Farm Home Damaged by Fire

O'Neill firemen were summoned at 7:45 a.m. Saturday to the Roy Boshart farm, about 11 miles north and east of here. A defective chimney was blamed for starting the early morning fire that damaged part of the upstairs and damaged the roof. Mr. Boshart sent his wife to call for help and battled the fire himself until neighbors and firemen arrived. He is pictured at an upstairs doorway where damage was greatest.—The Frontier Photo.

More About Idle Acres—

'Bid' Is Key to Trial Program

Nebraska is one of four states in the nation in which farmers will have an opportunity to make a dollars-and-cents "bid" per-acre which they are willing to accept for putting all of the cropland on their farms in the conservation reserve of the soil bank, Harry E. Ressel, chairman of Holt county agricultural stabilization and conservation committee announced Tuesday.

Under a limited trial program, supplementing the regular conservation reserve, county ASC committees will accept such "bids" from farmers on the basis of lowest acceptable offers, Ressel said. Bids will be accepted only on the eligible cropland on a farm put into the program for five to 10 years, he explained.

Farmers will be able to submit bids at the county ASC office 2½ months before the regular conservation reserve program closes.

Because they will be offering all eligible cropland on their farms for the "reserve" farmers who enter "bids" will not be required to have a soil base set for their farms, Ressel explained. Thus, farmers may go ahead and make their "bids" at any time between now and January 31.

According to Chairman Ressel, this trial program is being put into effect to enable the U. S. department of agriculture to evaluate the effect of the "bid" procedure in helping more farmers to divert all their eligible cropland from production to conservation uses.

Under the regular conservation reserve program, farmers are offered specific per acre annual payments for all or part of their eligible cropland put in the program. These rates will be available under the regular program which will be open for sign-up until April 15, 1958.

The conservation reserve is open to all farmers with eligible cropland, whether or not they have acreage allotments. To participate, a farmer signs a contract with his county ASC committee to divert a certain number of acres of cropland to conservation uses for three, five or 10 years. Under five and 10 year contracts, a cost-sharing program is made the year that a conservation use is established on the farm. Cost-share payments are not made under three year contracts. Under all contracts, annual per-acre rental payments are made each year the contract is in force and completed.

The trial "bid" program will provide the same cost-share payments for putting land into soil, water, forestry and wildlife conservation uses, but annual payments will be at the rate "bid" by the farmer, provided it is accepted by USDA.

Only "bids" putting all eligible cropland on the farm into the conservation reserve for five to 10 years will be considered.

Maximum annual payments, held to $5,000 under the regular program will be increased to $10,000 under the "bid" procedure to enable larger farms to participate.

Farmers with part of their land already in the conservation reserve may "bid" to put the rest of their farm in the program. If a farmer already has land in the 1958 acreage reserve, it will remain in that program until the end of the calendar year (1958) and then will become part of his conservation reserve if he puts all of his eligible land under the program through the "bid" procedure.

Chairman Ressel urged all interested farmers to get in touch with the county ASC office for further details of the program and "bid" procedure.
