

CHRIST MUST BE THE KING

Nations that Worship Caesar Will Meet Destruction.

SPAIN ONE OF MANY EXAMPLES IN HISTORY

Dr. E. Trumbull Lee Points Out the Fate of Nations and Peoples Who Disobey the Teachings of the Great Ruler.

"Keep before our nation and our government the aim and end of this war," prayed Dr. E. Trumbull Lee of Cincinnati, who filled the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church yesterday. His prayer was in keeping with his morning sermon, the subject of which was "Falling Empires and Crumbling Kingdoms." The significant text chosen was that contained in the words of the Jews at the trial of Jesus by Pilate: "We have no king but Caesar." St. John xix, 15, and the theme uppermost in the discourse was the fate of nations when they choose "Caesar" instead of Christ for their ruler.

Augustus Their Only God.

"The name Augustus had never been conferred on any man until a truculent senate gave it to Caius Octavianus. Three hundred temples were dedicated to him until the people awoke to the awful thought that they had no other god. The cross they despised became a symbol that mowed down the pomp and pride of that athletic empire and not even the genius of a Marcus Aurelius could stay it. Out of the first twelve Roman emperors ten died by the hand of violence.

"O Rome, thou wouldst have no king but Caesar, and now thou hast no Caesar! King! O Jewry, descendants of Abraham, thou wouldst have no king but Caesar and now thou hast no king nor kingdom, and yet I have a pleasing dream of these people. I see a time coming when they will have a new idea of the rejected Messiah. I see multitudes of repentant Jews before Mount Olivet and before Mount Moriah, and I hear them shout exultantly, 'Away with Caesar; crucify him; we have no king but Jesus! Then will the mountains melt and the valleys be lifted up, and the millennium will be here."

Dr. Lee then reviewed the history of Spain and also France. He took the fate of these nations as a model for the period of Charles V for Spain, asking: "What did Charles V think of? Only the supremacy of the pope. How did he keep Charles great? Only by the ironclad, triple alternative of conversion, tribute or the sword. Spain's history has ever been characterized with the terrible monotony of this bloody alternative. How did he keep the power of the pope? By the agency of that fearful monster in human form, Torquemada, who in his short time slew 32,182 souls and tortured nearly 200,000 more. Spain is fallen, thank God. I know not what the future has in store for this insignificant empire, now confined to a corner of Europe, the gate of which is held by the English. It has chosen Caesar and it has got Caesar.

"And France—beautiful, giddy, profligate France! It also chose Caesar, and how often the streets of Paris have flowed with human blood! Bright, brilliant, brilliant, powerful Louis XIV had no other god but himself, no other dream than the glory of France. The kingdom passed to Louis XV, but it was like an apple rotten at the core. Louis XV was guilty of such awful crimes that the historian could not chronicle them. He was satisfied if only the empire survived him.

Warning Lesson to America.

An application was then made to America in the following: "I simply recall these things to show the fate of all who rule out divine kingship from human governments, and republics are no exception. Today, as I think of the flag of our beloved America, floating in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines and how easily our country raised an army and swelled its loan of $200,000,000 into a billion and a half—so eager were the people to support the hand of their republic—and as I think of the intelligence and great ideals of our people, of the carrying on of a war without any idea of conquest, of a nation detesting such terms of peace as makes Europe rub its eyes with astonishment, beloved, I see a danger here—I fear that we will say that by our heroism, our might, our genius, we have gotten the victory. "President McKinley the other day in congratulating Shafter concluded by a recognition of God, and an infamous paper came out and called that 'boast,' saying it was the weak emotionalism of an effeminate nature. Thank God for effeminate natures if McKinley is one! I fear, beloved, that when we have no king but the lordly American, we will see on the walls of our public buildings an inscription as on the wall at that Babylonian feast, the handwriting of divine judgment, 'weighed in the balances and found wanting,' and we shall sink into oblivion past the tombstones of falling empires and crumbling kingdoms. I long for a time when among the kingdoms of the earth Caesar shall be succeeded by Christ."

PREACHES TO OLD PARISHIONERS.

