Witnesses Heard in Traffic Death

Bassett Youth Tried for Manslaughter

BASSETT—Preliminary hearing for Marvin J. Reynolds, 19, of Bassett, charged with manslaughter in the death October 31 of Mrs. George Murad, 31, of Sioux City, was resumed Tuesday morning in Sioux City. Municipal Judge Berry J. Sisk presided.

The state Monday afternoon called numerous witnesses as it sought to build up sufficient evidence to have Reynolds held to the county grand jury.

Mrs. Murad died almost instantly as result of a car-cattle truck collision at S. Westcott street and Gordon drive in Sioux City.

An information charged that the youth was driving a truck tractor trailer at the time in a reckless and loaded with 36 yearlings, and spilled the cattle on the highway when the trailer overturned.

Mrs. Murad was on the way to work when the accident occurred. She was alone. The youth was driving a truck tractor trailer and the collision disconnected the trailer, loaded with 36 yearlings, and spilled the cattle on the highway when the trailer overturned.

A motion to dismiss because of insufficient evidence was overruled after Frank J. Margolin of Sioux City, defense attorney, said the state failed to show that the youth should be held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter.

The state called as witnesses Julia Peters of Moline, Ia., who was on her way to work and who was accompanied by a sister-in-law, Mrs. Janina Peters, also bound for work. They told of hearing a crash and seeing sparks at the scene. They testified that the youth was driving in the correct lane when he entered the intersection. They said they did not see the car before the crash.

Other state witnesses called included Walter Pence, who was headed south behind the Peters car; Patrolmen Robert Johnson and Joseph Banya, who answered an emergency call to the scene of the accident; and Ben Bernard, who assisted in the investigation. All are Sioux Cityans.

In answer to a defense charge that lights may have not been operating properly the morning of the accident, officers said that their mechanism was all right.

Roy Lanman, Mr. and Mrs. George Mellor and children and Mr. and Mrs. Bud Lanman and family of Verdel plan to spend Thanksgiving at Denby in the Jack Faulk home.

Lessons Learned on Santry Homestead

"New Fires", in three acts was presented Sunday and Monday evenings November 21 and 22 at the Ralph Brookhouse home.

The entire action of the play took place in the combination dining-living room of the old Santry homestead, located in the southern part of Missouri.

Most of the characters were dual, one taking part the first night and the other one playing the role the following night. Director was Sr. M. Josephine. Makeup artist was Larry Donohoe. Larry Tomlinson, Clarence Longcor and Gene Turner Lights were in charge of Larry Wanser.

Stephen Santry (Clarence Longcor and Brenton Wabs), an author, inherited a small farm in the Missouri Ozarks from an eccentric uncle. To attempt to teach and show his kin a different and meaningful purpose in life, he invited the family to the farm.

When Stephen offered the ultimatum that they must work for their food and clothing, things happened. Olive (Carmen Meusch), his daughter, feigned sickness. Lynn Gray (Doug Wallbaum and Larry Tomlinson), a young eligible doctor, was called. He figured out the pretense. Just as she threatened to hitchhike back home to Chicago, Mary Marshall (Dee Anna Dunn), a neighbor girl, developed scarlet fever, which quarantined the household for a month.

Two servants, Lucinda (Mary Lu Zirnig and Joan Shoemaker) and Suzanne (Mary Lou Connot and Ellen Lohaus) were not in the house and, therefore, were not quarantined.

The family had to shift for themselves. With time to think, Dick (Gene Turner and Ed Gallagher), the son, unfolded an idea for a highly specialized business. He was aided by his wife, Eve, (Renae Hoffman and Rita Jansen).

When Sid Sperry (Charles Mahoney), the farm hand, told of Doctor Gray's car plunging off the end of a bridge, Olive realized that she loved the doctor. Anne, (Connie Heelan and Jacque Arbuthnot), Stephen's wife, came to realize the need of her sympathy in his career.

At the end of the visit, each member of the family returned to his home with broader and more intelligent view of life.

Others taking part were: Jerry, Sid's son (Gene Schneider and Larry Donohoe); Billy, Stephen's son (James Carr); Mrs. Marshall, Mary's mother (Mary Thompson) and Angie Sperry, Sid's wife (Theresa Prhill).

Between acts a trio composed of Larry Wanser, Gene Jlig and Ronnie Clark sang "Bidin' My Time" and "Wake the Town and Tell the People". The boys' choir sang "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home", "Vive L'Amour" and "Carillon Song". The musical director was Sr. M. Michael.

At the age of four, he came with his parents to Antelope county and the vicinity of Royal, where his parents homesteaded about a mile east of the present village.

He spent his childhood and attended rural school in what was known as the McClean school. Later, he attended Gates college in Neligh where he studied music. He stated in an interview several years ago that he had previously studied music by himself and could play every song in the hymn book before receiving instruction.

When about 15-years-old he was asked to play the organ at the Methodist church in Royal, and for 50 years or more he continued to assist in the choir of this church. He also took an active part in community programs until advanced age made it impossible for him to continue.

Friends of earlier years speak of his "beautiful tenor voice."

Though music dominated his life, it was a sideline to agricultural pursuits of gardening and horticulture.

He was married to Miss Nellie Reed, a Royal teacher, September 8, 1915. They became the parents of three daughters and a son. They lived on a farm east of Royal, adjoining his father's homestead on the south.

Later they moved to the old homestead where they lived until nine years ago when they moved to Royal, where Mr. Storm had built a house when past 70 years of age. He continued his gardening and planted an orchard.

Survivors include: Widow — Nellie; daughters — Mrs. Emil (Genevieve) Klabenes of Chambers, Mrs. E. E. (Frances) Blackmore, Mrs. Dale (Irma) Weber, both of Royal; son — Forrest of Royal; brother — Frank Storm of Royal; sister — Carrie Abdalla of Royal; 12 grandchildren.
