HOOSIER LUCK STILL WINS

Indianapolis Gets a Game Through Sheer Good Fortune.

MAHA'S HOODOO WORKING FULL TIME

Blunders Made by the Fisher Family Come Just in Time to Give the Visitors Plenty of Runs.

Three days without play made the Baber dull boys and they dropped the first of the series with Indianapolis to the Hoosiers by the decisive score of 7 to 1.

We did not play our best-that is the sun and substance of it, and the result was that we were outplayed, outbatted, outfielded and outpitched. We made only three errors, but they were as good as a million, as they were directly responsible for five of the champion's runs. And then on several occasions we acted like a lot of dummies. Daub put up a nice twirling game, but he was wild at times and his gifts counted. When we wanted hits, too, we could not

The Hoosiers are good ball players and Colonel Phillips is something of a slab artist himself. They are not the biggest kind of pumpkins at swating the ball, as the best they could do was two in orly a single inning. Daub keeping all the other singles well scattered. If the Babes had been up to snuff we'd have had them on the run, and we'll get 'em yet, too.

When the Indians came up Hogriever was given a little lift on four wild ones as a welcome to the burg. McFarland sacrificed him to second and them Daub smashed Deady in the ribs. Both came home on a slashing single to left field by Hoffmeister. Motz went out from Holly to Lyons.

Preston died at first, but Fleming made single. Flem made a giddy dive for second, however, and was lammed out. Pick gave up his life at first. In the second round Stewart cracked out a long fly to Preston, who got under it just in time to let it slip through his hands as he held them full stretched over his read. Stewart squatted on third. Allen traveled upon the Eustace-Lyons route, but Stewart got home on the throw-in of Kahoe's long fly to Preston. Phillips died at first.

Omaha's Only Run.

In our half we made our lone little tally Lyons gave the grand stand a bit of a surprise by striking out, but Roat gave up with a cracking, corking, clean two-bagger between left and center. Eustace brought him home with a single, but was killed trying to steal second. Allen's wild throw of Holly's grounder into the bleachers le Ducky get to third, but he stayed there, for McCauley was an easy out at first.

That was our solitary score. Hogreiver came up in the third and banged out a single and was sacrificed to second by McFarland, but Deady and Hoffmeister both flied out to Preston, the fielder making amends for his error by making a beautiful catch of the latter's fly over his

We had a chance to tie the score in our end, but it availed not. Daub made a hit, got to second on Preston's fly and to third on the latter's being forced out at second by Pick's grounder. Pick stole second, but with two men so near home. Lyons flied out to McFarland. That was the very closest we got. Flem made his third hit in the sixth, but was put out trying to steal second again, and the next two went out. In the eighth Preston made a hit after two men were out, but he was left there. The remaining innings were one-two-three.

Hoosiers Gather a Stock.

Not so with the Hoosiers, however. The fourth and fifth were barren of re out one more. Deady got his base on Roat's muff of his short fly, an excusable Hoffmeister struck out. Motz advanced the runner with a hit, but was forced out on second on Stewart's grounder. Deady got to third. Then came a mighty fool play. Stewart started to second and McCauley tried to entice Deady in. Deady was dead willing to be entired. Holly caught the ball all right, but he did not throw it back home and Deady scored.

The star act of the Babes, however, oc curred in the eighth. Motz flied out. Stewart singled and stole second and Allen got his third base on balls. Then Kahoe plunked out a nice single into middle. Pickering fumbled the ball, and instead of trying to get the leather home to catch Stewart he fired it to third. As Eustace reached for it Allen bumped into him and tumbled him over. The ball sped into the tall grass and was lost, while all three of the runners came in. Phillips flew out and

For the general theme being "Heroism in early Methodist history.'

It is a very common practice with soap ap on state complaints are charged the same or laundry, are those in which the ingrediically combined. The perfect soap is a per-fect chemical combination of numerous in gredients. The manufacture of soap is like the making of bread, cake, or in fact like the making of most things found in the cook books.

