Prairieland Talk—

Custer Gals Study Stockpiles

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS, 4110 South 51st St., Lincoln 6, Nebr.

LINCOLN-Members of Woman's clubs in Cusless than a thousand dollars left after the expenses of operating farm or business were paid. Some reported a net take for the season of Shades of the pioneers of prairieland, who in the long ago on the prairies of Holt or Custer counties saw two thousand dollars in a life time. Drouth of 1956-it was a frightful season compared to those of the 1890's when hot winds burnt the grass roots, fruitless seasons out of which was born political unrest, the

Romaine

Saunders populist party, the likes of Omar M. Kem of Broken Bow, a spellbinder who swept this congressional district of "Republican rubbish" was elected to congress and on his first trip to Washington tipped the chaircar porter with a nickle. It was an age out of which shown Ham Kautzman's Beacon Light through the windows and open door of the First National basement in O'Neill. From the toil worn hands of the pioneer men and women of those days we have as a heritage the fruitful empire of Holt. And down there in our grass robed neighboring empire of Custer they will make a go of it with the season's take from year to year.

After the lapse of 20 years there may be some of them still down there in the Swan precinct. The democratic caucus was held at Art Doolittle's ranch home, but there being a scarcity of the disciples of Andrew Jackson in that grass-robed section of Holt county the ranks of the republicans were invaded to fill out the ticket. A full ticket was he result, as follows: John Kennedy, clek; A. C. Watson, treasurer; H. L. James, assessor; Will Crandall, justice of the peace; road overseers, Art Doolittle, Will Dierks, and Claud Lierman. . . Ray Bly had an early morning walk one Sunday back there in 1936-he had left his car in Amelia the day before for repairs and was hoofing it to the steering wheel eight miles away hoping to be picked up by some devout church goer driving into Amelia that morning. . . Other news items from Southwest Breezes a 1936 issue: Miss Neoma Greenwood returned to her home in Albion, after a visit at the Riley home. . . Miss Mildred Saunders was spending a few days in O'Neill at the home of her brother. . . A thousand head of cattle arrived at the McCarthy ranch, south of Inez, from the drouth stricken region of Bell Fourche, S. D., and were filling up on good Holt county grass.

Beverly Harvey and Virginia Marshall, two girl students in Hastings college, a Presbyterian educational institution, are there to fit themselves for the ministry. Ladies joining the ranks of the clergy may have been inspired to do so after reading the story of Hebrew prophetess Deborah of the 13th century B. C., as well as the two or three notable American women of modern times who became church leaders.

I heard them sing yesterday, four Negroes ter county come up with the story of their findings three young men, one young woman, each neatly in a canvass of the county to ascertain how hard dressed and with the bearing and marks of culture. the citizens' stockpiles of filthy luchre were hit by And the Negro voice is unexcelled in song. Maybe the rainless season of 1956. Of the reports receiv- one or more of those four lovely singers could ed it was shown that a little more than 13% had trace their ancestry back to lash driven slaves in a cotton field, on back to the days in southern Africa when men and women, fellow human beings, were torn from their tribal heritage, wife from her man, husband from the family, a mother from her child, iron rings placed about their necks and marched in a procession under the command of white overlords to the sea coast, from there to be shipped to a strange land and sold into slavery. From such and out of the hovels of "freed slaves" came the four with their sweet songs that I heard yesterday.

Sugar beet growers down in Dawson county gathered this season a large crop of beets that the American Sugar company of Grand Island has converted into sugar. . . In Allentown, Pa., where my grandsire uttered his first protest as a newborn babe in 1804, a business concern employs a woman to taste the foods in which they deal, one delicious dish being French fried worms. . . Six teenage guys broke jail at Plattsmouth and made their getaway, only to run into the legal arms of Highway Patrolman Lovegrove out by North Platte where they had stolen a car.