Dr. Van Antwerp again occupies the pulpit of Trinity Cathedral. Dr. W. H. Van Antwerp of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan, who was rector at Trinity cathedral in this city from 1864 to 1868, occupied the pulpit of his former church here yesterday. He was greeted by the congregation at both morning and evening services, the attendance at the former service taxing the seating capacity of the cathedral.

Dr. Van Antwerp still appears in good health, but his voice has weakened and he had difficulty in hearing him. At the conclusion of the services a great number of the worshippers remained to exchange personal greetings with him. On Tuesday evening he will be tendered a reception at the parish house, and on Friday evening will deliver a lecture on "Omaha of Thirty Years Ago."

The text of the morning discourse was: "Your Fathers, Where are They?" And the prophets, Will They Live Forever?" In the course of his sermon, based on this text, Dr. Van Antwerp said: "Our old testament heroes have their places well preserved in the book of memory. There is a difference between the heroes of the scriptures and the heroes of profane history. History paints all its heroes as great men. In the scriptures the heroes are painted imperfectly; they are shown in all their colors; all their weaknesses and their strength is displayed. The old time prophets were men living in dark ages. We see them stripped of all the accessories of grace and beauty, but in their rugged strength and in the earnestness of their latter days. "The old time prophets had faith in their mission. They had faith in God. They were men of faith and they were mighty through God. The character of these men was strong. They were men of heroic mold. Their hope rested on the promises of God. Theirs was not the heroism of the soldier. They covered another field of heroism, the heroism of patience, the heroism of small means to accomplish great objects. This is the heroism we find among our forefathers, the men who came out in the wilderness of the west and while they were setting up their tents for habitation they were also laying the strong temporal and spiritual foundations for their children and their children's children.

"The ideal statesman is the one who molds the thought of his people. Every Christian may be an ideal statesman in his own world, no matter how small it may be, by molding the opinion of those about us for good. We are the inheritors of all that has gone before us, and we should use our precious legacies for the good of those with whom we are thrown in contact. The doctrine of the conservation of energy and of force has its place in the spiritual as well as in the temporal world. There is no power that is lost. All power and force is conserved. The spiritual force of God's blessing is never lost. His word does not return empty.

"From the character of the prophets, from the character of our fathers, we gain great good. Their examples should not be lost upon us. What American boy today is not more inspired to deeds of valor in the present war because of the examples set by Washington, by Lincoln, by Grant? Every man is immortal until his work is done. We are living in an age of wonderful progress and development. The generations are moving fast out of the limitations of former generations, but with each step of progress come temptations to let fall our oars. Against these temptations we must zealously guard. How much more than ever should we now remember the prophets, the great law-giver of Israel, our forefather!"

AFFLICTIONS TEACH A LESSON.

Sorrowing People Should Find Remedial Course to the Bible. Rev. A. J. Turkle of the Kountze Memorial Lutheran church yesterday morning preached a sermon of "great comfort," based upon the scriptural injunction of the Savior, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." His remarks combated the rather prevalent sentiment that a sorrow should be kept holy, particularly such a one as is caused by the hand of death.

"There is more happiness than affliction in every trial that is sent to us," as there is more good than bad in the world. Yet adversities come unawares and not an hour passes, not a minute, that is not burdened with heartaches, writhings and groanings. Yet, while we are forbidden from taking the divine seal and interpreting the judgments of God, sorrow in itself is not good. Ordinarily it is supposed to sanctify, consecrate and purify. Nothing is less certain. All depends on the inner state of the one who suffers. It brings one to repentance; it hardens another. Despair will cause one to cast God out of his heart; it will oftentimes summon the living to new duties and result in a richer and nobler life.

"Life is not a failure because sorrow and afflictions come into it. All health is naturally discouraging, but if God be in it we need not be discouraged. He will abundantly make more of us in our shattered health than we could have made of ourselves in our robustness. Interrupted life plans appear to be failures, but when God's great plan runs on in our life without hindrance the consummation is success. It is only when God's chastening hand cuts into us that we learn to yield to him and learn that his design is to fit us for holier usefulness."

VICTORY IS THE GREAT REWARD.