In the hands of expert cooks some the most delightful creations for the table are produced from these cook books, while others, using the same ingredients, producresults that are very inferior. The expercook knows how much time, temperature and care has to do with a successful baking; the same is true in the successful manufacture of soap. It is true that in the average kitchen comparatively known about the chemical elements and the scientific relation they bear to each other in the culinary art, but the successful soap manufacturer must know all about chemicals, the combining and separating, the degrees of temperature under which thes manipulations can be properly conducted, and the influence time and care have upon every step in the process. It would never do to leave these things to guess work

To the student of household economics the study of the scientific manufacture of soal is extremely interesting. The writer, while making a call at the office of the Cudahy Packing company, was accorded by Mr. E Strauss, manager of the soap department, the privilege of witnessing a "batch" of various processes of manufacture; and, right here, let me say, that contrary to popular belief a well conducted soap factory is not necessarily an ill-smelling, dirty and greasy establishment.

Asked what the principal elements enter ing into the manufacture of soaps, Mr. Strauss said: "The most essential constitu-ent is pure, fresh tallow. Tallow that is poorly 'saved,' sour, rank or rusty tallow, while it will make soap, has lost much of its strength, and, chemically speaking. mixture is 'tallow short' or out of balance -resulting in a combination having much of the alkali element and too little of the tallow. Soap thus made cannot be good; it washes poorly, or by reason of too much alkali, injures the skin or fabric on

"Unlike other soap manufacturers, we have the great advantage of producing our own tallow. Being one of the largest producers of tallow in the world and having unlimited cold storage capacity, we naturally get it under the most favorable conditions. Where tallow has to be picked up from slaughter houses, meat markets, hotels, restaurants and such places it is utterly impossible to keep it in the best, or even fair condition, for it begins to deteriorate the moment it is cut from the animal. With us it is from the animal to the soap factory and in the form of soap. tallow never deteriorates.

'We manufacture a number of other products of every-day consumption have a very intimate knowledge of public discrimination. Soap appeals most particu-larly to women; they are much more observing than men, and a manufacturer who fails to recognize this fact will find that the popularity of his product will be short-The successful manufacture of a uniformly good soap, therefore, requires the tention always.

"There is one other reason why we cannot be too careful about the quality of the materials entering into our soap; it is on account of the tremendous competition. Ours must be superior or we cannot secure increasing patronage. There are a great many large producers of soap who have been in the business for many years. The consumer has been used to buying these brands—not all of them good, but all advertised as the the intention of the administration is to best—almost anything can be sold by adcompel all persons within a certain district to make sewer connections. The tailor's name on the back of a garment is not always the best evidence that you've got your money's worth. Perhaps you paid a fancy price for the tailor's name!

Imagination plays the leading part—when it comes to paying $45 to $60 for a suit and $12 to $18 for trousers, you imagine they're better—simply because you're paying more.

It's rather an expense, vanity this! Cost you about 25 per cent more than you ought to pay. The garments we offer you at $25 and $30 will stand the same close critical inspection—as the production of the high priced tailers.

that no other kind of laundry soap would be used in the United States. But while we do the best we can our advertising may exercise no greater influence over the average publi-than that of any other soap producer's. "Like other manufactured staples, be the quality ever so good, they will not find a market awaiting them-it can be secured only by the greatest effort. The marketing is as important as is the manufacture. This is where advertising comes in. We are under great obligations to the wholesale and retail dealers, but without the prospect of demand by the consumer neither will stock up; there consumer by means of advertising. it seems extravagance to spend large sums in extensive advertising, yet we do it with I reminded Mr. Strauss that considering that the Cudahy Packing company was the business of soap making only a little over a year it seemed to me that they had nothing to complain of on the score of success; that, on the contrary, very few of the older factories could boast of a more extensive patronage.

"It is true." Mr. Strauss went on, "that our success in the soap line has been re-markable, but such has been the history of all our other departments. I believe it is largely due to what is commonly called 'reputation.' Of course you know reputation does not come by accident and it helps like everything to have the confidence of the public. It was not by accident that we secured the highest award—gold medal—at the Nashville Exposition, under the severest test by the commissioners and in the face of the greatest competition by the other manufacturers; nor was it by accident that we secured an order, making the single shipment of soap ever sent to China from the United States, against the competition of the entire country."

It is truly wonderful to see the enormous kettles, holding 150,000 pounds to 200,000 pounds of soap, and watch the process of manufacture. From these kettles the soan is run into the "frames," where it is al-lowed to remain for several weeks, going through a process of cooling and curing. From these "frames" the soap is put into what is known as the cutting machine; here it is cut into regular sized pieces. From the cutting machine the soap is put into ventilated rooms, going through a further process of drying and from these it emerges ready for the final stamping, wrapping and packing into the neat, clean and attractive style in which it is known to the public.