The news reporter up at Celia told us in a recent issue of The Frontier that 14 of the sisters connected with a religious group in that charming community of northern Holt county had congregated to prepare Christmas packages to send to children in Indian schools of South Dakota and to those in an orphanage in a distant state. A thrill may have come to those who read that bit of news from Celia, with the hope that the smile of celestial beings will rest upon those devoted women whose thoughtfulness brings joy to chil-

That foot of snow that blanketed the capital city that night of November 18 is slowly turning to water under the glare of today's noonday sun. The mistress of the mansion where I have quarters joined the procession of householders and scooped up a pan of snow to melt and thus have some "soft" water in which to dip dainty things. State Sen. Carpenter of the Scotts Bluff district says Nebraska assessors are "incompetent." Felt that way myself when as assessor during my five years sojourn down there I went about assessing ranchers in Wheeler county. One guy met with on my rounds apparently put the assessor in a similar classification-he handed me an onion as I left his door.

Your Eyes Tell Life's Span

your health. In fact, one physician says it is pos- bear. sible to look into the eyes and say with reasonable accuracy how long a person will live.

In any case, the visible condition of the blood vessels in the retina of the eye indicates the condition of the hidden blood vessels in your body. So J. D. Ratcliff explains in a December Reader's Digest article, "When the Doctor Tests Your Heart." The retina is a maze of tiny blood vessels. Dr.

Banks Anderson of Duke university calls it: "A screen, lustrous, high-lighted and vital in youth; dull and scarred in age. On this screen is projected the pagentry of the body economy." If the retinal blood vessels have thickened and hardened with age, probably the same thing is happening in the arteries of the heart. New diagnostic techniques have taught the physicians that "heart murmur" is not to be dreaded as it was. Once, many a child was put to bed as a heart cripple because the doctor heard such a murmur. Now, researchers have discovered that most children have a murmur of some kind. Often, it is just the sound of blood rushing through a busy-but normal-heart.

By means of X-rays, it is possible to look inside the heart itself. Opaque fluids can be passed through the heart chambers, providing a good X-ray silhouette. The electrocardiograph can measure the tiny electrical impulses which make heart muscles contract with every beat.

There are many other tests and a long talk with you about your symptoms and past illnesses is an important part of the examination.

The Digest article is condensed from Today's Health, a publication of the American Medical as-

Spending for Right Things

There has been a lot of ballyhooing since "sputnik" and those who once were shouting for economy in the matter of defense are now criticizing the administration for making cuts, which have largely been restored.

We contend that in spite of the Russian feat of launching a satellite and proving they have intercontinental missiles, there is still room for economy. We say that advisedly. Our future safety is not dependent simply or solely upon the number of dollars we spend, for Russia with her cheap labor will always be able to command the services of labor, both skilled and unskilled, at a cheaper

But we can practice economy by cutting our budget for the things that no longer count in the defense program. It is apparent, for example, that long range bombers are going to be supplanted by rocket-powered, unpiloted missiles. No reason, therefore, why we should continue to spend as much for the air arm as we did when we considered it our principal weapon.

And we feel there are many, many other places too where the old weapons are no longer

For the present, however, the strategic air | scriptions payable in advance.

Your eyes reveal a lot about your heart and | arm is the biggest single deterrent to the Russian

From our point of view, we think massive standing armies and much of the navy outlaythat is, the conventional equipment and installations-are rapidly becoming outmoded. Some tremendous savings can be effected to offset the costs of a scientific cold war.

It Isn't Worth It

Several close calls have been reported by motorists in the past month and the unus med fact is that these close calls have all been so similar.

A farmer will pick corn until after sundown and then pull the last load of corn to the farm after dark. If the route from the field to his farm is on a highway he is operating his tractor at a very slow speed on a thoroughfare that is also carrying some high speed traffic-even traffic moving 30 or 40 miles per hour is high speed compared to the rate of a tractor pulling a load of

Chances are 100-to-1 the corn loaded wagon does not have lights, so any vehicle coming from behind does not see the wagon until the last mo-

It isn't worth it. Life is too short to risk your time on this earth by driving down a highway with an unlighted vehicle at a slow rate of speed. Headlights on your tractor are useless for an auto or truck approaching your corn wagon from the rear.

Reed O'Hanlon of the Blair Pilot-Tribune feels there is a fertile field for an imaginative mind in developing little gems of fact for filler copy for newspapers. Some of his samples:
