It s probable that the scheme will be effected, as nearly every prominent stockman in the northwest is in favor of it.

LIVE-STOCK LEGISLATION. The following bills relating to live tock interests were passed by the territorial legislature at the session just concluded:

A bill to prevent the introduction of contagious diseases among the cattle of the territory. A bill to prevent the branding of cat-east with cheap feed and shelter. As it rich, nutritious grasses everywhere to be found, makes this the finest stock coun-try in the world. To be sure, the thermometer does go down very low some-times, but its effects are scarcely ever felt by the animals, as the very dryness of the atmosphere is a sure protection against extreme cold. In a moist climate the low tendencies of the thermometer would be deadly to cattle, who could not protect themselves against the cutting blasts; but here, when the wind blows, there is nothing dangerous in it to stock, and the rarity of the atmosphere prevents the snow from crusting, which insures plenty of feed at all times.

WINTER GRASS. Cattle are wintered simply by being turned loose upon the free ranges, and cowboys watch trem from time to time, keeping them moving when a cold snap prevails. They attempt to "bunch" when it is very cold turning their heads inward, and in this way those in the center are crowded and crashed by others forming in a circle on the outside. The cowboys follow the city. Eight miningclaims were filed this herds, and are on the lookout to break up morning, all in the southwest quarter of bunching. Grass in Montana cures on the ground without rotting, and during the winter time is equal to the best hay. ken in Montana, and spring has come in There is plenty of it at all seasons of the lead earnest. The ranges being free and so vast in extent cattle owners can't tell, as a usual thing, how many cattle they have until the grand round ups each spring. The spring round-up is principally for the branding of calves, while the fall round up is held for the cutting out of marketable beeves. If there are any beeves fit for market at the spring roundup, which is certainly the case this year they are turned upon choice ranges until ready for shipment.

THE WATER OUESTION.

One drawback in the minds of many to the successful raising of cattle in Montana is the absence of water. This objection in time will be obviated by the sinking of artesian wells wherever practicable. There are many localities from Dakota to the Rocky Mountains where wells could be sunk at light expense, thus converting dry places into green pastures. Mr. W. D. Pegram experimented on the waterless plains near Billings not long since and by digging and boring obtained pure water at a small depth. . He then put up three wind mills and made large troughs to hold the water. The plan was a success, and now Mr. Pegram has several thousand head of cattle ranging on good gaass.

It has been discovered that in drinking from the vastready started for the vicinity of the rlous streams watering the different claims located and more will go to-morranges, cattle take in more or less alkali, which answers the purpose fully as well as salt. Thus, one by one all of the objections advanced have been answered. This year will see a big boom in the cattle business of Montana.
