Judge Scott Caps the Climax of the Chienes Village Case.

INNOCENT VICTIMS MADE TO SUFFER

Meddlers Who Precipitate a Row Abandon Their Alleged Object and Leave Them to Bear the Court's Wrath.

The Lum sisters, Yup, Tue and Kim, three young Chinese girls who came to the city to appear upon the stage of the theater of the Mee Lee Wah village at the exposition grounds, were sent to jail yesterday by Judge Scott because they refused to ac-company and place themselves in the custody of a Miss Wykoff, who lays claims to being a missionary who recently returned from China. Later they were released by order of the United States court and are now under protection of the United States marshal.

Several weeks ago the proprietors of the Mee Lee Wah village brought some 200 Chinese men, women and children to Omaha for the purpose of representing the customs and methods of life in China. They came in under a special act of congress, providing for their admission. They were received by the customs officers at San Francisco and were sent on to this city. Upon reaching here, they were checked up by Customs Officer Miller, and their certificates were examined and found correct in every particular.

A couple of weeks ago, Wah Lee, a Chinese laundryman from Lincoln, arrived on the scene and at once interested himself in the affairs at the Chinese quarters, which were under the control of Hong Sling, Chinese agent for the Union Pacific Railroad company. Not long after this, Lee applied to Judge Scott for a writ of habeas corpus, alleging that in his opinion the three Lun sisters had been brought here for immoral purposes and that it was the purpose of the proprietors of the Mee Lee Wah Village company to sell them at the rate of $1,500 each, to be delivered in San Francisco. Upon this showing, the writ was issued and the girls were arrested by Deputy Sheriff Striker and conducted into court. The trial proceeded and evidence was taken, Miss Wykoff pushing the prosecution. Any number of witnesses were called and examined for the defense, but nothing was brought out to indicate that there was any attempt upon the part of Sling or his associates to sell the girls, aside from the testimony of Wah Lee, who swore that he visited the Chinese quarters and that while there, some person who was not in The action of Judge Scott was called to the authority, told him that the girls were for Right at this time Miss Wykoff discovered for the first time that she had bought more than she had bargained for. Notwithstanding this, she directed the officer to take the girls to the room she had provided. Obeying these instructions, Stryker took his charges up two flights of dark stairs and landed them to a dark, dirty dismal chamber, absolutely devoid of furniture, with the exception of a couple of wood chairs, a cot and a bed. The girls rebelled and refused to remain as prisoners in this place, which lacked a great deal of being as comfortable and commodious as the Chinese quarters of which Wah Lee and Miss Wykoff complained and which are located at Thirteenth and Chicago streets.
