"MORAL SOCIALISM"

As Handled by Rev. T. J. Mackay at St. Paul's Church on Sunday.

"We have this treasure in earthen vessels."—2nd Cor. iv. 7.

Modern socialism is to-day attracting the attention of thoughtful minds all over the world. Its claims and pretensions are being widely discussed by our most eminent thinkers, with a view to discover, if possible, its weak points, and avert thus a danger which threatens the very existence of society. While these men are so engaged, let us turn our attention to what I consider another phase of this same subject—Moral Socialism.

It needs no close analysis of human nature to discover the truth that we are at heart all more or less idol worshippers, or idol destroyers. We worship the gods and heroes who worshipped the attributes of humanity under images of wood and stone, with this difference, that our idols are living men and women of like passions with ourselves, and for this reason liable at any moment to be cast from their pedestals because of their failure to realize the perfection which we demand of our divinities.

It seems a necessity of human nature—to this idol worship—and is a feeling not to be contended but encouraged, if the idols of our imagination are of the kind that will lift us heavenward, and furnish a true inspiration for the conduct of life.

As the man is true as the old saying, "as the man is so will his God be." No man is worthy of being set up as a grand character which ever represents to him what his soul aspires to; Socrates, Wilberforce, Milton, Washington, Emerson, George Eliot, Harriet Martineau, or Florence Nightingale. Men and women worthy of our admiration and imitation in the lofty virtues of life. There is something touching in the desire to outdo such characters, and place them on a height above the common levels of this earthly life. It voices a deep feeling in our hearts. A feeling that precludes within us an aspiration after that same goodness and greatness within ourselves. It is something grand in human nature which desires only to know such men and women as only great and noble, which refuses to tear aside the veil through whose mellowed light we gaze upon them. We rejoice that what we cannot attain unto, our fellow men have reached. That while we have fallen and faltered our brother man, none of our bone and flesh of our flesh, have scaled the highest heights and stand as beams for the plain below. Would that we might say this truthfully of human nature as a whole.

But there is a sense of satisfaction among certain orders of mind when such an idol is cast down from his pedestal and found to be after all only clay, not gold nor marble. Such a feeling shows the innate baseness of a nature that can rejoice because others are no better than themselves, and I know of no more indicative of littleness of heart than the desire to pick flaws in the characters of others, and by open suggestion or secret innuendo, to cast down from the pedestal where friendship, admiration, esteem, honor had placed the noble character of the being we look up to and admire.

It is the same feeling of envy that prompts the socialist to cut down the trees of the property socialist. The one aims his blows at the property possessions, which are ours only for a time, the other at our priceless heritage of character—that which alone endures, the dearest jewel of our soul. And while the political socialist is content to cut down the trees of our earthly possessions, which are ours only for a time, the other at our priceless heritage of character—that which alone endures, the dearest jewel of our soul. And while the political socialist is content to cut down the trees of our earthly possessions, which are ours only for a time, the other at our priceless heritage of character—that which alone endures, the dearest jewel of our soul.

SPRING FRESHETS.

The Rush of Land Seekers to Nebraska and Dakota.

Three Points of Interest to Home-Builders—The Santee and Crow Reservations and North-West Nebraska.

The Oklahoma lands are not the only attraction in the west to speculators and settlers. There are vast tracts of the public domain in Nebraska and the northwest still awaiting magic touch of the plow to bring forth a bountiful reward for the labors of the husbandman. The advancing spring already furnish strong evidence that the immigration to that section of the state the present year will be tremendous. Brown, Cherry and Sioux counties and the newly organized counties of Dawes and Blaine, will secure the greater portion of the tide of settlers. It is said claims are already filed along the proposed route of the Sioux City & Pacific road, from Valentine to the state line, but there is plenty of fine farming and grazing land adjoining. The land office at Valentine is crowded with claims, applications reaching as high as fifty days. The lands are subject to homestead, pre-emption and timber culture entries, the bill repealing the two latter laws having failed in the conference committee of congress.

THE Santee RESERVE.

The Santee reservation, a tract of about 120,000 acres in the northern part of Knox county, Nebraska, will be open to settlement, except such tracts as the Santee take in severally, after May 25. This land is mostly convenient to railroad, and, excepting a belt of bluffs along the north border, is most excellent farming land. As this Santee land may, when opened to settlement, be taken as homestead, timber claim or pre-emption, it is likely to be snapped up early. To reach it the intending settler will take the Milwaukee road to Springfield, which lies on the Dakota side opposite the reservation, or may continue on the same road to Running Water, and there cross the river to Niobrara, which town is just west of the border of the reservation. Niobrara may be reached also by a twenty-mile stage drive from Creston, the terminus of the branch of the Sioux City and Pacific. The land office, where, after the lands are open to settlement, filings will be received, is at Niobrara.

For farming, these lands are far preferable to any on the western frontier. They border the Missouri and have all the advantages of established markets, railroads and old settlements. They excel in grass and are fully within the great corn belt, arguments of great weight to the experienced stock and grain farmer.

DAKOTA LANDS.

The government lands of Dakota have been rapidly disappearing until all of the free lands south of the forty-sixth parallel are for the most part controlled by the counties of Campbell, McPherson, Walworth, Potter, and the recently opened Crow Creek reservation. The comprehensive scope of the first and most productive lands to be found in the great valley of the Missouri, and the present season will no doubt see the entry of the last available acre in south Dakota lying east of the Missouri river. However, this will be far from exhausting Dakota's homes for the poor. The Mouse river district in the north is in itself a state in extent of territory, of which lands excelled by neither the Red nor Jim river valley, while in the Black Hills region are to be found some of the most fertile valleys in the whole west.

There is an immense rush of settlers toward the Crow Creek reservation. Every train brings scores, and already a thousand persons have squatted on the reserve, awaiting the official announcement of the opening. Trouble is feared as the squatters have been notified by the Indian agent to move off, and have telegraphed for guns and ammunition to hold the fort. The same time this spring open to settlement records this spring. The original records of the surveys in Washington are said to have been obliterated, and a new survey will be necessary.

The Crow Creek reservation embraces two contiguous tracts of land lying along the Missouri river between the American creek on the south and Medicine creek on the north, a distance of from sixty to seventy miles with an average width of fifteen miles extending back from the Missouri river. It comprises some of the best soil in Buffalo and Hughes counties. It was ceded to the government and opened for settlement twenty-six years ago, having been a portion of the territory included in the Yankeet and Ponca cession of 1859.

One of the last official acts of President Arthur is the restoration of the great portion of this tract to the public, there being nearly five townships of land surrounding the agency buildings on Crow Creek not included in the opening order now promulgated.

Great excitement has been occasioned by the act of the executive, and a thousand people have rushed in to Chamberlain, Kimball and Parkersburg, and other points contiguous to the reservation, where they could overlook the promised land and outfit for a claim hunting expedition. The lands, as a rule, are fertile and adapted to grain of every kind, and under the skillful cultivation of the white man, will average as productive as any in Dakota.