Triumph Over Sin Should Be the Christian's Goal. Rev. E. Trumbull Lee of Cincinnati addressed the Young Men's Christian association in its room yesterday afternoon on the subject of "A Great Reward Offered." The address was along the general line of the patriotic services which the young men have been holding for the last few Sundays, under the head of "Volunteers Wanted."

for their services to the country—his a month for most of them, with long days spent in the trench watching the enemy, and nights in wet blankets with simple food of hard tack and coffee. But when we think of the honor they get after the victory is won and the stars and stripes are triumphant, we lose sight of their sufferings, and cannot help but think their reward is exceedingly great.

"For the Christian soldier, fighting manfully for Christ's cause, and in the great struggle between right and wrong, the reward is many times more beautiful. We must look for reward other than that of the life in which we live, of the glory which we will receive in the hereafter. Happiness and the satisfaction of filling our temporal wants are not the ends of our existence, although they may under some circumstances seem to be. It is goodness which should be the object point for our strife and struggles."

DIVINE LAW ACCOMPANIES CHOICE.

Supreme Being Shapes and Controls the Course of Man. The pulpit of the First Congregational church was filled yesterday morning by Rev. W. E. Todd of Creston, Ia., who preached on "Power of Choice." Rev. Mr. Todd considered the circumstances and influences which are brought to bear on mankind, and showed how potent the influence of a supreme and all powerful being is in shaping and controlling the lives of men. In the choice of profession and in the deciding of momentous questions of right and wrong, we are subject to unseen influences which shape our choice. Along side with this guiding power of heaven is the God-given liberty of choice. When Dr. Chaucey M. Dewey was asked in England if there was liberty in the United States, he said that there was, but that there was law along with it. It is so with the liberty of choice, it is accompanied by a divine law.

"Ever since the days of Adam," said Rev. Todd, "men have been placed in Eden and called upon to exercise the right of choice. Adam failed in his temptation, and men have failed since then, and will always continue to do so. Job withstood the whisperings of the tempter and remained faithful to his master even in the cruelest adversity. The premier of England was placed in a position where he was within his power to stay the slaughter of Christians in Armenia, but he failed to exercise his prerogative of choice. A greater man was placed where it was within his power to relieve a people who were suffering terrible oppression and the white wings of peace is hovering over us to tell how gloriously he chose.

"To every man God has given reason, and the power to think has led men to different beliefs and creeds. The Christians of the world hold many different beliefs. Different minds grasp truth differently, and cannot agree exactly. God has put it into the hearts of men not to impose their peculiar beliefs upon others, and faith in Jesus Christ is the ground upon which the different churches meet in common fellowship. There is the exercise of choice in religion, but God has proscribed a law which governs men of all faiths.

PRAYS FOR SPAIN'S REGENERATION.

Hopes It Will Profit by the Lessons of the War. Dr. A. F. Sherrill preached yesterday morning to the congregation of St. Mary's Avenue Congregational church on the text, "Keep His Word and Reverence His Sanctuary," found in I Kings, xix. He told of the melancholy life of Elijah, and his request to God that his life be taken and of the answer God gave, telling him to continue working and all would be well.

About the war he said: "When has there been a clearer indication of God's presence than there is in the present war? Spain's sin God also punishes those who have disobeyed His word and the Spanish nation, with its long and continued murders and butcheries, must sooner or later have reached its end. Now that Spain is so nearly conquered it is to be sincerely hoped that the grayed and wrinkled nation see the evil of its ways and become a nation of peaceful men and a Christian nation in every sense that the word implies. God's presence is not seen in the thundering and roaring of the cannon, the magnificence of the battle, but in the still, small voice which follows the noise and uproar of the strife."

OMAHA BOOTBLACK IN NAVY

Takes Part in the Defeat of Cervera's Squadron and Writes to a Friend About It. A characteristic bootblack's letter, descriptive of the great naval victory of July 3, has been received here. It is from William T. Hunt, who was formerly employed at the bootblack establishment of "Mogy" (Moggy) at the foot of the city. Hunt's fellow bootblacks, Hunt worked for "Mogy" for a long time, then went to Denver and at the outbreak of the war with Spain enlisted in the navy. His letter is as follows: "SANTIAGO DE CUBA, July 15.—(On Board United States Flagship.)—Dear Friend Jenn: I thought I would try and drop you a few lines. We have benched the Spaniards and made an observation ship of their noted Cape Verde fleet, otherwise known as the Spanish flying squadron, but they couldn't fly fast enough for Schley and his ships. They were good ships, but there was not the right kind of men at their guns, so you see they soon lost out. They can all be floated and sent to the States.

