rest all concerned in the gathering and lock them up. Democrats Issue a Statement. For the democrats the following statement has been issued: The proclamation of Taylor is unwarranted in fact and in law. There is no insurrection, unless the presence of the militia and what they are doing constitutes an insurrection. But if an insurrection did exist, the governor has no power to adjourn the general assembly on that account or any other, except where the two houses fail to agree on adjournment.

It is signed by E. E. Barton and other democratic legislators. There is much doubt among the members of the legislature as to whether they will go to London at all. Some of the republicans left Frankfort during the day, declaring that they were going direct to London, but no democrat so declared himself. The words "London, Laurel county," are not words that please democratic ears. In fact, many of the republicans felt that it would not be safe after they reached the town. It is a place of about 1,000 inhabitants, situated in what is known as the "red country." The inhabitants are mostly mountaineers and largely of a most enthusiastic type of the republican faith. The county is one of the greatest republican strongholds in the state. The people of Laurel county are intensely for Taylor and intensely against Goebel and all his works.

Mr. Chairman— "Well," said that gentleman with a laugh. "Where is London?" "It is in Kentucky," yelled another voice. Democrats Get Angry. The good humor soon died away, however, and loud cries of indignation were heard from the democratic members. Then loud and sharp: "We are dealing with a pack of heathen and hounds. Let's go to the opera house."

Shouts of approval greeted this proposal and out of the door down the broad steps streamed the crowd, hastening along St. Clair street toward the opera house. Close behind came General Collier, by the run, he shouted orders to Lieutenant Colonel Gray, who was standing by the steps; a few quick orders were given by that officer and away toward the opera house rushed the soldiers. It was no parade. Every man went as though running to a fire. They ran up the middle of the street and easily displaced the legislators, who took the sidewalk and handicapped themselves by numerous posts. Boxes and pedestals filled the way. When the lawmakers arrived all they obtained for their run of a quarter of a mile was the privilege of standing on the opposite side of the street and gazing at the opera house, the front of which was occupied by a penting link of soldiers at double rank, with fixed bayonets. General Lyons, the oldest and most corpulent in the house, had, despite his physical drawbacks, managed to beat the soldiers and get into the hall. He was politely requested to come out, but he did with the remark, "I do not look as though a coroner will get in."

Thomas Heffer, the owner of the opera house, demanded that the members of the legislature should be admitted. It was private property, he asserted, and the militia had no right to keep anybody from it. He was completely ignored by Lieutenant Colonel Gray. Speaker Trimble stepped up to Lieutenant Colonel Gray and demanded entrance to the hall. It was refused. Turning around Mr. Trimble addressed the crowd. "Gentlemen, we are denied admission to the opera house. We will now adjourn to the court house."

Away went the crowd with good-natured yells of derision at the soldiers, who had orders to remain at the opera house, and could not leave. Soldiers Win Second Heat. The triumph of the lawmakers was abbreviated. Before they could get to the opera house around the corner swung a second company of soldiers directly in their path. The second heat of the race was now on and away went the dignified senators and representatives down the street in a cloud of dust, yelling like a pack of Indians. Alongside ran the soldiers. It was the same story over again, and the legislators were permitted to look at the outside of the court house, while the soldiers held the path. General Collier had arrived by this time, and Speaker Trimble, advancing from the crowd, said: "Don't shoot, general."

"I am not going to create any trouble. I won't shoot unless I have to," was the reply. "We wish to be admitted to the court house," said Mr. Trimble. Both men were smiling. "It cannot be done, gentlemen," said the general, calmly. This settled it for the time being, at least, and the crowd melted away, being held, however, to hold a meeting somewhere, and somehow, at a later time. Speaker Trimble announced that the legislature "will now adjourn subject to my call." The crowd had dispersed. It was decided by the military authorities if another attempt at a meeting is made to arrest it.

Insurance. One of them had a brown beard and if they will they can come forward and clear me. But I am not afraid, for I know I am innocent and that when the case comes up I will be cleared. They cannot convict an innocent man. They are afraid that I shot at Mr. Goebel and all there is against me is that I had the pistols, but if they arrested everybody in Frankfort who was armed, half the population would be in jail before the day was over.

Goebel Sworn in Governor (Continued from First Page.) He said, "and when I was asked to swear them in, there was nothing left for me to do but administer the oath of office. The proceeding was of course entirely legal and proper. I would not have done as I did had it been otherwise."

Discharges Adjutant General. Goebel as soon as he was assured that he was legally elected, gave orders for the prompt assembly regarding the military arrangement of the service. Two orders were quickly prepared for his signature, the first of which discharged Adjutant General Daniel Collier from office and appointed General John B. Catterman in his stead as adjutant general. The second was directed to the commanders of the militia now stationed in this city directing them to return to their homes. Word was at once telegraphed to General Catterman of his appointment and he is expected in the city tomorrow morning. There is a possibility of trouble in the matter of control of the state troops. The regiments of the guard have lately been reorganized and are for the most part made up of republicans and personal followers of Taylor.

They were drawn up last night in case they were needed in an emergency. No arrests have been made as yet, and no one is expected to be arrested in the near future.
