City Clerk Phillips Shows a Queen Array for June. During the month of June the city treas ury was enriched by $316.40 collected for licenses issued by City Clerk Phillips to transients. Of this sum, $125 was derived from the license issued to the Sells-Forepaugh circus to show here one day, the balance, with the exception of $40, which a transient merchant paid for the privilege of doing business for eight days, was made up of $1 and $1.50 licenses. Sixteen licenses at $1.50 each were granted to peddlers to vend their various wares on the streets for a day, and ten licenses at $1 per day were issued to persons distributing advertising matter. Eleven persons were issued licenses orated for the occasion and plenty of good at $1.50 a day to conduct street games, such as knife racks, the most of these permits being issued the day the circus was in town. Eleven licenses for candy, peanut and lemonade stands were granted and they cost the grantees $1.50 in each instance for each day. A man who had a phonograph took out six permits for as many days at $1.50 a day for street exhibition of his talking machine. The sum of $21.50 in all was paid by a man for a license to conduct what he termed a "game of skill," but what is known as the "Tivoli game," and about which the only test of skill seemed to consist in the player being able to hand out the money quick enough for the proprietor to rake in. The game ran Thursday, August 18, 1898, at 11 a. m., a for about two weeks and then the stock of suckers was exhausted. Two newsboys took out licenses during the month for the privtiege of selling papers on the streets, making a total in all of eighteen permits that have been issued under the new ordinance. A man who had a dwarf horse paid $1 for a license to exhibit it on the streets for one day, but the license to exhibit the "hairy child" cost the proprietor of the show $1.50. man who came from Sixteenth street Offiaha, opened a show on Broadway which he styled the Parisian Beauty show, paid $4 for the privilege. This show had to close on the second day for want of patronage and the antiquated female in red tights was compelled to pack her grip and return from whence she came. The proprietor of the show where the oriental dances were to be seen by "men only" for an outlay of 10 cents, paid $1.50 for the privilege fo The licenses issued to peddlers show that the goods sold by these parties varied from cheese to balloons and canaries, but the majority were for spectacles and war and exposition badges.
