, 1880
To Mr. J. Y. Graham, Druggist:

Dear Sir—My case was an acute form of bronchitis, and was of one and a half year's duration. I employed the best medical aid possible, but failed rapidly, until the doctor said I would die; that my case was incurable. Thrown upon my own resources, I got a bottle of Dr. W. H. H. BARKER'S PAIN-PANACEA FOR THE LUNGS, and in six hours felt a decided relief. In three days the cough almost disappeared. Now that my chances of life are good for many years, I earnestly recommend the above to every sufferer of lung or throat disease.
