Remarkable Fortitude of the Patient - Failure of Cocaine as An Anesthetic.

New York Tribune. Dr. Thomas Dunn English, poet, lawyer, physician and dramatist...

Dr. English had been an inveterate user of tobacco since he was a boy. He both smoked and chewed it, and at night his sleep was not easy unless a large roll of the weed was in his mouth.

On March 10 a consultation was held by a number of local physicians, and Dr. Edgar Holden, a throat specialist, made a minute examination that was attended with great difficulty.

Dr. English was put under preparatory treatment until March 10, the time set for the removal of the tumor. On Tuesday Dr. English, knowing the dangerous nature of the case and the chance of a fatal result, calmly went through his papers and manuscripts and directed what disposition should be made of them.

One of the assistants seized the patient's tongue, which had been placed between layers of a towel, and drew it out of the mouth as far as possible.

The operating surgeon then placed a laryngoscope in the throat, pressing it as far backward as possible so that a good view of the tumor was obtained.

Precautions were taken before the operation began to guard against suffocation from temporary spasm, and a tracheotomy tube had been provided.

After the patient had recovered from the shock of the spasm, being told that the danger of the operation was greatly increased, he told the surgeons to "fire away; he would rather be suffocated in a second than pass another night like the last."

Mr. English speedily recovered from the shock, is doing remarkably well, breathes naturally, is able to take nourishment with little trouble and gives promise of a speedy recovery.

The General as He Appeared at the Age of Twenty-two. Philadelphia Press, March 14. George W. Childs will forward to-day to the address of Gen. Grant, in New York, a time-worn daguerreotype in an old-fashioned case.

George W. Childs will forward to-day to the address of Gen. Grant, in New York, a time-worn daguerreotype in an old-fashioned case. It is a picture of the hero of Appomattox as he looked when a young man 22 years old.

The history of the daguerreotype and how it came into Mr. Childs' possession is interesting. In 1844 Lieut. Grant was stationed with his regiment in Texas. Among his best friends at that time was Mrs. G. B. Bailey of Georgetown, Brown county, Ohio, the mother of the most illustrious associate and comrade-in-arms, Lieut. Bailey.

"Good sailors all smoke as a rule. A man who smokes as a general keeps a quiet stomach." "Theatrical managers smoke generally. I think, though I believe Lester Wallace does not. John T. Raymond doesn't use tobacco at all. Bartley Campbell never smokes. Art's dad, though, smokes a pipe."

Tom Ochiltree smokes like a house afire and smokes good cigars, too. I saw Tom nearly drowned once. Uncle Rufus Hatch nearly was on his yacht. Resolute, when Mr. Plummer and I were passing Mr. J. W. Wharton to come aboard. Tom fell overboard as they were coming out to us in a small boat, and in the confusion both he and Wharton were nearly drowned.

Gen. Grant never knew that the old daguerreotype had passed into the hands of his friend, Mr. Childs, and a week ago, when recalling the portraits of his earlier days with a view of securing the best possible likeness with which to illustrate his book, he remembered the old daguerreotype sent to Mrs. Bailey 40 years ago.

Certain portions of New Mexico abound in petrifications of various kinds. It is no uncommon sight to see trees three feet in diameter and fifty feet long petrified and often crystallized. The crystals are red, yellow, black or white - are often very beautiful, and would make handsome ornaments for eastern parlors.

Great Smokers Whom Actor William J. Florence Has Known.

"Now, your Turk smokes and drinks coffee, the one an antidote for the other," said Capt. Cattle as he entered his dressing room to don the every day habiliments of William J. Florence.

"Larry Barrett smokes a mild cigar. Sheridan smokes, too; he's been a soldier - captain in the Sixth Ohio. Nat Goodwin smokes, and so does Crane, but I don't know about Robson. John E. Wens likes a good cigar, and a very good one. For Ned Southern would get rid of a hundred cigars a week. He always showed one on a visitor, with brandy and water sometimes, and filled his own overcoat pockets when he went out. He was a fearful smoker, always had one in his mouth, burning it half way and then lighting a fresh weed. He and I imported our own cigars from the Raphael Diaz brand. The plantation seems to have given out now. For my part I like a Colorado or a Colorado Clara.

Louisville Courier-Journal, March 11. The city has not lost much by the decision of Judge Simrall in restoring to Mrs. Cope Snapp the house which her husband deeded to the city.

"Beyond doubt Cope Snapp was the shrewdest young scoundrel I ever saw," said a prominent city official yesterday. "When the investigation was begun he was not suspected, and was retained to assist Mr. Ferguson. It was found that he had every detail of the back tax collector's office at his fingers' ends. He was the best accountant I ever saw, and could add up long columns of figures with marvelous quickness and accuracy. He could add four columns of figures at a glance, counting from either bottom or top. The tax bills are very intricately made out, but he could make the summing up faster as they were read out to him. His audacity was no less remarkable. When his guilt was discovered he was equal to the occasion, and prepared a statement which had every appearance of fairness, and which showed the city to be in debt to Dave Ferguson to the amount of $75,000.

Immigration from the Old World. Chicago Times. "The oppressed of all lands are still arriving in this country in goodly numbers, though not in so great numbers as in more prosperous times. The number of passengers arriving at the principal ports during the month of February was 15,317. Of these arrivals, 2,907 were citizens of the United States returned from abroad and 1,331 were aliens not intending to remain in the country. The rest, numbering 11,019, were "oppressed" persons, seeking a permanent asylum in a land where they can help make presidents and themselves become members of congress and cabinet ministers and where they can twist the tail of the British lion at a safe distance from the jaws of that carnivorous animal, and breathe threatenings and slaughter against capital with impunity so long as they confine themselves severely to mere talk.

of passengers arriving at the principal ports during the month of February was 15,317. Of these arrivals, 2,907 were citizens of the United States returned from abroad and 1,331 were aliens not intending to remain in the country.

The number of these arrivals to stay was 4,884 less than in February, 1883, but it was enough. It was at the rate of 141,000 a year. We can assimilate, or control if we cannot assimilate, that number more easily than we could the 789,000 that arrived during the fiscal year 1882, but it is not particularly desirable to try to assimilate a greater number in any one year. Congress need be in no haste to act upon the advice of a New York paper, and appropriate $100,000 to pay for translating the wages report of the state department into foreign languages and distributing it all over Europe, with a view to inducing some millions more of the "oppressed" to hasten to our shores to engage in tail-twisting and communistic agitation.

As usual, Germany made the largest contribution in February. The number from that country was 2,712. England and Wales stood next, contributing 1,653. Next came the Dominion of Canada, 1,611; next Hungary, 1,072. Ireland sent only 762, and Scotland only 403. The total from Great Britain and Ireland was 2,834, or only 122 more than came from Germany alone.

OMAHA! A GROWING CITY

The remarkable growth of Omaha during the last few years is a matter of great astonishment to those who pay an occasional visit to this growing city.

Since the Wall Street panic May, with the subsequent cry of hard times, there has been less demand from speculators, but a fair demand from investors seeking homes.

The next few years promises greater developments in Omaha than the past 10 years, which have been as good as we could reasonably desire.

We have for sale the finest residence property in the north and western parts of the city.

North we have fine lots at reasonable prices on Sherman avenue, 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th streets.

West on Farnam, Davenport, Cumming, and all the leading streets in that direction.

The grading of Farnam, California and Davenport streets has made accessible some of the finest and cheapest residence property in the city, and with the building of the street car line out Farnam, the property in the western part of the city will increase in value.

We also have the agency for the Syndicate and Stock Yards property in the south part of the city. The developments made in this section by the Stock Yards Company and the railroads will certainly double the price in a short time.
