Subscription Rates: By Carrier 25 cents per week; By Mail 10.00 per year.

MINOR MENTION.

The Draids' ball takes place this evening. 11-4 bed quilts, 75c, at Cooke & Morgan's.

The thermometer was fooling around about 20 below yesterday.

What has become of the board of trade and the citizens association.

The Progressive Euchre club met with Mrs. W. A. Maur last evening.

Revival services will be held nightly at the Broadway Methodist church at 7:30 o'clock.

In the circuit court yesterday a divorce was granted in the case of George Umble vs. Lizzie Umble.

E. S. Sherlock, of Missouri Valley, has bought an interest with Henry Wagner in Crystal Hall.

Dr. Macrae was called to Omaha yesterday in the case of Mrs. R. W. Crayton, who is very ill.

P. P. Kuhn, formerly of the Colorado house, is now at Los Vegas, as appears from a private letter from him at that place.

The Royal Arcanum party at Benoit hall next Friday night promises to be as enjoyable as the previous ones. If so, it will be enjoyable enough.

Justice Schurz yesterday tied the knot, and tied it tight, making Peter Nelson and Annie Thompson, both of Garner township, husband and wife.

A mile race on roller skates has been arranged to take place one week from this evening, between Johnny Epenter and Henry Scheide, at the rink.

Bob Bardette's lecture has demonstrated that Council Bluffs will give a liberal support to worthy entertainments of this kind. Now let others follow.

Which one of the old lady's family got stuck on a stud-horse pld, and wrote that article so full of penitence and warnings, which was pasted in the scrap-book yesterday?

The railroad men have need of patience to answer all the queries now about trains and the public need perseverance to find out anything about them. The storm has caused sad havoc with time tables.

If the Oakland team keeps on growing it will be all O. K. soon. Brother Cox has just enlarged it again, and the pleasing feature of it is, that while covering more ground it isn't thinner, but thicker. Cox is an enthusiastic, untiring worker.

H. R. Stewart has completed a very fine crayon of an ideal child's face, used by Horsford in his advertising cards. The crayon is a fine piece of work, and Gorman has made some excellent photographs of it.

David Totevich says he has not been drunk for eleven months, and he will hereafter prosecute any person who charges him with being drunk, unless positive dates and facts are shown to sustain the charge.

The N. Y. Z. club is arranging for a Martha Washington party on the evening of the 21st. The club of young fellows has been very successful in its previous entertainments, and will doubtless make an enjoyable one of this.

Alderman Keating is said to have purchased the Anheuser beer bottling works in Omaha. It is not known whether he will move there or not, but probably not, as he has large property interests in this city, which should hold him here.

One of the filiest divorce cases ever brought in court here is that of Harriet Heover vs. David Hoover. The ground on which divorce was claimed was adultery and the evidence as presented by depositions was most disgusting. The woman was granted the desired divorce.

In the recent biographical sketches of the late Moses Shinn, the old error was committed of crediting to him the peculiar prayer offered before the legislature in 1858, in which "sound currency, pure water and undefiled religion" was asked for. The famous prayer was made by Moses Shinn, but offered by A. T. Shinn, his brother, and the father of Frank Shinn. He was presented to the house by now Congressman Hepburn, and Congressman Pusey was a member of the state senate at the time.

The dear old grandmother, although she has been a pet of the railroads for years, seems to learn nothing about rail-roading. In commenting upon the late "Q" disaster, she recommends that to prevent such accidents the companies should have track men to pass over the road for each train, and inspect the track for a certain distance. In another column she says: "The accident was one which no human agency could avert, and one liable to happen to any train at any time." Just how a track inspector, walking along with the thermometer as far below zero as it can get, and a regular blizzard blowing, could tell what particular rails are going to break when the train gets on it, is a little mysterious.