This is our yell: One, two, three, who are we? We are the flagship of the new navy. That's no lie, we are in it. Brooklyn, Brooklyn. Schley, Schley, Schley. From a good American sailor, WILLIAM T. HUNT.

MANY NEW VOLUMES ADDED

Omaha Public Library Completes a Year of Increasing Usefulness.

REFERENCE ROOM IS LARGELY ATTENDED

General Circulation Decreases, Which is Charged to the Residence Portion of the City-Growing Away from Library Building.

The report of the Omaha Public Library recently prepared for the year ending May 31 shows that the institution has passed an increasingly useful existence in that time. During the year 2,161 new volumes have been accessioned, bringing the books actually on the shelves to 47,880. In the same period 207,319 books have been drawn by borrowers, the high-water mark for one day being 1,500 on February 25. The most noteworthy additions during the year have been the following: "Life of Alfred Tennyson," Tennyson; "Jesuit Relations," volumes 8 to 18, Thwaites; "Life of William Morris," Vallance; "Master Car Builders and Master Mechanics" Association, Proceedings and Transactions," volumes 1 to 47; "History of Modern Poetry," Mather; "Temple of Deibel Babari," Neville; "Naukratis," and "Talis," Petrie. Through the efforts of Hon. David H. Mercer the sets of public documents, already extensive, have been almost completed. The library has also kept abreast of the times in the various realms of fiction, history, travel and the arts.

The reference room has shown an unusual growth and is now one of the most important departments in the library. It has accommodated 26,352 visitors during the year, an increase over the preceding year of 3,312. It has become the working headquarters of students in all imaginable fields, and is used constantly by different organizations in connection with the lecture room up stairs. Among these have been the Technical club, French history and child study departments of the Woman's club, English history class of the Young Men's Christian association, two classes in Epigraphy. There has also been a heavily increased pressure on the reading rooms, due especially to the war and the exposition.

Circulation is Decreasing.

While these departments show such an encouraging activity the general circulation shelves have suffered a decrease in patronage of about 2,000. This loss has been gradually increasing in the circulation department for a number of years and is attributed by the librarian to the fact that the residence portion of the city is growing away from the library, making its accommodations less accessible. It was pointed out that as the library was designed largely for the benefit of the city, it was to be expected that as the city grew and people for themselves this class was one which finds it an inconvenience to convey books back and forth.

The librarian says that in many cities smaller than Omaha there is a system of out-stations, to which books are taken and returned to residents in the sums of $2.50 or less. It is suggested that it might at some time be found practicable here. Such a plan was started several years ago, but was not thoroughly tried. There has also been some talk among those interested in the library of increasing its popularity by throwing its shelves open to the public. To do this, however, it would be necessary to rearrange the shelving with east and west corridors and to make an entire change in the system of classification. That now in use, the Perkins system, adopted in 1887, is not efficiently subdivided to allow the ordinary reader to locate the object of his search. The Dewey system, now generally adopted, offers the only practicable scheme of subdivisions for this purpose, being a decimal system readily understood by anyone. The report of the librarian just submitted for July shows a further increase in the use of the reading and reference rooms. The former has accommodated 3,942 visitors, an increase over the corresponding month last year of 265, while the reference room had an attendance of 1,569—141 in excess of one year ago.

NORTHWESTERN CUTS ALSO

Another Line Joins the Procession for Lower Chicago-Omaha Railroad Fare.

C. A. Cairnes, assistant general passenger agent of the Chicago-Northwestern, announces that the cut rate of $9.25 will go into effect between Omaha and Chicago, in both directions, tomorrow, August 9. Up to date there are three lines, the Milwaukee, the Northwestern and the Burlington, who signified their intention of putting in the reduced rates tomorrow, and there is no doubt but that the fourth Omaha-Chicago line, the Rock Island, will do the same.
