'Outs' Plan Stormy Attacks on 'Ins'

Brooks Wants Debate with Anderson

LINCOLN — Skids are being greased for what could be a stormy fall election campaign. Delegates to the state conventions of both parties have been selected. The Republicans meet at Alliance Sept. 15, and the Democrats at Omaha June 21. The Democratic candidates named Frank Morrison, Frank Sorrell and Ralph Brooks, are expected to be victorious as they try to oust the Republican team: Sen. Roman Hruska, Gov. Victor Anderson and Lt. Gov. Dwight Burney.

Morrison is running against Hruska, Sorrell against Burney and Brooks against Anderson. Brooks has the widest known after dinner speaker and president of McCook Junior College, will probably attack Gov. Anderson on the basis of his stand on taxes.

The chief executive has called for better enforcement of assessments at the local level, stating that if these are not forthcoming the state will have to step into the picture and take control away from the local level.

Gov. Anderson said he is not for this approach. He would rather have local officials handle the local taxation problems, under an adequate set of state laws. Sorrell is expected to attack the statehouse administration in general.

Morrison, on the other hand, has indicated he is going to attack Hruska's record and what he terms failure to protect Nebraska interests.

The Democrats have a tough row to hoe. They lost percentage in the size of the vote in the primary, while the GOP piled up a wider margin than two years ago.

Gov. Anderson and Hruska are popular party leaders. This, plus the fact they are in office, are difficult obstacles for an "out" party trying to make the grade.

Democratic leaders have tried unsuccessfully to lure Gov. Anderson into a series of debates with Brooks. But the governor has declined, stating he would rather use the free enterprise available to every candidate—the press and advertising media.

Morrison has indicated he is going to get on the same platform with Hruska to talk about issues. Morrison did not use the word "debate" but referred to "joint discussions".

National Politics—A former secretary of the Navy and now financial chairman for the national GOP had a sharp analysis of labor and its connection with politics.

Charles S. Thomas of Washington, D.C., was in Nebraska on the second leg of a cross country swing to talk business with GOP finance committees.

Thomas said labor unions no longer are controlled by the laboring man, but are being taken over by "corrupt left-wingers".

These leaders, Thomas charged, are quietly and efficiently gaining control of Congress in a regular district, financing them and getting out the registrations to elect.

Thomas said he is touring the country to alert the businessmen that they must get into politics to save the free enterprise system, which he said the Republican party represents.

New Air Case—A new case before the Civil Aeronautics Board concerning local airline service.

This case is called the Kansas-Oklahoma case. It is separate from the so-called Seven States case under which Nebraska got service for 17 cities.

Service in the seven states probably will begin this fall. In the Kansas-Oklahoma matter, it probably will be a year or more, before the evidence gets before the CAB.

However, Nebraska will present its case July 15 to an examiner in Topeka, Kans. The state has recommended five routes. Major stops would include: Omaha to Lincoln to Beatrice, Topeka and Kansas City.

Omaha to Lincoln, Beatrice, Fairbury, Manhattan, Salina, Hutchinson and Wichita, Kans. North Platte to McCook, Garden City, Dodge City, Wichita.

Kearney to Hastings, Salina, Hutchinson and Wichita. Grand Island to Hastings, Manhattan, Salina, Hutchinson and Wichita.

Frontier, Ozark and Central airlines propose to serve on the routes. Proposals of the carriers will be presented later at a hearing before an examiner in Washington.

Rolland Harr, State Aeronautics Director, is enthusiastic about the possibilities of the new routes.

Grasshopper Control—No time should be lost now in attempts to control grasshoppers. That's the word from State Agriculture Director E. D. Hoyt. Hoyt said the hoppers are emerging in grassy areas in fence rows, waterways and pasture lands.

They will feed in the hatching areas for several weeks before spreading to nearby fields.

Spraying is advised now before the pests have a chance to move out of the hatching areas.

Hoyt said small hoppers are easier to kill and control takes much less time and insecticide than if farmers wait until the pests have made their migration from nesting areas.

Attend Reunion—Mrs. William Morgan of Arlington, Calif., is here visiting her sisters, Mrs. H. D. Grady and Mrs. Harry Harde. She had come to attend the 50th anniversary of her graduation from Atkinson high school.