The democratic official organ makes a feeble attempt to distort the figures of comparison of the various city administrations running back a series of years. It claims that under the present administration the total expenditure for the year will only be $82,000. Just how this is made out does not appear. The auditor's report shows that from March 17, 1884, to January 31, 1885, this council had allowed $77,600 of bills. This makes an average of $7,500 a month, or $90,000 for the year, and not $82,000. The official paper confines its comparison to one single year. Why does it not in all fairness compare with the other years preceding the present, through a series, as did THE BEE, and give the public the facts, rather than attempt to mislead?

THE LATE LYNCHING.

Judge Loofbrow Explains His Responsibility, and How He Met It.

In answer to the blame that has been placed upon Judge Loofbrow for granting a change of venue in the case against the Jallerson murderers at Audubon, and also for his action in changing benches with Judge Henderson, Judge Loofbrow has explained to an Audubon correspondent that a week ago last Monday, upon convening court at Nevada, Judge Henderson found motions on file in some cases, asking a change of venue upon the ground of prejudice on the part of the judge. He then announced to the bar that he would try to get Judge Loofbrow to hold his court this week, and on Thursday morning he announced that Judge L. had consented to do so, and would open court Monday morning at Nevada, and the change was accordingly made. He says that on Saturday morning he informed the district attorney and the counsel for the defense that he had made up his mind to grant the change of venue and send the case to Cass county, where his court convenes next Monday, and they could be tried without delay, and he would so announce upon convening of court that morning, but just before court convened the counsel for the defense informed him that a large number of people would be in town that day, and that as a party of liquor could be had they feared for the safety of their clients in case the ruling was then announced, and the judge, being convinced that there was some grounds for alarm, consented that the announcement would be deferred until Monday morning, of which the district attorney was duly advised. While the judge feels chagrined at the charge made, yet he says in view of the tragic culmination his only regret is that he did not make sure of the safety of the criminals before leaving Audubon.

AFTER LEROCHE.

Word Sent to St. Louis to Arrest Him and Have Him Brought Back.

A letter was yesterday received from the skipping newspaper man Lerche, who is now in St. Louis. In it he denounces his friends for not keeping the affair quiet, and says he would have come back to the city at once had he known when at Mineola that his character had been defamed, but now that he was at so great a distance, he thought he would say there or go further west until he found some work. His wife and little child still remain here, and they are indeed to be pitied, he having left them alone here to stand the brunt of the blow and the disgrace of the charges made.

He also said some very hard things in the letter about Mr. Conrad Geise, from whom it is charged he stole the money and the $100 check.

Yesterday Mr. Geise concluded to have Lerche arrested, and an information was filed in the superior court. A telegram was sent to St. Louis to have Lerche arrested and held until Marshal Guannella could get from here after him. It is claimed that there is strong evidence against Lerche. The stolen money was in times and in kind largely, and Lerche got large money in exchange for such money in three different places. With no money to pay for it, it was Lerche who presented the $100 check to Beckman & Pusey's bank. It is supposed that the check has been destroyed.

PERSONALS.

A. W. Askwith is among the attorneys attending court.

Mr. R. Morgan is recovering rapidly from his attack of pneumonia, and will be able to be out in a few days.

Frank Shinn, of Carson, arrived here yesterday to look after the interests of his clients at this term of court.

John Aldes, Esq., has returned from New Orleans. He says the expedition has been aborted; that it is in fact a better show than that at Philadelphia, and the only criticism he offers is that the show is too big for the town.

Clara Louise Kellogg's Failure Chicago News.

The truth about Miss Clara Louise Kellogg is that she is not sick, but disgraced. Her first concert here last week was a professional failure, although it was a financial success. The local papers handled it rather roughly, and one paper was so unkind as to omit all mention of Miss Kellogg's name and performance in its somewhat extended notice of the affair. Miss Kellogg was somewhat disgraced, but she probably would have appeared again had her friends here not persuaded her to abandon her project. They represented to her that she was wealthy and was not compelled to appear in public; that the press evidently contemplated scoring her whenever the opportunity was presented; that she was injuring her reputation and inviting a great deal of personal humiliation by affording these opportunities for harsh newspaper criticism, and that she would be better off every way if she were to invent an excuse for annulling the Chicago engagement. These counsels prevailed, and Miss Kellogg is said to have fallen ill quite conveniently. At any rate, when the second "grand concert" was given in one of the suburbs last night, a substitute took her place on the programme and Clara herself was chewing the bitter end of tomorrow away off in New York.

It is a curious fact that of the 98 members of the English privy council, 97, or rather more than one-half are peers. A there are 513 peers, it would seem that at about one in every five is a privy councillor.

To a Philadelphia note of rejoicing that "the Liberty bell's trip is through states where slaves no longer are," a southern paper retorts: "The old bell would tell if it had to pass through Fall River or the Hocking valley."

There has arrived at San Francisco by mail a hat that has made the tour of the world. It was started from Oregon town as a joke, and as it is well supplied with uncaroled stamps, it is probable it will keep traveling until it is worn out.

STOLEN LETTER, NO. 2.

Mr. R. Hears From His Dude Friend in Omaha.

DEAR OLD FELLAH!—I was weally intoxicated with delight on hearing from you; but was so awfully sorry to hear that you were in such a dreadful predicament. Do you know, Fwed, I weally survived the leap year perilly beautifully.

When the fair charmers became too persistent, I referred them to you, and it went too much for them. I can't possibly go over Thursday, but dear Chawles has offered his services, and will do his best. You see, a few weeks ago, I received a most dweefull nervous shock; was only able to venture out yesterday for the first time. You have no idea, Fwed, how frightened all the dweesh girls they sent me, and the beautiful flowers my dear friend, Miss Maria gave a scree, you know, for a charming friend she was expecting from abroad.

To fellows were all awfully excited over the affair, for we had heard such wonderful reports about the fair one. Well, the morning previous to the momentous occasion, I was strolling down Farnam street feeling very weasy, having spent over two hours trying to determine the style of tie to wear, when I beheld a most charming girl coming up street carrying a satchel. She was dressed in a plain black dress, don't you know, but weally the most bewitching gall I ever saw. I immediately arranged my eye-glasses, twiddled my hair, and with a fatalist smile, but it was no use, actually, old chappie, she didn't see me. I paused to consider. She went into a store on the corner and I walked passed several times and glanced in, no results. She was perfectly unconcious. It was weally becoming interesting. I resolved an another attempt, so, when she came out, I approached the fair unknown, and taking off my seal-skin and bowing my most irresistible bow, humbly begged the privilege of carrying her satchel. Without the slightest hesitation she handed it to me, and said she "believed I might, as far as the Paxton."

Ah! the bliss of that moment! I ventured to inquire if she was a stranger in the city. She turned on me a most withering glance, her delightfully arched eyebrows arched still more, and in a voice of queenly dignity, said, "I believe you have forgotten yourself, sir, I prefer my porters to walk slightly in advance of me." Ah! my dear boy, it was the awfulest moment of my life; it quits overcomes me to think of it. On we went, and the fellows all smiled a knowing smile as I passed. After a period of time that seemed interminable we arrived at the hotel, and as she relieved me of the satchel said in a most heavenly voice, "You look tired," then, dropping a half-dollar into my hand, was gone. I stood dotted to the ground, para y'd, and gawd, electric'd. Char, me along directly and I poured my pitiful story into his sympa he cal care; he took me home and cared for me like a brother. By evening my shattered nerves were sufficiently restored to venture to the soiree. It was a tremendous swell affair, don't you know; the house was crowded when it started. Maria came forward to welcome me. "I am so glad you have come," said she, "I have told my friends all about you and she is dying to meet you; let me introduce you, Miss --, Mr. S --."

I r used my eyes; that look was their last. By Jol! it was the same girl! They carried me home a wreck. Ah! forgive these tears, bear with me, my dear boy; recalling these painful details has unmanned me. I feel as if I were going to have a relapse. ADEW SIMPSON.

P. S.—Dear Chawles I'm just told me that the girl was from Council Bluffs.
