Patricia Wedge, Donald Bouska Are Wed in Church Rite

ATKINSON—At 10 o'clock Saturday morning, August 2, Miss Patricia Wedge became the bride of Donald Bouska in a double-ring ceremony.

The bride approached the altar on the arm of her father. She appeared in a soft flowing floor-length gown of Chantilly lace and tulle. The fitted bodice of lace over pure white satin featured a rounded neckline. The long sleeves of lace tapered to the traditional bridal points at the wrists.

The voluminous skirt had cascades of tulle ruffles completely encircling the skirt with a lace overskirt dropping to points about the skirt. The bridal veil was held in place by a beaded princess crown with a lace edge and three lace hearts across the back. They appeared in orchid waist-length dresses of nylon chiffon with a gathered drop waist bodice. They wore white miniature veils and white mitts. Letters to Editor People and Fish

Ewing, Nebr., August 1, 1958 How about equipping me with one of those underwater pens you told about on the "Voice of the Frontier" program that your reporters are using?

If you want to see water, come out to the upper Clearwater creek valley in the Goose lake country. We have water all over the place, covering the meadows. Some water is level with or running over the roads. You can get all the carp you want. They're swimming all over the meadows and around the hay stacks that stand like islands.

(The above letter was read on our Wednesday, July 30, "Voice of the Frontier" program, WJAG, 780 nc, 9:30 a.m. Two days later the following letter was received and was read on the Saturday, August 2, "Voice of the Frontier" program.)

Ewing, Nebr., August 1, 1958 Call off the people, please! We've had home people, people from as far away as Randolph trying to catch fish out here near Goose lake.

There IS water around the hay stacks and there ARE carp swimming around the meadows. But you can't catch, spear or pitchfork these carp because the water covers 360 acres and in places is five feet deep. So tell the people to quit coming because I can't guarantee fish.

Anyway, it proves you certainly have a wide area of listeners and a lot of them!
